

Senate Probe Into Hayward Charge Sought

Calder Promises Inquiry Why Men of the 369th Were Sent Into Battle Inadequately Trained

Betrayal of Trust Seen Kahn and Wadsworth Are Depended On to Assist in Fixing Responsibility

Senator William M. Calder, of New York, told The Tribune last night that on the convening of Congress he would go before the Senate and insist upon an immediate and thorough investigation of Colonel William Hayward's charge that the 369th Infantry—the old 15th New York, which he led overseas—was thrown into action by the commanders of the American Expeditionary Force without proper training. Colonel Hayward made his charge in an address before the Circumnavigators' Club at the Hotel Commodore Thursday night. In an interview with The Tribune, Senator Calder declared that while Colonel Hayward's statements were "startling" they contained nothing that had not already come to his attention "from other sources."

Senator Calder declined to disclose these "sources" or to discuss further the information he obtained from them. The name of the officials responsible for sending untrained men to the firing line ought to be disclosed to the public, he said.

One of the purposes of the investigation, Senator Calder declared, would be to ascertain whether the conditions Colonel Hayward said existed in his regiment were true of other units in the American forces.

Aims to Place Responsibility "If it was the general policy of the War Department to put men on the firing line before they had proper training, this should be brought to light and the responsibility for it established," said he.

Senator Calder declared he was sure both Representative Julius Kahn, of California, who will be chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee in the next Congress, and Senator Wadsworth, of New York, who, Senator Calder said, probably would head the Senate Military Affairs Committee, would render all aid in their power in the proposed investigation.

Senator Calder's statement in full was as follows: "I read Colonel William Hayward's charges this morning, and while they are startling, they do not contain anything that has not already come to my attention from other sources."

"It is my purpose immediately upon the convening of Congress to lay Colonel Hayward's charges before the Senate, and insist that an immediate and thorough investigation of the same be made."

"The name of the official or officials responsible for the orders putting men into battle with so little knowledge of warfare ought to be disclosed to the public."

"If it was the general policy of the War Department to put men on the firing line before they had proper training, this ought to be brought to light and the responsibility for it established."

"No country ever gave up her boys so willingly, and that they should have been forced to fight without sufficient preparation is a betrayal of the confidence the American people placed in the hands of the War Department."

"It will be interesting to learn whether other units in the American army fought under similar conditions without proper training."

Representative Julius Kahn, of California, is in France. He will be chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee of the next Congress. "I am informed he is gathering information on the conditions under which our men fought, and I am certain that both he and Senator Wadsworth, who probably will be chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and who was in France for two months after the signing of the armistice, can be depended upon to give every assistance in their power to see that these charges are thoroughly inquired into and that those responsible for this startling condition of affairs are exposed, no matter how high they be."

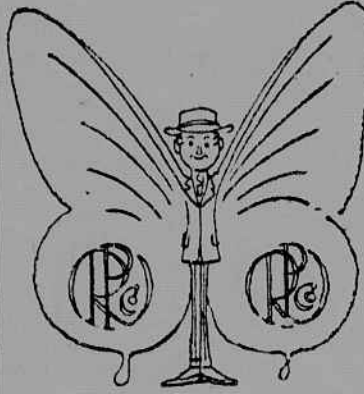

Colonel Hayward declined yesterday to make any further statement concerning his Hotel Commodore address.

Disabled Soldiers Sent to School by U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—There seems to be a general impression that the reeducation and training given to disabled soldiers, sailors and marines by the United States government is wholly in the manual trades. Just where this impression originated is hard to say, but possibly on account of the general understanding that vocational education means instruction in wood working or machine shop work, or something of the sort. As a matter of fact, out of the first 787 disabled veterans placed for reeducation by the Federal Board for Vocational Education at Washington, which is the agent of Congress in providing this free reeducation for these men, a considerable number are in the professions, pure and simple.

There are 23 illiterates taking elementary academic education; college academic education, 2; architecture, 6; art, 2; taking chemistry, 3; dentistry, 2; drafting, 2; engineering, 54, which is divided up into the following subjects: Architecture, 4; chemistry, 1; civil engineering, 7; electrical, 18; general, 6; mechanical, 15; mining, 2; steam, 1. Two are taking a course on foreign trade; 2 have taken up forestry; 7 are taking a course in journalism; 3 landscape gardening; 6 are studying languages and 19 are studying law. There are 8 men qualifying as doctors of medicine; 21 are taking mechanical drawing and 4 are taking a course in pharmacy; 1 is studying the technique of the publishing business; 12 are studying salesmanship; 10 are taking secretarial work; 2 are qualifying as teachers; 7 are taking trigonometry, while 2 have taken up theology.

This education is given by the United States government absolutely free. It is obtained in the best institutions of the country, all fees paid and the student allowed $65 a month support fund. To be eligible for retraining the disabled man must have been sufficiently disabled to be awarded compensation by the War Risk Insurance Bureau.

Schlessinger Suspects Two Discharged Employes of Garment Workers' Union With Issuing Document

The manifesto issued by New York Bolsheviks demanding the organization among the 50,000 waist and dress makers of a soviet system which would revolutionize the industry and place it in control of the workers emanated from a couple of discharged employes of the union, according to Benjamin Schlessinger, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The document was directed to fellow workers in the waist and dress industry, and said: "The time has arrived for workers to break the shackles of slavery and organize into workers' councils." It espoused the breaking down of class barriers and asked that each shop be represented in the council by two workers; that in future each shop be controlled by a committee of workers; and called the meeting of delegates this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Russian People's House, 133 East Fiftieth Street.

"I addressed a meeting of 2,000 of the striking members," Mr. Schlessinger said yesterday, "and I found that the women did not know anything about the Bolshevik plan for starting a soviet organization."

"The idea is so ridiculous that as a union we are not considering it seriously."

"The union has authorized nothing in the way of an official statement, and it has not defined a policy regarding this so-called soviet group. Recently we discharged a man who was employed as an organizer. We gave him two months' extra pay to get rid of him. Another man who was a secretary of a local union also was discharged. It is probably from these sources that this Bolshevik propaganda has started."

The District Attorney is in possession of the "manifesto" issued by the Bolsheviks, and a detail of police will be on hand to preserve order, and to make arrests if the meeting to-day should develop seditious or anarchistic utterances.

Organizers of the "industrial revolution" were not at their headquarters yesterday. At the headquarters of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America it was stated that no attempt had been made to serve the manifesto there.

After Justice Tompkins overruled a motion to dismiss the indictment, Thomas J. O'Neill, of the defence, contended that Miss Murphy and Miss Bridget Flaherty, also under indictment, were the victims of an attempt on the part of officials to cover their own failure to visit and inspect such institutions as they conducted, regularly. He also charged that perjury had been committed.
