

EARHART PLANE SHIRTS AMAZON

Covers 960 Miles of Jungle in Trip to Fortaleza. Ocean Hop Near.

Amelia Earhart completed yesterday another stage of her leisurely flight around the world at the equator with Capt. Fred Noonan as navigator. In the following dispatch she tells of a 1,330-mile trip in her Lockheed-Electra monoplane from Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, to Fortaleza, Brazil. The trip began at 6:10 a. m. and ended at 4:30 p. m., Washington, D. C. time.

BY AMELIA EARHART. By Wireless to The Star.

FORTALEZA, Brazil, June 5.—The weather at Paramaribo was perfect yesterday morning except for a morning mist from the Surinam River, when we took off to skim the tree tops and then pull up.

Speaking of trees makes me realize that we flew over 960 miles of jungle. This, added to water hops totaling 370 miles, made a long but interesting day.

There was only one possible stop between Paramaribo and here, a jungle-ringed and none-too-large field at Para, which we did not use, we passed by. The infrequency of ports of call made land-plane flying somewhat uncertain. Then, again, we left too early to receive weather reports. So I was very glad to see Fortaleza sitting just where it should be, according to the maps, between the mountains and the sea, a beautiful spot.

In this town of 100,000 there is a large airport with adequate facilities. We are going to have the plane scrubbed here, as the moisture tarnishes it. Also, we must attend to a gauge which leaks a few drops of gasoline, even if from a harmless source.

I am writing this in the Excelcior Hotel. The windows open on red-tiled roofs and busy streets which end in the sea. I can hardly believe we are in the tropics, as it is comfortably cool here, with a good breeze. But I know the tropics only from books.

It reminds me—my navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, exceedingly disappointed because he forgot to duck me on my first crossing of the Equator. He could have poured a thermos bottle of cold water over me in the plane if he had thought of it.

I remember once, crossing the United States by night, when I had been flying very high, seeing the broad Mississippi gleaming in the moonlight below, glimpsed through suddenly opening clouds. We crossed the Mississippi's southern brother, the huge Amazon. Because our course lay out from the mainland, we did not span the river proper. But we did sense its greatness from the vast arms of muddy water that coursed eastward from the shoreline, soiling the sea.

Incidentally, our short cut by compass took us again over much open water.

Prepares for Flight to Natal.

We start today for Natal, Brazil—not so early as usual, though the habit of rising at 3 a. m. or thereabouts is becoming ingrained. Natal is only 267 miles away.

We plan there to prepare for the South Atlantic hop. (Natal to Dakar, French West Africa, 1,870 miles.) That means not only mending the plane ready, but having shirts laundered. I am just about on my last one now, and I have given up hope that my slacks ever will recover, or my shoes.

My one suitcase, supposedly carrying everything I need on a world flight, does not contain many duplications. In checking today I found that neither Noonan nor I had brought a coat. We have lots of sun hats and have worn each one once, because every one has kept putting them on our heads when we are outside.

After seeing my plane put in the hangar for the night I had a chance to see something of this city from the ground. Of course, we saw much of it from the air on arrival.

Some time I hope to stay somewhere as long as I like. (Copyright, 1937.)

Vaccine From Throat Bacteria May Eliminate Common Cold

By the Associated Press.

