WASHINGTON, JANUARY 15, 1887.

BISMARCK AND THE ARMY BILL.

The speech of Prince Bismarck in support of the Army bill, which was no doubt as honest a plea as it was earnest, for the protection of the Empire by an increase of its military resources, against exigencies which he evidently believes to be imminent, failed of its intended effect and the German Parliament is dissolved.

An appeal will now be made to the country, with what better success remains to be seen.

From an Imperial standpoint, Bismarck is undoubtedly right. He is a cautious and farseeing statesman to whom the autonomy of the Empire is dear as the apple of his eye. It is for this that he pleads, counting as nothing the additional burdens that the proposed legislation might impose upon the people, but as everything the absolute inviolability of the conditions imposed upon France at the treaty of September, 1871.

"This is the supreme object of the Army bill," said the Prince.

"We have done all in our power," he grimly adds, "to induce the French to forget and forgive;" still, "to maintain our peaceful relations with France is difficult, because a long historical process must be accomplished before the feelings of the past are appeased and differences reconciled." Again: "We cannot count upon peace with France as permanent."

All the arguments that Bismarck and Von Moltke could adduce, however, were inadequate to move the stubborn opposition of Dr. Windthorst. To his unmilitary eyes there were no such signs of danger in the East as to justify the conversion of the country into a camp; and the bill, by which the government set such store, meant only more exactions upon an already tax-impoverished people; new sources of discontent, new incentives to emigration, new impediments in the pathway of civil liberty and public prosperity.

Speaking in the interests of that peace which is so desirable, Dr. Windthorst judged truly. Looking forward to the means and possible necessity of clipping the expanding wings of France, Bismarck's statecraft was the more sagacious.

But setting aside all considerations of the possibility or probability of another war between Germany and France, the debate of the army bill in the Reichstag is of peculiar interest as showing the drifting away of popular feeling from a servile and supine anchorage in the Crown.

The commonalty of Germany are thinking and feeling and beginning to act for themselves these later years, with higher aspirations than to tickle the military vanity of the Kaiser and feed the ambition of his advisers.

"The Chancellor can certainly dissolve the Reichstag," says Dr. Windthorst, "but what is to be gained by dissolution? What would be the use of the Constitution or even the whole machinery of state, if the Reichstag exists only to signify its assent to the measures submitted to it?" This is plain Democratic talk to din in the ears of Prince Bismarck, and he could merely say in reply that the Doctor's view of the situation was "exaggerated."

It was certainly not treason, for that would have been promptly resented.

It was a declaration of parliamentary independence, without which no constitutional government can exist nor the liberties of its people survive. And in the face of this utterance even the Chancellor of the Empire stood well-nigh speechless.

Imperial dictation, however, even if it be unable to intimidate the Reichstag into an unresisting support of the Government's measures, still has the power to annul the legislature itself. No other resource but this is left. The question at issue now goes back to the people, and in the next choice of electors there will no doubt be furnished a still more conspicuous illustration of the progress of German thought in the direction of self-government and free institutions. The contest will be watched with eager interest, not alone in France, but in all Europe; nor alone in Europe, but wherever the fortunes of popular liberty have been laid.

Seven of the nine members of the Senate District Committee are opposed to the confirmation of James C. Matthews for Recorder of Deeds, and the rejection of the nomination by the Senate will follow by a proper to nately large majority. It is understood that the general objection to the appointment rests upon the fact that Mr. Matthews is not a resident of the District, and that the President in making the selection departed from a declared principle of both the party platforms. What influence the reappointment, after the nominee had been once before rejected, may have had upon the present determination of the committee does not appear. It is but natural and probable, however, that the opposition was intensified on this account, even if the President's defiant action had no other weight. As to the question of color, it was not considered by the committee to any material extent. There is every reason to believe that the purest Caucasian the city of Albany can produce would have fared the same way. What the President will do now depends upon what he thinks politically best under the circumstances. Mr. Matthews' present appointment holds good until the 4th of March, and Mr. Cleveland, if he thinks it expedient, may appoint him again to hold until March 4, 1888, and so on. It may be that the sober third thought will induce him to recognize at last the doctrine of home rule, which in this instance has been most persistently and inconsistently violated, and assign this purely local office to some one local to the District.

The members of the New York Society of Medical Jurisprudence differ widely as to the proper mode of administering capital punishment. At their last meeting, the committee appointed by the State Legislature to consider the subject, reported in favor of the guillotine. Others recommended carbolic acid, but no one favored electricity. One member suggested that the criminal be handed over to a commission of scientists to be disposed of in any way they might see fit. Another advocated the garotte and another the "good old common law practice" of hanging. It occurred to none of them that the death penalty in any form might be a relic of barbarism, and that the poorest use society can put a man to is to murder him. Every individual owes the community something, and if he doesn't pay voluntarily, he should be compelled to work it out. The prison and the reformatory will furnish the State quite as much protection as the gallows.

