CHINO PEOPLE ENRAGED.

Because of the Death of a Child Under Christian Science Treatment.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 28 .-The people of Chino are enraged because of the death of a child under Christian science treatment, and it is intimated that Dr. Viola Brown will be asked to leave the town at once.

Coroner Keating was summoned to Chino on Tuesday to investigate the death of the thirteen-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Sedgwick, who was taken ill ten days ago with a bad cold. Neighbors visiting the parents, and seeing the condition of the child, had protested that a physician should be called in to attend the little sufferer but as the parents had been ill a week previous and had become well, presumably through the efforts of Dr. Brown she was sent for to pray and administer

As the days went by the babe grew worse, and still the parents refused to call a regular physician, until the little girl was beyond earthly aid.

At the inquest held yesterday the Cor-mer called the father to the stand, and in the course of Sedgwick's testimony he said: "I believe if Christian science could not cure the child, it would have died anyway.'

After hearing all the testimony, the jury rendered the following verdict: "Died from pneumonia, through the willful neglect of the parents."

The feeling against Dr. Brown is very bitter, and it is said that she will be compelled to leave Chino, if she does not go willingly.

MURPHY WILL CONTEST.

Litigation Over the Estate Ended at Last. OAKLAND, March 28.-The celebrated Murphy will contest, which attracted considerable attention in this State and in London about two years ago, is ended. This morning an order was made by the Supreme Court that the appeal of the contestants against the decision rendered last January by Judge Frick should be dismissed by

As soon as the order was made the case was brought before Judge Frick in the Superior Court, and he made an order distributing the estate of the late Anna L. Murphy of San Francisco to the three daughters, Mary Ellen, now the wife of Don Dominguez, a Spanish Frances J. Murphy and Mary M. Murphy, share and share

The will of Mrs. Murphy excluded her sons Samuel and Dan Murphy and her daughter Lady Wolseley, wife of Lord Garnet Wolseley, Commander-in-Chief of the British army, from any share in the estate. The children mentioned in the will contested it, and the case was probably the most celebrated ever fought in the Alameda courts. The will was eventually set aside by Judge Henshaw in the Superior Court, but the Supreme Court reversed the decision.

The litigation threatened to be almost Interminable, and finally when there was danger of the vast estate being esten up in litigation a compromise was effected. Under the terms of the compromise the contesting children will ch receive about $50,000, and the three sisters about $100,000. The exact terms of the compromise have not been made known, but enough has transpired to show nearly what figures were

The dismissal of the appeal by the Supreme Court ends this case," said Attorney Metcalf to-night. "There is thing now to hinder the distribution. and it is safe to say that the Murphy case will not be heard of again in the

The launching was a success in every respect, and Miss Mary Lord Drake, the daughter of Iowa's Governor, christened the new monster Iowa.

The launching was witnessed by a distinguished representation from the Hawkeye State, headed by Governor Drake and Secretary Herbert of the navy, Iowa's Congressional delegation, the members of the House of Representatives Naval Committee, several mem-bers of the Senate Naval Committee and the principal heads of the different navy bureaus.

Besides the party gathered upon the to the public, and thousands of people witnessed the event from various points of vantage. The weather was delightfully warm and bright.

The Iowa representatives arrived here yesterday afternoon. The party consisted of Governor F. M. Drake, Secretary of State W. M. McFarland, State Auditor C. G. After the launch a luncheon was served in the mold loft. There was no speech-making, as the crowd in the room where the lunch was served was so great that formalities had to be abandoned.

After the luncheon the Washington party returned to the Capital in their special train.

The Iowa, the keel of which was laid two and a half years ago, is the fourth battle-ship to be owned by the United States. She has been constructed for sea purposes, the first three built, the Indiana, Massachusetts and Oregon, being coast battle-ships. The Iowa is of 1.000 tons greater displacement than her sister ships, and several feet longer and broader. The hull is of steel, with a double bottom and close water-tight subdivision to ten feet above the water line. Her battery is to consist of four twelve-inch, eight eight-inch and six four-inch breech-loading rifles, twenty six-pounders, four one-pounders, four Gatlings and one field gun.

Compared with the Indiana, the Iowa has greater length, greater breadth, increased strength of outer line belt and greater coal endurance and speed, to-gether with the ability to work the forward twelve-inch guns in almost any condition of sea. The magnificent electric lighting plant, weighing forty-five tons, will afford means to discover the enemy or guard against the attack of torpedo-boats. She will require a complement of nearly 500 men, or greater than that of any preceding warship of the new navy.

The Iowa is constructed under the Act of July 19, 1892, which made provision for one sea-going battle-ship of about 9,000 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament and speed premiums, not more than $4,000,000. christening stand, the yard was opened of the construction have been in the hands of Chief Constructor Wilson and Engineer-in-Chief Melville, the famous Arctic explorer.
