"CITY BEAUTIFUL" LECTURES.

Georgetown Citizens Turn Out to Hear Brown and Fairchild.

An enthusiastic audience of more than 200 residents of Georgetown last night heard the fourth of a series of lectures on "Beautiful Washington," delivered by Glenn Brown and David Fairchild.

Reference was made by both speakers to the natural charm of different sections of Georgetown, owing to the age of the place, and of the need of preserving and bettering the buildings and gardens. Mr. Brown, in his lecture on the park commission plan for the beautification of Washington, spoke of the difference the plan would make in the entrances to Georgetown.

Scenes were shown illustrating the deplorable condition of the Rock Creek Valley, especially between the Potomac River and the P street bridge. The next of the series will be delivered this evening before the North Capitol and Eckington Citizens' Association, at St. Martin's Hall.

SOCIETY IS PRESENT AS COUNTESS WEDS

Ambassador's Daughter Is Bride of Diplomat.

WED IN LUTHERAN CHURCH

Countess Luise-Alexandra von Bernstorff and Count Raymond Pourtales Married and Leave for Europe on Bridal Trip—Notable List of Guests Attend the Services.

Quite the most important wedding of many months in Washington was that yesterday of Countess Luise-Alexandra von Bernstorff, daughter of the German Ambassador, and Count Raymond Pourtales, formerly of the embassy staff in this city, just transferred to the foreign office in Berlin. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in Concordia Lutheran Church, at the corner of Twentieth and G streets, by Rev. Paul A. Menzel, pastor. The wedding was more American in character than German, although the bride and bridegroom adhered to many of the German customs. A full choral service was given by the vested choir of St. John's Episcopal Church, under the direction of the choirmaster and organist, Mr. H. H. Freeman. During the seating of the guests Mr. Freeman played the following numbers: "Bridal Song" (Jensen), "Pilgrim's Chorus" (Wagner), "Spring Song" (Mendelssohn), "Cantilene Nuptiale" (Dubois), "March Militaire" (Schubert), and "Cantabile" in E major (Demarest). The choir numbers forty men and boys, and their music was particularly effective. They met the bridal party at the door of the church and preceded them to the chancel. During the processional of the choir from the chancel to the church doors to meet the bridal party the organist played the march from the oratorio of "Eli," by Michael Costa. For the return of the choir heading the bridal procession they sang the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." As they left the church the Mendelssohn wedding march was played.

Tafts Are Present.

During the marriage ceremony the organist played Massenet's "Virgin Prayer." The double ring ceremony was used. The President and Mrs. Taft, their daughter, Miss Taft, and the Vice President and Mrs. Sherman were shown to their seats just before the bridal party entered. The bride was escorted by her father, the Ambassador, and she never looked lovelier than in her Paris bridal robe of white satin, trailing many yards behind her petite figure. The gown was made in the prevailing style of princess, with a close-fitting skirt and very slight drapery drawn across the sides under the box plait of the enormously long train, which started several inches above the waist line, under a large bow of the satin. Quantities of Brussels point lace were used on the bodice, the pattern of the lace carrying out the idea of youth and of springtime, which so well describes the personality of this very charming foreign bride. The sleeves were of elbow length, finished with Brussels point ruffle. The veil was of Brussels point held with a wreath of myrtle, following the tradition of brides in Germany. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley and white orchids. The neck of her gown was cut round in Dutch fashion and finished with rose point lace, and her only ornament was a string of superb pearls.

The wedding party presented a beautiful and picturesque effect, the gowns of the bridesmaids and the uniforms of the men of the wedding party making a mixture of delicate and brilliant colors. Preceding the bride and her father, the bridegroom entered with the bride's mother, according to the German fashion. There was no best man, but according to the American fashion there were four ushers, Count Elemer Pejacsevich, of the Austrian Embassy; Mr. Hanicl von Halmhausen, counselor of the German Embassy; Commander Retzmann, naval attache of the German Embassy, and Mr. A. C. Horstmann, attache of the German Embassy. The four groomsmen were Count Guenther von Bernstorff, brother of the bride; Jonkheer H. M. van Weede, of the Netherlands Legation; Lord Eustace Percy, of the British Embassy staff, and Baron Hardenbroek, of the German Embassy staff.