Before adjourning last night the Senate did the best piece of work that it has done this session in passing the Interstate Commerce bill, and by a majority that must be very gratifying to Mr. Cullom. The vote stood 43 to 15, with 17 absentees. Of these, if they had been present, Senators McPherson, Voorhees, Maxey, Kenna and Wilson of Maryland would have voted yea. Had all the absentees voted nay the bill would still have passed by a majority of 11.

Henry B. Stanton and Abby Kelly Foster, two characters of eminent note in the anti-slavery period of our history, passed quietly off the stage of action yesterday, Mr. Stanton dying in New York, and Mrs. Foster at Worcester, Mass., both full of years. By the present generation they had been well-nigh forgotten, but they were powers in their day and generation, and aided materially in the advancement of the cause of abolition.

The unseating of a Democratic Knight of Labor in the Indiana House of Representatives yesterday, on the ground of his being a justice of the peace, and therefore ineligible, gives each party seventy-five votes on joint ballot. This reduces negotiations to a very narrow basis.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to meet increasing demands upon their transportation facilities, have issued a new loan for $2,500,000, to be known as the Car Trust loan, for the purchase of additional rolling stock.

Mrs. Emmons is not near so insane as she looks in most of her pictures. The Critic to day has a free-hand sketch of this gifted lady that does her liberal justice.

The Senate is not in session to-day. It deserves a little rest after sitting up so late last night to pass the Commerce bill.

Jokes are now in order on the turpitude of the Democratic party in Indiana.

NOTES AND GOSSIP.

General John Logan was last night elected chairman of the Tammany Hall General Committee.

Mr. Allen Thorndike Rice of the North American Review has started on an extended tour through the South.

Mrs. Isabella Imboden, the aged mother of General John D. Imboden, died at Saltville, Va., last Monday, in the 84th year of her age.

Mayor Hewitt of New York is slowly recovering his health and is expected to occupy his chair in the City Hall on Monday or Tuesday next.

James F. Landon, the octogenarian stage proprietor, who died at Plymouth, N. H., January 10, owned the first line that carried a British mail through Vermont.

John Good of Brooklyn, who worked in a cordage factory ten or twelve years ago at $8.50 a day, has since perfected inventions which pay him an annual royalty of $150,000.

Among the guests present at the banquet to Henry M. Stanley at the Mansion House, London, on Tuesday, were Cardinal Manning, Lord Wolseley and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

Mr. Gladstone's birthday gifts included, among other things, a red kerchief for his neck, at least a dozen bottles of his favorite wine, one mutton and three mince pies and a box of pills, the last named from the husband of the woman who forwarded the mutton pie.

A thousand boys in Spain since the death of the late king have been christened "Alfonso." Queen Christine was so touched by this proof of loyalty that she sent to No. 1,000, the son of a tradesman, a silver goblet and a savings bank book in which she had written these words: "To the thousandth Alfonso, from a woman made happy by two Alfonsos."

Henry B. Stanton, husband of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, died in New York yesterday, in the 82d year of his age. During the anti-slavery period he was one of the most aggressive of the abolition agitators, and was also a prominent newspaper writer for magazines. About two years ago he published his "Random Recollections," a volume of highly entertaining reminiscences.

A DAY'S RATION.

When I was born,
From all the love or hate Fate filled a mother,
Saying: "This be the portion, child, this single Love that a life's then shall daily draw
From her great affection—no less, no more."
All and always the existing circular Word
Main outer into that inner of my life.
Friends feed, joys fortunes, beauty and size
And whether I am angry or content
Doubted or credited, wicked or bent,
All go chalk into abstract wine.
And brim it now with the "another plan"
Of all the years how little it will hold,
How much runs over on the desert sands.
If a new Muse draw me with upraised ear,
And I uplift myself into its region,
Forget all else and grow absorbed in song
And all of the following hours of the day
Drag a chainless age.
To-day, when friends approach, and song
Is on my lips,
Brings back, or starlight smell of genius,
The little cup will not hold a tear more,
And all the costly liquor runs to waste;
Nor gives the jealous lord one diamond drop.
So to be husbanded for joyless days.
Why need I volumes, if one word suffice?
Why need I galleries, when a poor picture
After the master's stamp fills well my eye?
My appreciation? Why seek fully
Who cannot communicate the sea
Of thoughts and things at home, but still at home?
The nearest matters for a thousand days?
—[Emerson.

GENERAL AND CRITICULAR.

Mr. Lowell is to have a five-page poem in the February Atlantic.—Boston Traveller.

Let 'er go, Gallagher. We stopped our subscription at the close of '86.

The Princess of Wales is still in tears over the loss of her favorite dog, Rover, which had been her companion for twenty years.

Inscrutable are all the ways
Of Providence. She fails
To see why He should take the dog
And leave the Prince of Wales.

"Have you read any of Henry George's speeches?" asked a Congressman of Mrs. Rongwerd.

