LITERARY ITEMS.

The Rev. Alexander J. D. D'Orsey, B. D., of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, is a candidate for the Professorship of Poetry at Oxford.

The eighth volume, which M. Guizot has just published of his Memoirs, is most important as regards his own character, and not a little so indeed as the materials of plain history. It contains elucidation principally upon two points, one the Revocation of July, the other the Spanish Marriages.

At the last meeting of the Philological Society, Prof. Goldstucker mentioned a curious fact with regard to the word lex, a poem to be sung,—that in old Sanskrit musical manuscripts the same word occurs, namely laga, with the same meaning as in French and English. The word laga has not yet found its way into any Sanskrit Glossary.

The first volume of a true reprint of the folio MS. of old English ballads, &c., from which Percy got, with difference of his own making, the best of his "Reliques," has lately appeared in London. Mr. Furnival is answerable for the accuracy of the text, and except some King Arthur notes, the elucidations which accompany each piece are usually by Mr. Hales. Thorough editing adds to the bulk, but more than doubles the interest and use of the book to the great majority of readers. The volume now issued gives the Robin Hood ballads, and among many other romances some of "Sir Gawayne," "Arthur and Merlin," beside historical pieces, like the poems on "The Earls off Chester" and "Flodden Field." The whole publication will occupy four volumes, namely, three of Ballads and Romances, with one of Loose and Humorous Songs.

The Saturday Review notices some recent American publications as follows: The "Criterion" is the title given by Mr. Henry Tuckerman to a series of essays of a quality somewhat higher than that of the usual magazine article, and resembling in style and matter those of Hazlitt and his cotemporaries, rather than the flimsier productions of their successors. They are well written, and contain some pertinent observations and amusing anecdotes of various professions and phases of social life. Mr. Tuckerman is a master of the English language, and the purity of his style, rather than any affectation of antique mannerisms, gives to his essays a flavor which reminds us of a past generation of writers.

Mr. Alger's "Solitudes of Nature and of Man" is a volume whose general conception and form may probably have been suggested by the "Anatomy of Melancholy," but it is in no sense an imitation of that unrivaled work. It displays much original thought, as well as a large amount of varied reading; contains many sensible and suggestive reflections, many well-chosen and apposite quotations, and some interesting facts and reminiscences, historical and biographical, which serve as apt and far from trite illustrations of thoughts which are often striking and generally judicious. It is not exactly light, but it is agreeable and instructive reading, and may possibly obtain a more than ephemeral repute and popularity.

The "Elements of Art Criticism" is a treatise of more than elementary scope, on a subject in which most of us are more or less interested, and on which many are consciously ignorant or imperfectly informed. Some portions, at least, of the present volume relate to the rudiments of drawing and painting, and may repay the reader for his trouble even if he fail fully to comprehend its more ambitious teachings.

Among the scientific works the "Report of the Smithsonian Institution for 1866," and the "Annual of Scientific Discovery," edited by Mr. Kneeland, deserve notice. The latter is a yearly account of all that has been done to forward the progress of science during the year; of mechanical inventions and improvements, of the achievements and discoveries in all the different branches of natural science, of the books published on these and kindred subjects, and of the lives of eminent scientific men who have died during the last twelve months. The volume is a small one, and the type close, though tolerably clear; and in order to bring within the requisite compass so large a mass of matter, it is necessary that each invention or discovery, especially the less important or less interesting, should be succinctly treated; but nevertheless, the amount of information concentrated in so small a space is truly wonderful, and renders the Annual exceedingly valuable to all who are interested in science.

THE RUSSIAN NOVEL.

A RUSSIAN NOVEL—FATHERS AND SONS. Translated from the Russian of Ivan Sergheievitch Turgenef. By EUGENE SCHUYLER, Ph.D. 12mo., cloth. $1 50.

The publishers would state that this work has been issued upon its literary merits, without regard to the fact of its being, in some sense, a "curiosity." Purely as a novel, they believe it fit to rank with the best productions of our time. As a picture of Russian life and institutions, it of course possesses more value than any work yet published in America.

ABOUT'S NEW NOVEL,

THE MAN WITH THE BROKEN EAR. Translated from the French of Edmond About. 12mo., cloth, $1 50.

One of those peculiar novels based on scientific theories, in which M. About has been distinctively successful. The chief feature of the book is a very humorous, though philosophical illustration of the fact that when a man dies, he will be apt to find it more comfortable to remain dead, than to return to life 50 years after his demise. The speculation in Natural Science on which the story is founded is more interesting in itself, more elaborately developed, and more entertaining in its supposed consequences, than in any other of M. About's books.

Copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

GREAT SOUL IN A SMALL BODY.

MATHUSHEK PIANOS.

By a recent invention of Mr. Frederick Mathushek (THE NEW PATENT EQUALIZING SCALE WITH LINEAR BRIDGE), the power of the piano is so greatly increased that an instrument of little more than HALF THE USUALSIZE, and LESS THAN ONE-THIRD THE WEIGHT is in tone, volume, brilliancy, and all other respects, equal to most of the best full-sized pianos. This is demonstrated in the Octagonal Piano, four feet nine inches long, two feet eight inches wide, yet having seven full octaves. THE ORCHESTRAL PIANO (ordinary size), is the same arrangement, equals a Concert Grand. The peculiar construction secures the greatest durability and longest continuance "in tune." The New-York Weekly Review, the leading musical authority in this country, says: "The Gothic Pianoforte can speak with such power and sonority that we must look at the thing in order to believe it possible. . . . Throughout the scale the tone is even, very full, sympathetic, and melodious."

Musicians, amateurs, and those desiring to purchase, are invited to call and examine. Send for Illustrated Circular, showing the features of the invention, and the reasons for its excellence. BARLOW & DOEHLER, No. 694 Broadway and No. 8 Fourth-st.

"HAZELTON BROTHERS," PIANO-FORTE MANUFACTURERS, would call the attention of musicians and the public generally to the many and great improvements in the construction of their Pianos.
