

ALAMEDA FINDS THE PACIFIC OCEAN SMOOTH AS TRADITIONAL MILLPOND

Liner Arrives From Honolulu With Two Hundred and Sixty-One Passengers Who Find Being Cradled on the Deep Without Any Rocking a New and Very Pleasant Experience in Sea Voyaging

UNITED STATES MONITOR WYOMING AND THE TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYERS PAUL JONES AND PREBLE, WHICH ARE SLOWLY MAKING THEIR WAY BACK FROM PANAMA. THEY HAVE LEFT SAN DIEGO AND ARE EXPECTED TO ARRIVE HERE SOME TIME TO-DAY.

The Alameda brought 261 passengers, of whom seventy-nine were Japanese. Rev. E. W. Thwing, a passenger, who has spent many years as a missionary in Korea and Japan and who talks Japanese like a native, translated to the Japanese the war news in the papers taken on board by the pilot.

The Alameda brought 261 passengers, of whom seventy-nine were Japanese. Rev. E. W. Thwing, a passenger, who has spent many years as a missionary in Korea and Japan and who talks Japanese like a native, translated to the Japanese the war news in the papers taken on board by the pilot.

Many prominent Honolulu people came up on the liner, which brought a full cargo. Her passengers included the following named: Mrs. A. B. ...

Two Overdue Accounted For. The names of two of the vessels quoted for insurance were taken off the board yesterday. The German ship ...

Notice to Mariners. Columbia River inside bar buoy, page 28. No. 91 of List of Lights and Buoyage reported temporarily withdrawn, was replaced May 16, and the first-class nun buoy marking its position was discontinued.

Shipping Intelligence. ARRIVED. Monday, May 30. Stmr Iwaco, Lefingwell, 3 hours from Honolulu Bay.

Advertisement for Union Gas Engines, featuring an illustration of an engine and text describing its features and availability.

PAINTER'S FACE IS TINTED GREEN BY ANGRY EMPLOYER

Climax of a Contention That for Two Consecutive Weeks Had Annoyed the Housekeeper of the Domicile on Broderick Street Wherein the Renovators Held Sway

For two consecutive weeks the domicile at 914 Broderick street had been in the hands of the renovators, and during that period the temper of the chateleine, Mrs. Clara Travis, was severely taxed. To say nothing of the chaos that confronted her eyes wherever they turned, her ears were almost constantly assailed by an exchange of unlovely language between the boss painter, Ed L. Landregan, and his subordinate, Aaron Cohn.

Mr. Landregan was before Judge Mogan yesterday on a charge of peace disturbance and Mr. Cohn was the chief witness. "He had been growling at me all day," said Mr. Cohn, "and at last he slapped my face with a brush filled with green tint and shoved me out of the place. The brush made this scratch in my nose."

Mr. Cohn's story was corroborated by Mrs. Travis, who said she saw the paint on the wall. They were seated in the parlor, having a quiet conversation, when sounds of conflict in the dining-room were immediately followed by the hoarse emergence therefrom of Mr. Cohn, who was being dragged toward the door by Mr. Landregan, threatening further violence. The ladies called the police.

Mr. Landregan was pronounced guilty as charged, and will be sentenced to-day. Captain Frank A. Cook, U. S. A., was fined $10 for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman at 3 o'clock yesterday in the court of Judge Mogan.

It was added in testimony that Captain Cook had $10 in his possession when he started to "do the line" for his department to-day, for the Philippines, and when he entered the saloon in question the hour was late, his mood was hilarious. He shook dice and rolled a 12, and wanted to change his watch and chain on a single cast of the cubes, but the bartender would not permit gaming for stakes and the prohibition angered the captain.

Charles Stagnaro was attired in his best clothing and accompanied by his best girl last Saturday evening when the band began to play at Stockton street and Montgomery avenue, and so inspiring were the strains of the Strauss waltz danced by the instrumentalists, that Charles involuntarily started dancing. As his head bobbed in rhythm with the swinging measure his hat fell off, and when he recovered it there was a non-upon original shape left, so mercilessly had it been trampled upon by the factious bystanders.

Patrolman Reed informed the court that William Kelley, John Quinn and Tim Deneher, arrested for begging on the streets of San Francisco, were the slums as "the three musketeers."

Peter Callahan, a striking stableman, will be tried on June 7 for using profane and vulgar language last Sunday in front of Larry's stable, on Third street. The case is in Judge Mogan's court.

With a soldier attached to one of her arms and a sailor hanging to the other, a woman was seen walking her way along the Barbary Coast when Patrolman Skain arrested her for drunkenness and vagrancy.

Henry Rasmussen, foreman of a wine warehouse, found one of his subordinates, John C. Watson, encamped beside a cask of choice vintage, which in some way had burst and was conspicuously leaking, and in the argument that followed Mr. Rasmussen's demand for an explanation Mr. Watson received a black eye. Judge Mogan

PAINTER'S FACE IS TINTED GREEN BY ANGRY EMPLOYER

Climax of a Contention That for Two Consecutive Weeks Had Annoyed the Housekeeper of the Domicile on Broderick Street Wherein the Renovators Held Sway

For two consecutive weeks the domicile at 914 Broderick street had been in the hands of the renovators, and during that period the temper of the chateleine, Mrs. Clara Travis, was severely taxed. To say nothing of the chaos that confronted her eyes wherever they turned, her ears were almost constantly assailed by an exchange of unlovely language between the boss painter, Ed L. Landregan, and his subordinate, Aaron Cohn.

Mr. Landregan was before Judge Mogan yesterday on a charge of peace disturbance and Mr. Cohn was the chief witness. "He had been growling at me all day," said Mr. Cohn, "and at last he slapped my face with a brush filled with green tint and shoved me out of the place. The brush made this scratch in my nose."