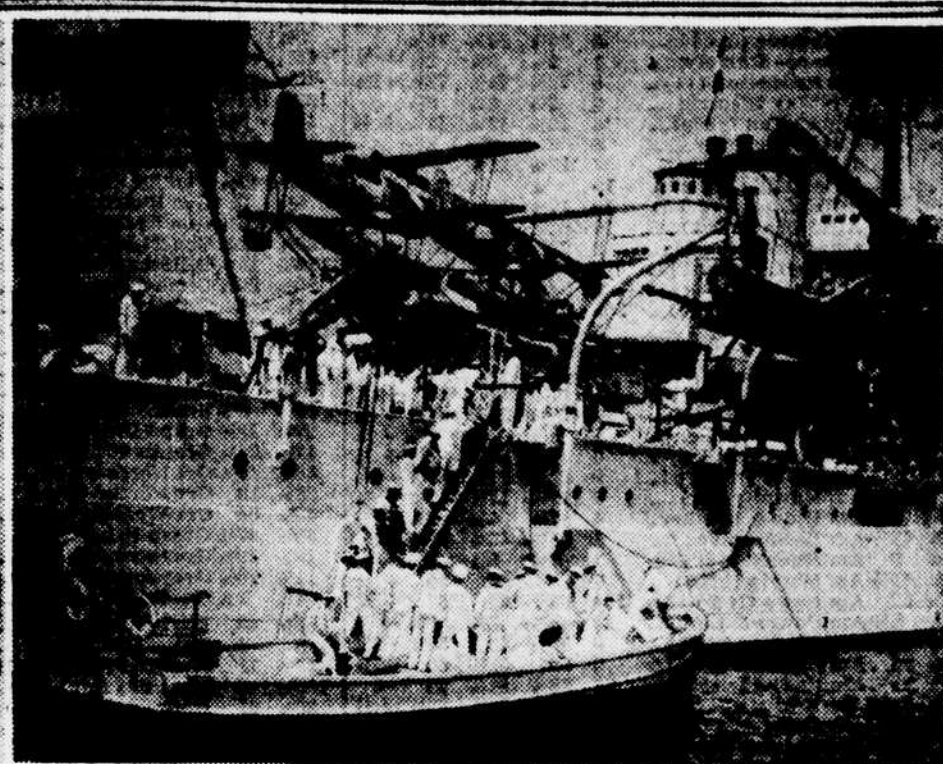

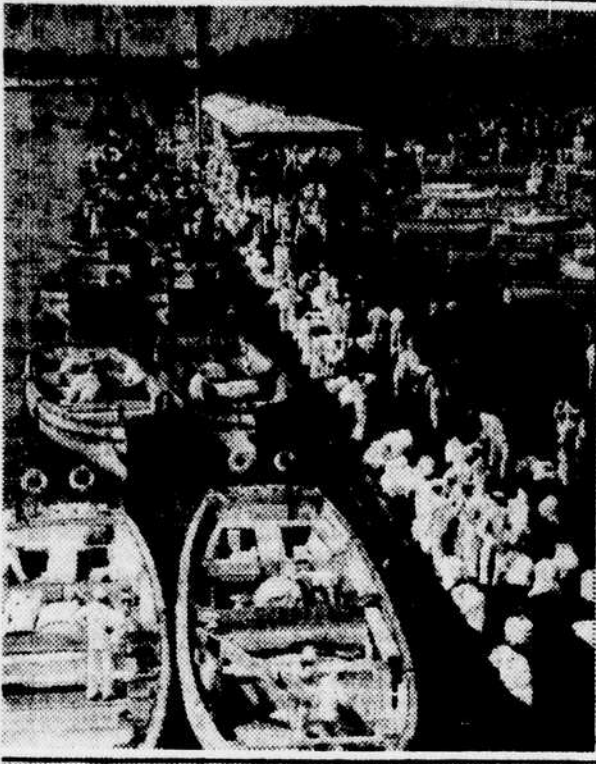

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—A pink sirup scented with peppermint and carrying a vaccine derived from throat bacteria may result in the elimination of the common cold.

Dr. Edward C. Rosenow, bacteriologist of the Mayo Foundation, Rochester, Minn., described the sirup to the American Society of Clinical Pathologists meeting here.

"It looks good, very good," he said, "but it's too early to talk yet."

Dr. Rosenow said he had tested the vaccine on 6,893 persons in many sections of the country during the last year. They were patients selected because of their susceptibility to colds.

TOWNSEND AIDES QUIT OVER COURT

12 National Officers Play Leader's Attacks on Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Twelve officials of the Townsend national organization resigned today because of "repeated public utterances . . . attacking the President and his administration" which they attributed to Dr. Francis E. Townsend, leader of the old-age pension movement.

The officials who criticized Dr. Townsend's attacks on legislation not associated with the aims of the organization in a formal statement were: Gilmore Young, national secretary-treasurer; Gilman Beeler, director of the Townsend National Legion; Harry B. Fresson, manager of the Townsend Club department; Jeanne E. Sweney, editor of the Townsend weekly women's page; J. H. Hall, auditor of the weekly and of the Townsend National Recovery Plan, Inc.; Arthur L. Johnson, chairman of the Washington Legislative Committee; J. W. Brinton, vice president and general manager; T. W. Hughes, manager of the educational department; Walter D. Hickman, associate editor of the weekly; W. L. Stahl, editor of the Townsend weekly; Willis Owen, Townsend plan business analyst, and P. M. McEvoy, Washington correspondent.

