Johannes and Catharina Were Arrested as They Left the Ship. Elopee from Holland, but Mybheer Von Seven Used the Cable to Catch Them.

New York, Sept. 24.—Among the passengers on board the steamship Oshana which arrived in port this morning, were Johannes Donker, twenty-eight years old, and Catharina von Seven, nineteen years old, who sought to make a home for themselves in America.

They had known each other for years in Holland and decided to face life's fortunes together, but the drastic laws of their native land soon interrupted their arrangements.

They were arrested by the United States customs officers at the New York harbor. The consul explained that according to law of Holland, a girl does not attain her majority until she is twenty-three years of age.

Donker had gone to the home of Catharina at Amsterdam to get permission of her parents to take her to his parents' home at Kijlverum, a few miles distant.

Instead of going there they went to Rotterdam and sailed from there on September 10. They had with them $750 belonging to Catharina, which her father held in trust, which she had taken to help start them in their new country.

Donker was held for extradition and Catharina agreed to return also, but they were locked up in Ludlow street jail.

Row Over a Game Led to the Cutting of Two Washington Men. While in an affray over a game of craps in Kojin about 5 o'clock last evening, Timothy Williams, of Georgetown, and Frank Levy, of South Washington, were severely cut about the arms and neck.

The men were among a crowd of white and black craps shooters, and trouble arose about a few pennies, culminating in a general fight, in which knives, stones and clubs figured as well as razors.

Levy and Williams had knives, and the other players say, were trying to carve their way from the crowd when they met and made several passes at each other.

Big Blaze in the Warehouse District of Philadelphia. One-Third of a Million Dollars Was Destroyed and Seven Buildings Were Badly Damaged.

Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—Shortly after 8 o'clock to-night fire was discovered in the six-story brick building No. 116 Chestnut street, occupied by Charles J. Webb & Co., dealers in yarns and woolens, and within a half hour no less than six adjacent buildings were in flames.

The blaze extended on the right to the buildings of Buckingham & Parson, cotton yarns, 120 Chestnut street, and James E. Mitchell, woolens, 122, and on the left to Richard A. Blythe, 114, and Keyser, Fisher & Co., 116. In these buildings, however, the flames were largely confined to the rear.

The Beek building was L-shaped, and was valued at about $750,000. It contained nearly 800,000 worth of stock, consisting of yarns and woolens, all of which was destroyed. Levy received a gash on the arm below the shoulder, and Williams a long gash on the forehead below the left ear. A negro was badly cut about the face in the melee and an unknown white man knocked down and nearly trodden to death. Several others of the gang were used up. All received treatment in this city.
