The Wawaet disaster is even worse than was first thought. Sixty-seven dead bodies have already been recovered.

New York furnishes us with another one of those tragedies for which it is unrivaled. Within it is known case, a brother of a firm of tobaccoists shoots his partner, swallows poison, and thinking this may not save his neck from the halter, shoots himself.

Ways to the White Mountains. THE ROUTE OF THE WINDHAMSTER LAKE-BOSTON, CONCORD, AND MONTREAL R. R.

A correspondent in New Hampshire, upon reading a recent communication in the Commercial on the route to the White Mountains, thinks it failed to properly set forth the attractions of the route.

Our correspondent says: "The letter of 'Jay' describes a small portion of the line to which I refer you as having passed over it from Bethlehem as far as Wells River, where he was obliged to change cars, a fact that his letter does not mention. Had he chosen the route by Plymouth, to Boston, he might have left the Mountains an hour and a-half later in the morning and taken a fast Express train with through cars."

"The time between the Twin Mountain House and Boston is one hour and ten minutes, by the route. It is a first-class equipment—the best passenger coaches and drawing room cars, all with Miller platform, cushions, and buffers. All through trains stop half an hour to dine, at Plymouth, where the depot is under and comprises a portion of the best hotel in New England."

Was it Murder?

THE MAN POINTED OUT ON FRIDAY AS A FAVORITE OF MURKIN MURKIN—GIVES SUSPICIONS OF POUL PLAY.

Not a little excitement was caused here, on Friday morning, by the intelligence that a man had been found in the woods of Mr. Rogers, hanged to a tree by two silk handkerchiefs, and that the body had to all appearances been in this place for probably two or three days. It was apparently a plain case of suicide, and was so reported in the Saturday papers, but careful inquiry and diligent investigation has, to our mind, considerably shaken this hypothesis, and brought to light the following startling facts, which point strongly to very grave suspicions of foul play.

It seems that about 3 o'clock, on Monday last, a stranger, apparently a Canadian, came to the place of Mr. John Kelgan, and demanded of him, in paying for which he exhibited a large amount in bank notes, and when young Frank, who was at that time attending to the business, refused to take the money, he was seized by the throat, and carried to a place, where he was fastened to a post, and a pouch fastened to a belt, and secured to his person, containing gold sovereigns, requesting him to wait until he should be called for. It was very heavy, and from his description, we should suppose contained about $2,000 dollars.

He then went out, and a little later he appeared at the tavern of Mr. McGovern, and again exhibited his gold and silver. He was still alone. "Towards evening, the same man, but this time accompanied by another, came to the place, and stated that they had no money they were required to, or rather should be, to go to the place where the gold was hidden, and exhibited it to the astonished saloon-keeper. They then went out and proceeded in the direction of Wilmington.

Nothing had since been seen of either, and they were not to be traced through the woods, but a farmer, Mr. E. Williams, in passing through the piece of timber generally known as "Loggers Woods," or rather the place when hurried by suddenly coming upon a sight that sent the cold blood back quickly to his heart, and caused an involuntary exclamation of "murder!" There before him, with bloody eyes and outstretched hands, and swollen neck and head, lay the body of a man, who had been hanged to a tree about eight feet from the ground by two silk handkerchiefs. The man's face was pale, and his body was in a state of rigor. He was wearing a hat, shirt, and vest. The last was a rather unique piece of workmanship, being manufactured by one of the little laborers of the White Mountains.

Mr. Williams immediately informed the neighbors, and the coroner was sent for, a jury was called, and the body was examined. Mr. Rogers testified that he saw the man on Monday, near his place, that he spoke to him, and that he left his place, and that he saw the body in his right mind. Several others testified to the same. In his value, were found several fine articles of clothing, a watch, and several pieces of jewelry. The body was found in a state of rigor, and the face was pale, and the hands were cold. THE Little Laborers of New York City.

It is estimated on trustworthy grounds that over 10,000 children are at work in the factories of New York and the neighboring districts, while from 15,000 to 20,000 are "floaters" drifting from one factory to another.

The average earnings of the little workers are $3 per week. The ventilation in these factories is generally good. The gold leaf factories employ from 100 to 200 children, and the statistics of the number cannot be given. This occupation requires much skill and delicacy of touch, and is not a very healthy one.
