Five Strong Reasons for Fall PAINTING.

- 1. In the fall, the surface is thoroughly dry. During the spring a surface which needs repainting is sure to contain moisture and dampness or frost, and it cannot be successfully painted until it has thoroughly dried out.
2. When the wood is dry, it absorbs more of the paint. The paint penetrates deeper into the wood, therefore gets a firmer hold on it, giving the paint coating greater tenacity or holding qualities.
3. Paint cannot be applied as successfully in damp, cloudy or unsettled weather as in warm, sunny weather. In the fall the weather is more settled and uniform and is warmer, therefore it is an excellent time for painting.
4. A house needs its protecting coat of paint more in the winter months than at any other time. A house, in need of repainting should never be allowed to go over the winter without this protection.
5. It is easier to keep moisture and dampness out by applying a coat of paint when the surface is dry, than it is to get moisture or dampness out of the wood when you want to apply paint.

dows and allow fresh air to enter. Fill drawers and place on shelves powdered cedar shavings; this gives a fresh odor and is a protection against destructive invaders. W. C. M.—Kindly tell us the points of pure bred Buff Rock chickens, especially as to color of legs and feathers on them? Must the flock show uniformity in these respects? (2) Also describe the method of propagating roses from slip and subsequent culture?

A. I do not find this breed of fowl in any book at command. Buff Cochins are a variety of the Cochon fowl of which both cock and hen are of a uniform buff color. Buff rock would indicate a cross between two breeds, in which it is not likely the color would be uniform. Some poultry journal can give you information on the subject. (2) Some varieties of roses are easily propagated by cuttings, the sole requirements required being good soil and plenty of air and water. Other kinds are less hardy and would not be likely to thrive.