Bridesmaids Come Next.

The four bridesmaids, who preceded the bridegroom and the mother of the bride, were Miss Alys Meyer, daughter of the Secretary of the Navy; Miss Elsie Aldrich, daughter of former Senator Aldrich; Miss Mary Southerland, daughter of Rear Admiral Southerland, and Miss Cecilia May, who will be married in Easter week to Mr. Robert Bacon, son of the American Ambassador to France.

The gowns of the bridesmaids were all alike, and among the smartest designs of the new spring fashions. They were of pale pink satin in a new tint, with delicate tunic drapery of a new shade of light blue chiffon, making an exquisite effect savoring strongly of Paris. The skirts were in demitrains and untrimmed, save for the drapery, which was finished with a flounce nine inches deep. Across the front of the draperies were garlands of tiny pink satin roses and buds, with foliage of the natural color, also in satin. This same garniture appeared on the bodices in more pronounced style. The sleeves were finished with ruffles of delicate pink tulle, the tulle also finishing the necks. The hats were picturesque affairs of pink and blue tulle trimmed with garlands of satin roses and foliage. Pink satin slippers, pink hosiery, and pink gloves completed the costumes, and they all carried pink roses and wore the bride's gift, a brooch of pale blue enamel with the initials B. P. in diamonds. These were brought by the bride from Paris.

The gown of the Countess von Bernstorff, mother of the bride, was of gray chiffon, with a smart hat of gray straw, trimmed with shaded gray plumes. She wore some superb pearls and diamonds. A brilliant reception followed at the embassy, where the decorations were of Easter lilies, Southern smilax, Bride roses, palms, and ferns, the same as in the church. Mrs. Taft wore a beautiful gown of black marquisette over white satin, with a lace panel set in, of duchesse point. The same lace was used on the bodice and sleeves, and a toque of violets and violet satin completed the costume. Miss Taft wore pink chiffon over white satin, with a black hat and bronze green plume. Mrs. Hollister, guest of Mrs. Taft, wore lavender satin with hat and plumes to match.

Count Pourtales and his bride left on an evening train for New York, and will sail for Germany to-morrow. They will spend the six weeks of his vacation traveling in Europe, and will then settle in their new but probably temporary home in Berlin, where the count is assigned to duty. He is quite in the line of promotion in the diplomatic service of his country.

Among the out-of-town guests were the American Ambassador to France and Mrs. Bacon, the departing Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. Hill and Miss Hill, Mrs. Edward Luckemeyer, of New York, grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Post, Miss Amy Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brownson, Miss Marjory Curtis, Mrs. Richard Irvin, and Mr. and Mrs. Sheffer, all of New York.

The gifts of the young countess formed a brilliant and valuable collection of jewels, crystal ware, and silver. The Ambassador and the countess gave their daughter a wonderful diamond tiara in the form of a wreath of flowers, which has been in the family a number of years. The President and Mrs. Taft gave a handsome point lace fan with sticks of mother-of-pearl incrusted with gold. Miss Helen Taft's gift was a handsome silver platter. The gifts of the bridesmaids were equally beautiful. Miss May gave her a silver powder puff box and cushion to match; Miss Meyer, gold after-dinner coffee set; Miss Aldrich, silver tray, and Miss Southerland, two silver cake baskets. Among the other gifts were: From Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce, a pair of silver napkin rings; the French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand, silver sugar basin; Miss Ethel Roosevelt, a gold belt buckle; Senator Du Pont, fan of antique design with pearl sticks; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, large white ostrich feather fan with amber sticks; Mrs. William F. Draper, large silver loving cup; Mr. and Mrs. George Howard, exquisite Dutch silver bonbon dish; Mrs. Slater, an antique French enamel case with four tiny perfume bottles; Miss Gwynne, a lovely enamel frame; Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley, gold traveling clock; Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson, silver toilet set; Mrs. Merritt, traveling case of violet leather, fitted in gold and ivory; Mrs. Hoyt, silver paper knife; the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Meyer, silver vegetable dish; Mr. A. Horstmann, of the German Embassy, a card case, with monogram and coronet in gold, and a gold cigarette lighter; the counselor of the embassy, an old English potato ring for flowers; Lord Eustace Percy, of the British Embassy, valuable and rare old print; Mr. and Mrs. James Wadsworth, large silver tray; Col. and Mrs. Charles L. McCawley, a large old English Chippendale tray.

