MISS WICH ASSAULTED

Beaten and Knocked Down by a Negro, Who Escaped.

HER SCREAMS BROUGHT AID

She Had Been Followed by the Unknown Brute Who Attacked Her Near Kalorama Heights—Injured Slightly and Very Hysterical—Insufficient Police Protection.

An outrageous assault was made last evening on Miss Catherine Wich, a comely German woman, by an unknown negro brute in the neighborhood of Kalorama Heights. In the struggle with her assailant Miss Wich's body was injured, it having been necessary to remove her to the Emergency Hospital for treatment.

The outrage was the cause of great and natural excitement in the neighborhood where it occurred, and the citizens were in that state of mind in which the capture of the fellow might have been followed by summary punishment.

Miss Wich, notwithstanding the brutal treatment and indignities to which she was subjected, remained quite calm until she was returned to her home, where the great strain under which she had labored for several hours resulted in a sudden and complete collapse, and she remained in a hysterical condition for several hours after being placed in the hands of her friends.

Her story, which was told circumstantially by a police officer, is as follows: She is about twenty years of age, and as her name denotes, is a German. She left her home, No. 1145 First street northeast, about 7 p. m., intending, in response to an advertisement, to offer herself as a cook. When she reached a point on R street near Twenty-first, she saw a colored man who had two books under his arm. He was very black, wore a light colored coat, light colored felt hat and dark pants.

SHE MET THE MAN.

She went up to him and asked to be directed to Twenty-second street and Florida avenue. He said it was two squares above and she resumed her walk in that direction, and noticed that the man followed her as far as Sheridan circle.

This alarmed her, and she concluded that the best thing to do was to return home. She turned round and said to him: "I am going home. It is getting late, and this is a very desolate-looking place."

The man immediately stepped up to her, and said: "I will see you home all right," and accompanied her words with a blow on her left cheek, which knocked her down. He struck her again in the eye.

She struggled to her feet, but without avail. During the desperate fight she screamed as loudly as she could, which brought the neighbors to her rescue. On seeing the people coming, her assailant picked up his books and rushed off.

One of those who went to the rescue and saw the help, the companion of the girl ran promptly to a drug store at the corner of New Hampshire avenue and Q street and telephoned to Police Station No. 3. The patrol wagon was sent out. When it arrived the girl was still lying on the ground near the edge of the park, where she had been removed by the neighbors.

The officers saw that Miss Wich was badly injured and at once removed her to the Emergency Hospital. Her wounds, which were bruises on the head and face and a laceration of her lower limb, were dressed, and she was taken to her home, where she broke down completely, as above stated.

The police are hunting for the man, and should find him. He was seen after the occurrence in a saloon at the corner of L and Twelfth streets. He was removed to the police station. The description given by Miss Wich, by one of the crowd who hurried away from the scene to the Third precinct to relate the story there. In the meantime he left the place and again disappeared.

ALMOST A NEW CHURCH

Unrivaled Beauty of the Decorations of St. Patrick's.

The Holy Spirit Store in Washington.

The interior of St. Patrick's Church on Tenth street presents a picture of unrivaled beauty and richness of decoration among the many handsome churches of Washington. The work of finishing the interior has been so far completed that a fair idea of the result may now be obtained by a visit to the church.

Notwithstanding the fact that the legend "No admittance" is on the doors, a very large number of people made a tour of the church yesterday, and there was no end to the complimentary and appreciative comment on the marvel of art which has been accomplished.

What remains to be finished is the grand new altar, only a portion of which is in position. Its components will be Cararra and Vermont marble and onyx. This will be in position in about six weeks.

The remodeling of the architectural design of St. Patrick's left ample opportunity for decoration. Outside and inside the principal lines are Gothic. The vaulted dome of the sanctuary, the elliptical curves of the ceiling, and the pretty little design of the choir are in line, and although each of the parts is distinct, they present one harmonious whole. There is also present opportunity for rich decoration on the entrances of the two chapels which flank the sanctuary, and some of the finest work has been done on the spacious lancet arches of these structures.

