

Zoo's Answer Man

When animal keepers at the Lincoln Park Zoo, Chicago, were flooded with questions they couldn't answer, the director established a Zoo Answer Shop with Fred Meyer in charge. Mr. Meyer keeps an exhaustive card file of animal facts as well as a zoological library. The animal likeness on his desk doesn't seem to faze him.

First-hand study of the animals supplements Mr. Meyer's book research. Here he checks the coloring of a Siberian tiger.

Two youngsters get a close-up of a South American turtle which lives at the Answer Shop. The reptile weighs 26 pounds, is 23 years old. Wide World Photos.

The Central Stair Vista

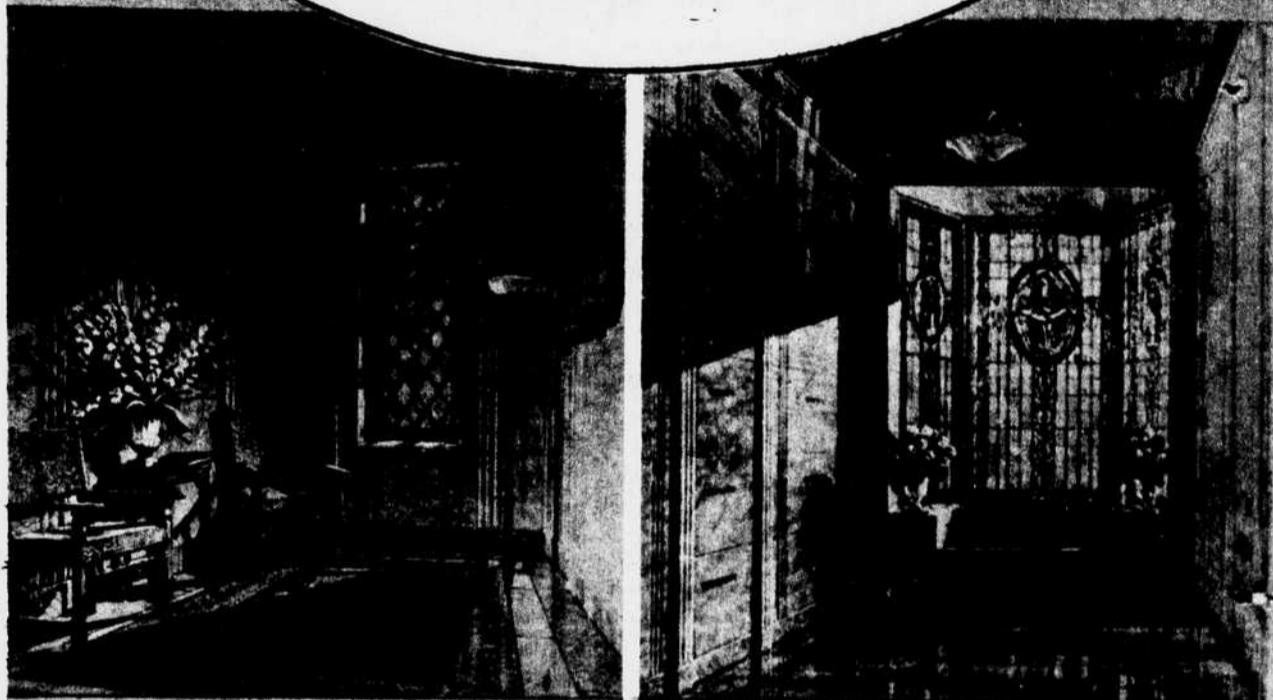

A Private Family Room

The Chapel

A Beautiful Open Corridor

Fort Lincoln Mausoleum

Washington's Finest Memorial for above earth entombment

To Endure for All Time to Come

These are strong words, but not too strong for the sacred edifice of heavy stone masonry, concrete, steel, marble and bronze which will soon rise in majestic beauty on the historic heights of Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Representing years of research, the new Fort Lincoln Mausoleum is an outstanding example of providing perpetuation of memory—not at the cost of a king's ransom—but at moderate prices within the reach of all. Yet, no finer memorial could be provided with the riches of a rajah.

Your investigation of Fort Lincoln's complete facilities is invited

CONSTRUCTION
WILL START SOON.
SEND THIS COUPON
NOW →

Fort Lincoln Cemetery, 3201 Blodensburg Road, Washington 18, D. C.

Please mail me, without obligation, the 20-page booklet in color containing your detailed information about the new Fort Lincoln Mausoleum.

NAME _____ (Please Print)

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ S 91847