"No. I've been so busy in society I haven't had a moment of relaxation."

"Well, I advise you to read them. He is such a theorist."

"Indeed, is he? Why I thought he was an infidel!"

A prisoner who had been captured in New York was before a judge in Philadelphia.

"Where did you put up in New York?" asked the court.

"Put up?" repeated the prisoner, in surprise.

"Yes," said the court, "at what hotel?"

"I didn't put up at all. I beat the hotel. What do you take me for, anyhow?"

The railroads, at this writing, would very likely give a long haul rate for any distance, however short, if the train were carrying the remains of Senator Cullom.

Senatorial hopes are even greater than the watered stocks of railroad corporations.

It is reported that Mr. Spies, the condemned Anarchist, is to marry Miss Van Zandt of Chicago, a graduate of Vassar College. If the report be true, Mr. S. has probably given up all hope, and is preparing to make death a sweet relief.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller offered $100,000 for Miller's painting, "The Angelus," and the offer was rejected, which shows that a standard oil painting is greater than a standard oil check.

To sit and dream the long day through,
To deaden all the passions and the will,
To sit and dream and wonder who
Will furnish cash to pay that tailor's bill.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

Cardinal Gibbons will be accompanied to Rome next month by Rev. Father Donahue, his secretary.

Rev. F. G. Scott, of Orange County, Va., has accepted a call to St. John's P. E. Church at Petersburg.

Cardinal Gibbons will administer the rite of confirmation to-morrow at St. Mary's Industrial School in this city.

Rev. J. B. Chanchill, of Belair, Md., has been called to the rectorship of Whitemarsh P. E. parish, Talbot County.

Rev. W. D. Powers, late rector of St. Peter's Church, Rome, Ga., has taken charge of St. Paul's at Macon.

Rev. Francis Ryan has been appointed pastor of St. Ignatius' Catholic Church, Baltimore, to succeed the late Rev. P. P. Fitzpatrick.

Rev. Thomas R. March, pastor of Mount Savage M. E. Church, Allegany County, Md., died at that place January 10 of typhoid fever.

Rev. C. J. Forsythe will on Tuesday evening next be installed as pastor of the Barton Presbyterian Church, at Barton, Allegany County, Md., Rev. J. E. Moffatt of Cumberland presiding.

Rev. J. H. Eccleston, rector of Emmanuel P. E. Church, Baltimore, was married last Tuesday to Miss Helen McLeod Whitridge, daughter of Dr. Joseph B. Whitridge of Charleston, S. C.

The Baltimore conference of the M. E. Church South will meet in Leesburg, Va., March 9. The conference consists of 203 clerical and 203 lay delegates. Bishop Keener of New Orleans will preside.

Rev. W. W. Boyd, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, St. Louis, for the last ten years, will resign his pastorate and a salary of $6,000 on the 1st of June. He has no definite plans for the future, but will seek a smaller church.

Rev. Andrew Broaddus, many years pastor of the old Massaponnax Baptist Church in Spottsylvania County, has tendered his resignation, to take effect July 1, and has accepted a call to Bethel Church, Caroline County, Va.

Mr. Tilden's Way.

Mr. Tilden frequently invested in railroad stocks whenever there was a decline in the market or a chance to get in on the ground floor in a deal. It nettled him, however, to be considered a speculator. He would indignantly repudiate the characterization, and say: "I am an investor, not a speculator. I buy when I consider stocks are a good purchase; then I decide on the figure I will sell at, just as a grocer marks his selling price, and I sell whenever I can get my price, without reference to the market."—[Chicago Herald.

The Deacon and the Clams.

A good old deacon in Connecticut was very plous and fond of clams. When once upon a time he attended a Rhode Island clam-bake he overtaxed his capacity and was sorely distressed. But his faith in prayer was unabated. Leaving the party and going down on his knees behind a tree, he was heard to supplicate: "Forgive me, O Lord, this great sin of gluttony. Restore my health, and I will never eat any more clams." Then, after a pause, "Very few—if any. Amen."—[Lowell Courier.

The Oil on the Water.

Lady—All your marine pictures represent the sea as being calm. Why don't you paint a storm once in a while?

Artist—We painters in oil can't paint a storm. I have often outlined a storm on the canvas, but as soon as I begin to spread on the oil colors the waves subside and the sea becomes as calm as a duck pond.

Lady—Yes, I've read about the wonderful effect oil has in calming the waves, but I had no idea it was as effective as all that. —[Texas Siftings.

Too Much Brain Work.

Out on West Peachtree street the other day two negroes were engaged to reshingle the roof of a cottage. The mistress of the house noticed that one of the negroes nailed shingles steadily, while the other looked aghast at the fence in a languid way.

"And why don't you nail some shingles?" she asked.

"Ah, ma'am," replied the idler, "de brain work is de hardes' part!"

And so it is.—[Atlanta Constitution.
