SCALPERS SWINDLED.

Three strangers have successfully fleeced a number of second hand dealers on the coast by a ticket scalping scheme A few days ago they were visited by a man who sold them 1,000 mile books of tickets for half the regular price $10. Prospects of big profits at once loomed up and the books were purchased freely.

By explaining that the books could be rented for 60 cents a round trip, between Wilmington and Philadelphia and a good profit made, the stranger sold many of the mileage books.

On Friday two more strangers purporting to be contractors, called on the merchants and of them rented books to take several laborers to Philadelphia.

These two men really were the confederates of the men who originally sold the books, and when they rented the mileage, for the round trip, they kept the books.

The merchants who bought the transportation now lose the books and the price they paid for them, and fear to complain lest the railroad detectives will take some action against them for ticket scalping.

The man who sold the books said he was enabled to dispose of them at such a low price because he obtained them at a cut rate.

He said he was boarding at the Pennsylvania Hotel, and would remain there awhile to redeem the books if the merchants could not rent them for the round trip between Wilmington and Philadelphia.

The purchasers evidently remembered this, for John M. Mulrooney, proprietor of the hotel, was surprised when about a dozen Hebrews trooped into his place and inquired for the man who had sold the mileage transportation to them.

Mr. Mulrooney said all he knew about the men described was that they stopped in his barroom to buy drinks a few times.

Now there is much wailing and lamenting along the "coast," because of the clever swindle.

Not one of the men who bought the books can be induced to open his mouth about the occurrence.

Cascarets Candy Cathartic is what you want; a tablet after a big meal will prevent sickness, or a tablet at night before going to bed, after a good time, will fix you all right for morning, and let you get up clear as a bell, ready for business or pleasure.

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

Christmas is essentially a children's festival. The special preparations that are being made for the holiday season at the Wilmington Institute Free Library are therefore particularly appropriate. Within the last week additional electric lights have been installed in the children's room so that it is now much more cheerful and pleasant than ever before. A liberal supply of green including pine branches, holly and mistletoe hung about the room, every electric light being encircled by holly. The children are very much interested in the process of making their corner beautiful and the contributions of the little ones have been numerous. Two or three little boys, who were not very well clothed, insisted on being allowed to buy wreaths of holly and sprigs of evergreen that they might contribute to the decoration.

The bulletin boards too are well covered with pictures in black and white and colors illustrative of scenes in the life of Jesus or of modern Christmas celebration. These pictures have for the most part been cut from the illustrated papers, though this collection has been augmented by kind friends of the library who delight in pleasing the children.

Most of the time during the last few weeks that the children could spare from their studies and from christmas plans has been devoted to reading along the line of Christmas customs. For two or three weeks children have been clamoring for Christmas poems and books and articles on Christmas customs. In response these wide spread requests, the children's librarian has prepared an extensive list. This list includes some entire books but mostly is made up of reference to articles in collections of magazines. The list has been typewritten and is available to young and old alike who may wish to consult it. Obviously the list is too long to give entire in these columns. A selection however may be of service to teachers and parents who may be besieged by walking interrogation points.

It should be said that most of the books referred to have been reserved for reference in the library. All of them being brought together in two or three shelves. Since Christmas had its origin in the birth of Christ, reference is made to Lew Wallace's "Boyhood of Christ" and Guerber's "Legends of the Virgin and Christ." From the voluminous literature on the history, customs and observances of Christmas one may select Brand's "Popular Antiquities of Great Britain" (consult the index). Chambers' "Book of Days" vol. 2 Washington Irving's "Christmas eve" and "Christmas day" (in 'sketch book"). Wagner's "Manners, Customs and Observance" pp. 277 85 and Welsh's "Curiosities of Popular customs."

Among Christmas stories again it is hard to choose there are so many good ones. Dickens' "Christmas Carol" though old is always new. Eugene Field's "The first Christmas tree" (in his "Little Book of Profitable Tales)" has already become a classic. Dodge's "Hans Brinker" describes Christmas in Holland. Miss Alcotts books contain many Christmas stories and the typewritten list at the library points them all out.

It is thought that Bellamy Goodwin's "Open Sesame" (8 vols.) and McCarthy's "Christmas in Song Sketch and Story" contains the best collections of Christmas lore. Attention is also called to Eugene Field's "Joys fors Christmas" in his "Love Songs of Childhood" and most famous of all Moore's "Night before Christmas" which will be found in many collections of poems.

The library be closed on Christmas day but this collection of books will be kept for reference at least until after New Year's day.