The lighting of the interior is all that could be desired. One of the principal sources is the large front window, which opens on the street, but from that point of view none of its brilliant effects is visible.

Other windows are on the north and south walls, and on the east around the sanctuary. There are also two double windows and two large rosette windows of cathedral glass or medallions on the north and south sides of the transept. The cost of the decoration has been about $25,000.

BRILLIANCE OF THE SCENE.

Entering through the rather somber blue-tinted front, which is in keeping with the ancient and pure style of Gothic architecture, one is struck with the splendor and brilliancy of the scene toward the sanctuary. This is especially observable late in the afternoon, when the sun streams through the rose-shaped window high up above the towers, and the electric light which has been called a mosaic of tender lights. The glass of this magnificent window is stained yellow, orange, blue, red and purple, and the light produces marvelous effects in coloring on the blue and gold of the grand decorations.

The ceiling of the sanctuary auditorium and choir is colored in light blue, on the ground of which are designs of effective distances, in arabesque. The other distinctive color is the gold of the arches, capitals of the aisle columns, and the altars. The altars are covered with gold from capitals to bases.

The only relief to these two colors are the natural wood of the choir, the highly polished brown Scotch granite colonnades on either side of the aisles, and deeper gold color in the staves work on the arches of the choir, which is the color of the earlier contrast in the white of the new altar, which will be conspicuous enough to tone the color of the sanctuary.

The ceiling of the sanctuary is, as stated, of light blue, the ground being studded with stars and arabesque designs in gold tones. The windows of the sanctuary are of cathedral glass, with purple and blue lights predominating. The ceiling is ornamented with ribbed arches, which spring from the capitals of pilasters at about half the height of the ceiling from the floor.

These arches intersect each other, at the points of intersection of carved wood work which electric lights suspend. There are two of these rosettes or medallions on the ceiling of the sanctuary. The arches are in gold tones, as are the pilasters and their Corinthian capitals.

BACKGROUND OF GOLD.

Beneath these windows are others extending around the sanctuary, but which are sunk in niches, and are of a different color. In these, sacred figures are painted on a background of gold.

The most prominent feature is the work which extends from the capitals of the Scotch granite columns to the ceiling of the auditorium. The capitals are Corinthian and are gilded richly, half hidden in tiers being groups of electric arc lights. Resting on the capitals of these columns, which are ten in number and cost $1,000 each, are lesser columns gilded and in the Corinthian style.

From the capitals of these rise to, and cross, the ceiling, the triple arc, and the lower range of windows are the well-known memorial windows and need no description.

Another conspicuous feature in the frescoer's work are a series of cherubim on the upper walls between the windows, and also the winged heads of angels. These have been put in with due regard to proportion, to height from the floor and are effective.

Nothing could be finer than the gorgeous work around the entrances to the chapels. The entrances are made to represent Gothic doorways. The arch of the entrance presents, triple curved lines, which rest on a pair of columns, and these are gilded from the capitals to the floor. Between the lines of the arches the space is filled in with a series of stars in stucco, or plaster, the tint being dark red gold.

STONE FROM ST. PETER'S.

The sanctuary floor is beautifully tiled. In the center is a large mosaic, and in the center of this is perhaps the most interesting of all the single features of the renovation. This is a piece of stone from St. Peter's Church at Rome, the gift of the pope to the Rev. Father Gloyl, the venerable and beloved pastor of St. Patrick's, who took the stone as a memento of his imagination to conjure up what a beautiful and rich picture the church will present when the altar is in place and the gorse-

NO WORD FROM GARDNER

Missing Freight Cashier Cannot Be Traced by His Friends.

The B. & P. R. R. Company's Agent Says $3,500 Has Been Taken—Several Theories Advanced.

