N. E. O. P. NOTES.

Elm Tree Degree Team Initiated Class of Candidates.

On Thursday evening Grand Guide T. Miles Payne and a party of twelve local Neopians paid an official visit to Elm Tree lodge, N. E. O. P. at their lodge room in New Haven. Initiation ceremonies were performed on a class of candidates by the famous Elm Tree degree team. This team is comprised of twelve men as this is a male lodge, the second largest in the order, nearing 1,000 members. The degree master had given them excellent military training and as the different movements were executed rounds of applause rewarded them.

An effort is to be made to bring this crack team to Waterbury in the near future and as the grand warden has expressed his willingness to defray expenses, no doubt the local members have a rare treat in store for them.

In addition to the Waterbury members they also entertained the grand lodge officers as well as Past Grand Warden D. J. Sullivan of Riverpoint. R. J. Lunch was enjoyed and the trip home was most mirth provoking as these members are planning and enjoying these events at all times.

Friday evening Sheridan lodge, N. E. O. P. held an unusual instructive meeting in Columbus hall. Questions which were perplexing the members of this lodge, the largest in the city, were taken pro and con and resulted in an interesting debate, thereby bringing the subjects before the lodge in an intelligent manner. All profited by the remarks of Warden William Dinneen and Secretary Timothy Garren, both members of long duration. Two applications were received and one candidate acted upon.

They received an invitation from Anchor lodge, N. E. O. P., to hold a successful celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of the order. In response to a circular received from the supreme warden, F. T. Peabody of Melrose, Mass. they have signified their willingness to assist by arranging for a class initiation to be held November 19 at Speedwell hall. The local lodges have been invited to furnish candidates, although the members of Anchor lodge are striving to surprise not only their own members but the members at large. Supreme and grand officers have been invited and no doubt many will accept as Anchor lodge is a royal entertainer and the opportunity to be their guest is always welcomed. All members of the order are cordially invited to be present.

On Monday evening of next week Brass City lodge, N. E. O. P., expect to entertain the grand lodge officers. While it is hoped the grand warden, F. H. Tolles, would be present, but owing to a public meeting at Danbury it will be impossible. A member of the grand finance committee, Brother Cashmore of New Britain will be heard instead. All members of the order are cordially invited to attend.

SLANG OF THE SAILOR

The Lingo That is Used by Uncle Sam's Bluejackets.

MANY QUAINT EXPRESSIONS.

The Man-of-war's Man May Be a "Snowdigger" or a "Sloper," but He Uses the Language of Every Other Sailor.

There is a language that is neither English nor American, down east nor southern, western nor Yankee. It is just sailors' lingo.

No matter what part of the country may be the birthplace of a bluejacket or what his language at home, sooner or later he uses the language of every other sailor.

To the civilian a conversation between two bluejackets about his life on shipboard is hardly intelligible. The other day on the water front two sailors were overheard talking, says the San Francisco Bulletin.

"Oh, he's nothing but a beach comb'er. He was run up for breaking it once and got sent to the pie wagon," said one of them.

"I heard he got six months and a bob before he come here," replied the other.

A small boy standing near asked what all those things meant. The sailors were in a good humor and explained.

"Beach comb'er," lad? Why, that's a fellow who hangs around a saloon ashore and never wants to work.

"Breaking it" is staying overtime on shore, and "run up" is brought to the mast for offenses. The "pie wagon" is the place where they put prisoners, and "six months and a bob" is sentenced to six months in prison and given a dishonorable discharge.

There are many other terms and expressions that do not show their meaning on the surface.

A "rookie" is a recruit. A man who "ships over" enlists again. A man who is on the report for mast call is "down for a chance." Canned beef is known as "canned Willie," and a bottle of liquor is a "dog." All things lost on shipboard are put in a room called the "lucky bag." An honorable discharge is "a big ticket," and desertion by a sailor is "jumped." When the mail arrives on board and is ready for distribution "mallo" is the cry which carries the news. A ship's carpenter is called "chips," a coppersmith "coppers," a blacksmith "blacky" and the chief of the engineering department "the chief."

When a ship is traveling at sea it is "seagoing," and if it hurries it is "making knots." A prison on shore is a "stone frigate." When a man is disgraced to a lower rating he is "busted," when he deserts and voluntarily gives himself up within a period of six months he is a straggler; when he is sitting next the dealer in a friendly game of "draw" he is "under the gun," when he is continually quoting the naval regulations he has "swallowed the blue book," and when he thinks he knows more about the blue book than the captain, he is a "sea lawyer."

"Pipe down" means in American slang "shut up." "Put in his oar" is "butt in." "Shove off, Jack," is a hint to move on. When a man is dishonorably discharged he gets a "straight kick." A sailor who draws more pay "draws more water." One who talks too much "blows off at a low pressure."

Wednesday afternoon, when the crew overhaul their clothing, is "rope yard Sunday." Any part of the United States is called "God's country," and the man from the eastern coast is a "snowdigger," while his brother tar from the west is called "sloper." The duty of calling the men in the morning falls to the master at arms, and he says "show a leg" or "rise up and shine." When a man has had no night watch and gets up in the morning with a good appetite it is "all right in and beans for breakfast."

