President Butler of Columbia university wants $100,000,000 for the establishment of a "culture trust" in New York. There can be no doubt but that city needs it.

The democrats are not the only ones who are mourning the election of Mr. Taft. The Rough Riders of all politics have seen their fate sealed by the retirement of Mr. Roosevelt and they will have to go way back and sit down with those once favored people who came from Canton, Ohio.

International affairs, which have been disturbing, are now more settled than for several months, says Banker Clews. The deaths of the emperor and dowager empress of China fortunately produced no crisis and none is expected. The reproof which has been administered to the emperor of Germany, unpalatable as it may have been, will work for the peace of the world, which more than once has been seriously threatened by his indiscreet utterances.

A rather severe arraignment of American foundry work was made in the course of an address on October 31 by Herbert Pilkington, re-elected president of the Sheffield branch of the British Foundrymen's association. Mr. Pilkington remarked that what the Americans excelled in was "standard specifications of all sorts," and intimated that the actual work in the foundry was not of so high a type. It may be true, says Iron Trade Review, that our castings are soft, but if so they are made thus because it is easier to remove metal from them. If the American foundryman wants higher phosphorus and harder castings, he can meet his pig iron requirements without going beyond our borders. He does obtain and use as much high phosphorus iron as he desires. There is a measure of hope for us, however, since we observe that when Mr. Pilkington finished paying his respects to our ores, pig iron and castings, he turned on the British foundrymen, assuring them that they were ignorant and that he had no hope of much alteration until a new generation should arise. Perhaps we may come out ahead after all, for certainly we still have hopes of the present generation!

The national grange after a session of a week in Washington has adjourned. Toward the end of the meeting it adopted a resolution demanding the introduction of the parcels post on rural routes and also of its universal extension. Another resolution was adopted asking for the establishment of postal savings banks for the benefit of farmers. These are measures that have been recommended by Postmaster General Von Meyer and by his predecessors for twenty years, says a Washington writer. The parcels post has long since been in use in European and even in Asiatic countries. If the United States were an effete monarchy or an oppressed despotism we would long since have had the parcels post here but being a free and independent government of a senatorial, congressional and other bosses in the pay of the interests, and having a senator from New York representing the express companies of which he is president, on the floor of the senate, and having a powerful express company lobby with its pockets bulging with ill gotten gains ever present at the Capitol, we must be content with our vaunted superiority in name over the effete monarchies and despotisms. The recent postoffice deficit was seventeen millions. The postoffice establishment, spending nearly two hundred millions, brings the country in debt seventeen millions a year. The establishment, well managed in a business like way and doing the profitable work that the express company fleches from it, would bring the government yearly enough money to build a half dozen Dreadnoughts and would at the same time furnish all of the people of the United States a vastly superior service. With thirty thousand rural routes, nearly all of them supplied with a horse and wagon, the small amount of fifty-five pounds a trip would wipe out the deficit. The national grange has passed a resolution to oppose senators who oppose the parcels post delivery.

HEARD IN PASSING.

Can it be that Nat Goodwin is ambitious to show that he can beat Lillian Russell's matrimonial record? It will be strange if the Outlook next year does not have some articles on the betterment of conditions in Africa.

A Chicago policeman who instituted a raid and then failed to recognize a faro layout is going to be discharged. In this case as usual, innocence is its only reward.

Rumor says that the Princess de Sagan formerly Countess Castellane and still more recently Anna Gould is going to get a divorce from her present princely husband. As she married the prince to spite the count she may now be contemplating remarrying the count to spite the prince. "Ain't it awful Mabel?"

John Morehead, congressman elect from North Carolina says his election was betrayed him by effecting his election when he understood distinctly that he was to be an "also ran." But he need not mourn. No one in Washington will pay any attention to him, and except for answering his name at roll call Uncle Joe will see that he has nothing to do in congress.

THE GUILLOTINE.

It Was Not Invented by the Man Whose Name It Bears. In a book published by Hector Fleischman in Germany the story of the origin of the instrument of execution which was named for Dr. Guillotin in the days of the reign of terror is fully denied. "There is no truth in the story, so long believed," he says, "that the genial old physician invented the machine which was named for him and by means of which he is said to have lost his life shortly after its adoption. Guillotin, in keeping with the spirit of his time, proposed on Oct. 10, 1789, that all offenders, regardless of their birth or station, should be dealt with alike by the law, and six months later he proposed to the government that convicted murderers should be beheaded by means of a simple apparatus. The mechanism of which he and no one else had any idea at that time was spoken of as the 'simple apparatus' by the humorists of the day, and the phrase was used to make its proposer ridiculous, so that when a machine finally was adopted the wits of the time named it guillotine. The government, evidently recognizing the value of the suggestion, asked one Antoine Louis, a surgeon at the Salpêtrière, to devise a machine and later gave a similar order to a carpenter by the name of Guillon, who offered to construct an instrument for decapitation for 5,000 livres. This was considered too high a price, and the contract was given to a German cabinetmaker by the name of Tobias Schmidt, who received 824 livres for the accepted model in 1792. Schmidt made guillotines for all the provinces, and the industry brought him a moderate fortune, which he proceeded to squander in Paris, while Dr. Guillotin, who never had anything to do with the making of a machine which bore his name, continued to practice his profession quietly and unostentatiously in Paris until he died there on March 26, 1814."

MIXED THE SIGNS.

Sarasate and the Sandwich Men in Edinburgh. To advertise Sarasate's performances in Edinburgh eight sandwich men were sent out, each of whom bore in front and behind him one letter of the great musician's name. They started all right, but after a time removed the boards from their shoulders to have a rest.

On resuming their labors each man shouldered the board nearest him and fell in behind the man who had formerly marched before him.

When the leader, who bore the initial "S," turned around to see if his men were ready, what he saw was "Sarasate." He knew enough to realize that something was wrong, but how to right it was more than he could tell.

After changing a man here and there he got it "Sarasate." But still it didn't seem correct.

By this time the poor fellow was in a terrible state. If any of their employers' people were on the outlook and could see them, their day's wage would be stopped! He tried again and yet again, but it was no use.

And a moment later a man bearing the letter "S" before and behind was seen running toward the music hall to copy down the name from one of the posters there. And along the right side of Princeton street there walked toward the appointed rendezvous at the Mound three men who bore the strange device "A A E," while opposite them there paced along the left side gutter four others, who, if to advertise means to attract attention, succeeded well, for every one who passed looked around in wondering amazement as to what "Rats" meant—Edinburgh Dispatch.