Count Pourtales and his bride made a wedding gift to the church in which they were married of a beautiful altar cross. It was used for the first time at the wedding service.

PLEDGED FOR CLERKS' FIGHT.

Other Subscriptions Follow Generous Offer of P. B. Chase.

Although the subscription books of the executive committee of the committee of 100, which will start a campaign for higher salaries for Federal employes in a few days, have not been opened, $3,000 has already been pledged to carry on the fight. This sum represents one-tenth of the money which P. B. Chase, originator of the plan, said would be sufficient.

The money has been contributed by Mr. Chase, Corby Brothers, and S. Kann, Sons & Co. SENATOR GALLINGER GIVEN TESTIMONIAL

Reception and Entertainment at the Willard.

To express their appreciation of his services as chairman of the Senate District Committee, representatives of the Polytechnical Institution for the Blind and the National Training School for Boys gave Senator Gallinger a reception and entertainment last night at the New Willard Hotel.

Owing to unavoidable reasons, the band of the training school was unable to be present, as was also the Fifteenth Cavalry Band of Fort Myer. Brainard H. Warner presided, and in a few words thanked Senator Gallinger in behalf of the organizations for his services, not only for them as chairman of the Senate District Committee, but to the city as well. Senator Gallinger replied, thanking Mr. Warner for his expressions of esteem, and talked about certain District bills for the passage of which he was in a large way responsible. He also commended the Polytechnical Institution and the training school.

A short musical programme was given by the Polytechnical Institution, and F. L. Fishback showed slides of Washington public places. Dr. Thomas Calver read an original poem in honor of Senator Gallinger.

At the conclusion of the exercises Mr. Warner presented Senator Gallinger with a bouquet from the National Training School for Boys and a platter from the Armstrong Manual Training School.

The Gallinger birthday party, at the New Willard to-night, is expected to draw an attendance of nearly 500 diners. The guests will include civic, commercial, and professional leaders of the District and the highest officials of the government. President Taft will be there. Former Speaker Cannon is expected, as well as Speaker-to-be Champ Clark, whose future attitude on District affairs is a matter of no little surmise.

Many members of the District committees of both houses will be in attendance, as well as a large number from the New Hampshire Congressional delegation.

Senator Gallinger's New Hampshire friends have taken good care to repudiate in advance any such charge against them. One of the largest contingents of the attendance to-night will be from the Granite State.

VETERANS WILL CELEBRATE.

Harries has tendered the veterans, as an escort, a regiment of the District militia, a battery of artillery, and the First Regiment Band.

The veterans will assemble at St. Joseph's Hall at 1 o'clock, April 10, march out Massachusetts avenue to K street, thence to Eighteenth street, to the White House. They will then march to the District Building where the Commissioners will receive them, thence to the City Hall, where they will disband. In the evening a banquet will be given.

The committee on arrangements is composed of C. W. King, Edward W. Woodruff, L. R. Seibold, Joseph T. Ford, Theodore Priebus, William H. Hoover, Capt. J. Tyler Powell, T. Edward Clarke, W. H. Fastnaugh, George W. Gladmon, and W. H. Craig.