The mass resignations, Brinton said, were addressed to Dr. Townsend and effective today. He said the resignations had been accepted "verbally."

A statement, released by Brinton, said: "We feel that our services are of no value to those who contribute to our salaries in view of your repeated public utterances in the press and on the platform attacking the President and his administration, whose support and good will we must have if we are to secure the enactment of the general welfare act during the next four years.

"As you already know, we are not in accord with your activity in using money contributed to you in the Townsend organization to carry on a fight against legislation proposed by the President which has no bearing on the Townsend plan. . . . Brinton said eight officials of the movement had protested Dr. Townsend's public opposition to President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan May 19. He said the elderly physician later repudiated his promise to halt his public criticism.

Two Middie Classes Embark On Summer Cruise to Europe

Six West Pointers Accompany New Seniors and Sophomores—Juniors to Get Aviation Training at Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, June 5.—The battleships New York, Arkansas and Wyoming, with 1,020 midshipmen aboard, left here yesterday on a 13,520-mile cruise to Europe. They will be 60 days at sea and 25 days in port. The midshipmen, members of the new senior and sophomore classes at the Naval Academy, will visit Kiel, Germany; Athens, Greece, and Livorno, Italy, before returning to the academy on August 26. The ships are scheduled to arrive at Kiel on June 21.

Six West Point cadets made the cruise, taking advantage of a courtesy arrangement which has been in effect at the academy for several years. They are Andrew J. Goodpaster, Stanley W. Dziuban, John A. McDavid, Joseph A. McChristian, Seth F. Hudgins and Belmont S. Evans, Jr. The submarine R-13, which will be used in the training of the junior class here this summer, arrived yesterday. She joined the destroyers Claxton and Decatur and the gunboat Erie. The destroyer Manley dropped down the Chesapeake Bay to Norfolk, Va.

The 639 members of the junior class will study aviation, take training flights in seaplanes and make short practice cruises on the submarine, the Erie and the destroyers.

Members of the Navy foot ball squad, now on the Wyoming, will return about August 21, ahead of their classmates, and go on leave. They will return to the academy early in September for the opening of foot ball practice.

All midshipmen will be given leave from August 26 until September 24, when they will report back to the academy to begin the next scholastic term.

The formation of the new plebe or freshman class will begin on Wednesday. Approximately 600 members are expected to be enrolled before the academic year opens.

CASE INVOLVING FINE BRINGS DEFY

Attorney Challenges Right of Corporation Counsel to Prosecute.

The right of the corporation counsel's office to prosecute in cases where a verdict of guilty might result in a fine and imprisonment was challenged by Attorney T. Edward O'Connell yesterday before Police Judge Walter J. Casey.

The question was raised when charges of second-offense reckless driving were brought before the court by Assistant Corporation Counsel George D. Nelson in the case of Byron H. Moyer, 1425 Ames place northeast. Attorney O'Connell made an oral motion to quash the charge, contending the Court of Appeals had ruled that the United States attorney's office must prosecute in any case where "fine or imprisonment, or both," was a possible penalty.

In defense of his motion, Attorney O'Connell cited the ruling in the case of the famous Carrie Nation, charged with destroying private property in 1902 after she had broken several mirrors and bottles at the Union Station.

Similar objection was raised when she was prosecuted by the office of the corporation counsel, and the Court of Appeals handed down the ruling that as the penalty involved both a fine and imprisonment the corporation counsel did not have the right to prosecute under the law.

In 1906, however, Congress in the traffic act gave the corporation counsel's office the right to prosecute in all traffic cases, without expressly repealing that part of the District code which states that the corporation counsel

CHICAGO GRAIN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Late severe tumbles of wheat prices today carried the market here down 4 1/4 cents a bushel maximum.

Many holders, discouraged over apparent unlikelihood of wheat market upturns in the immediate future, threw holdings overboard, and numerous stop-loss orders were forced into execution. Forecasts of cool weather next week counted as a bearish influence.