One of the more familiar sea terms is "caught a crab," meaning caught an oar in the water. When a sailor has several enlistments to his credit he is called "a sea dog" or "an old salt."

A gentle hint from one sailor to another that he does not believe something which is being told to him is "tell it to a marine." To re-enlist is to "slip over," and when more than half the enlistment is in a sailor is "going downhill."

CITY NEWS.

Not Wanting a Job. When Gladstone was chancellor of the exchequer, one day he was in the shipping department of the government office getting some information and figures for the coming budget. While thus engaged a Sunderland shipowner called to see Mr. Lindsey, the then member for Sunderland.

While waiting for Mr. Lindsey to come in the shipowner got his eyes on Mr. Gladstone and was watching him closely. After doing so a little while he thus addressed him:

"Thou seemst a good writer and clever at figures. I'll give you £100 a year, and that's an offer thou'nt not get every day!"

Mr. Gladstone thanked him and said he would see Mr. Lindsey.

Just then Mr. Lindsey entered. Then Mr. Gladstone told Mr. Lindsey of the offer his friend had made him.

Mr. Lindsey said it was a very good offer, but he did not know if Mr. Gladstone could be spared. Anyway he had better introduce them. Turning to his friend, the shipowner, he said, "Allow me to introduce you to W. E. Gladstone, chancellor of the exchequer—Mr. So-and-so, Sunderland." The amazement of the shipowner cannot be described. The Grand Old Man laughed immoderately.—London Answers.

A Wonder. Bill—is he clever with his pen? Jim—Very. Why, he can hold his fountain pen behind his ear without getting ink all over his cheek!—Yankee Statesman.

A clever man turns great troubles into little ones and little ones into none at all.—Chinese Proverb.

THE MUSIC WATER.

And the Great Things That He Meets in His Defeat.

What a puzzle music must be to those unfortunate people, stricken with spiritual ecstacy, to whom the art is no more than so much sound and fury, signifying nothing! They know that to others it constitutes a whole world of experience, yet are themselves excluded from that world by an insuperable barrier. They must take it on faith, as the color blind must take the rainbow and the sunset.

If they are honest with themselves they will admit and lament this defect of sense, accepting the unavoidable, gazing wistfully at the walls that separate them from a realm of whose glories they know from trustworthy report, but into which they may not enter. Sometimes, says the Dial, they are not honest with themselves, averring the very existence of the realm to be a fable and those who claim its franchise to be self deluded, finding realities in what are but vain imaginings. They allow music to be sound more or less agreeable, but they stoutly deny, although in the face of an overwhelming mass of testimony, that it has any spiritual meaning.

The province of music is the entire emotional and spiritual life, and the intellect, although a necessary philosophical concept, is no more to be caught by itself than those equally necessary abstractions, the perfect pendulum and the economic man. Science comes nearest to being pure when it takes the mathematical form, but we cannot forget Kepler's spiritual exaltation in contemplation of his laws of planetary motion, and we may also recall what Abt Vogler thought about the whole matter—

The rest may reason and welcome. 'Tis we musicians know.

What are "the substantial of life?" Science is certainly one of them, but there are at least three others—art, ethics and religion—and if we allow that the one is only here and there touched with emotion the other three are surely suffused with it through and through. And the relation of music to all three of them as surely needs no argument in its proof, for music is itself an art. It is a potent influence upon character, and it is of the very essence of religion.

But, being as much more than sound as poetry is more than words printed in black ink upon white paper, the character of music as an art is beyond cavil, and any likening of its effect to that of food upon the palate is supremely ridiculous. There are many, indeed, who would go so far as to call it the highest of the arts, holding with Fater that every art "constantly aspires toward the condition of music," which is "the true type or measure of perfected art."

If the philosophers are right when they urge that sympathy is the foundation of the moral life, what more remains to be said in behalf of music as an effective influence upon conduct? The great composer, beyond any other artist, takes us into his intimacy, imparts to us the contagion of his spirit.

What Gluten Is. What is gluten? Well, spend ten minutes and find out—not all about it, but something about it. Obtain a heaping tablespoonful of white flour. Add a little water to it in a saucer and dough it into a compact ball. Turn on the tap in the sink and let the water drip from your hands as you roll the ball between your palms. The ball will grow less and less, and the water will be white with starch cells held in suspension. In ten minutes, more or less, the water will run clean and clear and you appear to have a nodule of yellow, firm, vegetable gum, which you are tempted to call "pure" gluten. Become a gum chewer for once and keep a-chewing for a couple of hours. At the end of this time the quantity of gluten is less than when you took it from the hydrant. What has happened? You have simply mechanically crushed and broken the gummy mass, exposing the infinitesimally fine starch cells to the moisture of the mouth and the washing out of the raw insoluble starch has continued, just an extension of the sink washing process, with greater mechanical elaboration to expose the entangled starch cell. Now take the piece of gluten to an analytic chemist. When his report comes in you read "starch 15 or 18 or maybe 20 per cent, gluten 85, 82 or 80 per cent." and begin to appreciate for the first time what real gluten is.—Scientific American.