Mr. Cohn's story was corroborated by Mrs. Travis, who said she saw the paint on the wall. They were seated in the parlor, having a quiet conversation, when sounds of conflict in the dining-room were immediately followed by the hoarse emergence therefrom of Mr. Cohn, who was being dragged toward the door by Mr. Landregan, threatening further violence. The ladies called the police.

Mr. Landregan was pronounced guilty as charged, and will be sentenced to-day. Captain Frank A. Cook, U. S. A., was fined $10 for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman at 3 o'clock yesterday in the court of Judge Mogan.

It was added in testimony that Captain Cook had $10 in his possession when he started to "do the line" for his department to-day, for the Philippines, and when he entered the saloon in question the hour was late, his mood was hilarious. He shook dice and rolled a 12, and wanted to change his watch and chain on a single cast of the cubes, but the bartender would not permit gaming for stakes and the prohibition angered the captain.

Charles Stagnaro was attired in his best clothing and accompanied by his best girl last Saturday evening when the band began to play at Stockton street and Montgomery avenue, and so inspiring were the strains of the Strauss waltz danced by the instrumentalists, that Charles involuntarily started dancing. As his head bobbed in rhythm with the swinging measure his hat fell off, and when he recovered it there was a non-upon original shape left, so mercilessly had it been trampled upon by the factious bystanders.

Patrolman Reed informed the court that William Kelley, John Quinn and Tim Deneher, arrested for begging on the streets of San Francisco, were the slums as "the three musketeers."

Peter Callahan, a striking stableman, will be tried on June 7 for using profane and vulgar language last Sunday in front of Larry's stable, on Third street. The case is in Judge Mogan's court.

With a soldier attached to one of her arms and a sailor hanging to the other, a woman was seen walking her way along the Barbary Coast when Patrolman Skain arrested her for drunkenness and vagrancy.

Henry Rasmussen, foreman of a wine warehouse, found one of his subordinates, John C. Watson, encamped beside a cask of choice vintage, which in some way had burst and was conspicuously leaking, and in the argument that followed Mr. Rasmussen's demand for an explanation Mr. Watson received a black eye. Judge Mogan

POLICE PRIBE SAILOR'S DEATH

Shooting of Fred Ellwood in Mountains Near Santa Rosa Causes Investigation

Special Dispatch to The Call. SANTA ROSA, May 31.—Fred Ellwood, of Elwell, lately steward on the Halwood, an English vessel, was either shot to death or accidentally killed, himself in the mountains west of this city. Walter Black, the only witness to the tragedy, is being held on suspicion. Black's story, as told to the officers, is that while he was out hunting this morning he heard Ellwood calling to him and sat down to await Ellwood's arrival. When Ellwood came up he took hold of the muzzle of the gun and drew it toward him across Black's lap. It was while thus engaged, according to Black's story, that the weapon was discharged. The shot took effect in Ellwood's heart and death was instantaneous. Black then drove to town and gave himself up. This afternoon he was "closely questioned by Sheriff Grace and District Attorney Pond, and it was deemed wise to hold him pending a further investigation.

Whalers at Unalaska. The whaling fleet, but nothing has been learned yet as to the luck which has befallen the blubber hunters. The report received merely notes the arrival at Unalaska of the Karik, Heliza, Herman, Barbara, Hercules and others. They were all at the northern port April 24.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—The Civil Service Commission met last night to consider the credentials of the examinees of the seventy applicants for appointment as inspectors in the Fire Department. This evening a meeting of the board of examiners will be held to consider the general examination of the applicants.

Ed Crawford, who is suspected of being the "Fagin" for a gang of waterfront thieves, will be tried before Judge Mogan next Saturday on the charge of stealing four rolls of canvas, valued at $200, from the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company's wharf. He is said to be a remittance man.

Lottie Gonzales (colored) and Ida Wilson (of white parentage) promised to reform if Judge Fritz would dismiss the charge of vagrancy against them. Miss Gonzales said she had found the primrose path bristling with thorns, and Miss Wilson averred that life on the Barbary Coast is not all beer and dancing. "Rebel George," the evangelist, offered to take the unfortunate creatures to his refuge and the Judge allowed him to take them and hoped that good luck would attend his reformatory experiment.

Joseph ("Kid") Egan was found guilty of assaulting Lincoln J. McGowan on April 19 at the Lurline stables, on Bush street, and will be sentenced to-day by Judge Cabanis. McGowan was a non-upon stableman and while on his way to supper was struck down from behind and brutally beaten by two men. Egan was identified as one of the assailants by James Brooks, son of the proprietor of the stables, who was on duty at the time. Judge Cabanis gave the evidence careful consideration. Egan is now under $3000 bonds to answer for another battery case which was heard in Judge Mogan's court.

Charles Charles of Petaluma and W. G. Sweet of San Francisco had spent Saturday night together on the coast, and Sunday morning was considerably advanced when a policeman found Charles prostrate and slumbering across the car tracks on Kearny street, near Sacramento, while the instrumentalist, who was on duty at the time, sat beside his inert comrade and hailed the budding morn with joyous song. Judge Mogan fined Charles $5 for drunkenness and ordered Willie to appear to-day for sentence for vagrancy.

Harvey Comes for Trial. J. C. Harvey, a printer, was brought from Idaho yesterday to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury in this city on a charge of having addressed through the mails while in San Francisco-obscene circulars to his divorced wife and District Attorney B. McDougald of Oneida County, Idaho. Postoffice Inspector James O'Connell worked up the case.

Advertisement for Oceanic S. Co. and other shipping services, including routes to various ports and contact information.

Advertisement for a pocket knife, featuring an illustration of the knife and text describing its quality and price.

Advertisement for a good pocket knife, similar to the previous one, with an illustration and descriptive text.