Nothing has yet been heard from Charles Clinton Gardner, the missing cashier of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad freight office, who is charged by the company officials with being a defaulter to the extent of $3,500, as told in yesterday's Evening Times.

Since the evening of September 10, when he called at the drug store of his brother-in-law, Dr. C. S. Price, at No. 426 Seventh street southeast, to obtain a bundle he left there he has not been seen, and it is the general impression that he left the city that evening.

Gardner announced at the office about a fortnight ago that he intended to take a vacation, and his fellow clerks supposed he had gone to his country home at Falls Church. Nothing was known or even suspected of anything crooked in his accounts until the 16th inst., when an examination of the books of the office disclosed a shortage. Mr. R. L. Franklin, the company's agent here, at once set out on foot investigation, and it was found that Gardner's accounts were short at least $3,500, and further investigation, it is said, may show more.

It was reported to Inspector Hollinger, but he was told to do nothing in the matter. It is understood, however, that the detectives in the employ of the road are making strenuous efforts to locate Gardner.

Mr. Franklin said yesterday that the money was taken in two amounts, the positions being within a few days of each other. The company is protected from loss, however, as Gardner was under bond, a Philadelphia trust company being his surety. If the railroad company fails to apprehend him, his bondsmen are likely to spare no effort to bring him to justice.

Gardner had resided during the summer with his wife at Falls Church, and the first information Mrs. Gardner had of his disappearance was when an agent of the company called at his house. She had supposed him to be at his work, and was completely prostrated when told that he had disappeared. She left Falls Church at once, and went to the home of her sister, at No. 4 North Carolina avenue, where she is still staying.

Mr. Charles H. Bates, a lawyer, and a close friend of the missing cashier, was retained by Mrs. Gardner to look after the case, and he expressed himself yesterday as being firm in his conviction that Gardner was wrongly accused. He said that his friend was a man of very nervous temperament and had probably been spoken to by someone in regard to a possible shortage. Becoming frightened he belted without thinking of the consequence.

Mr. Bates did not know where Gardner was yesterday, but said that he would locate him as soon as possible and learn from him the facts. He said that it would be utterly futile for Gardner to attempt to hide himself, as he was too well known in this part of the country. There was no doubt, he said, that he would be able to vindicate Gardner.

Several theories have been advanced as to the disappearance of the money. Gardner's previous reputation making it difficult for many to believe that he is a defaulter. It was suggested that some other employee of the road, or someone familiar with the workings of the office may have taken advantage of the cashier's absence to purloin the cash and shift the blame on him, or that the charges may be the result of malice. Nothing will be left undone by the friends of the accused to establish his innocence, however, if such a thing is possible.

grose cereonials of the mass are in evidence.

As it is, the effect, either from the choir to the altar, or from the sanctuary to the choir, is exceedingly attractive. The eye is met with an array of blue and gold, resting here on a dark background or prominent to the eye in the curves of the arches, or on the vaulted ceilings.

Yet with all this mass of beauty in architectural design or placing of the colors, there is nothing confusing. The lines are, in fact, severely simple, but by frequent repetition they give one the sense of richness and variety.

With the exception of the sharp angles which serve as pinnacles or caps over the lower tier of windows in the sanctuary, the only lines anywhere in the church are the finest curves of the arches and the spherical and elliptical surfaces of the ceilings. There has been no attempt at an ostentatious effect or the tricks of the Renaissance, or, worse than that, the gingerbread style of architecture. The interior, in truth, is in gold keeping with the classical of the exterior. It is a dream in blue and gold.

The fresco and painting were done by Emmert & Quartley, of Baltimore. The marble altar is being erected by Mallan & Son; the electric light plant, by Galloway, of this city; the electric fixtures, by Columbia, of New York, and the tiling of the sanctuary floor, by Hayward & Hutchinson, of this city.

The Eucharistic congress will be opened in this church on October 2, and not in St. Matthew's, as is often erroneously stated. Mr. Batelli will pontificate at the mass at 11 a. m., and the services will be preached by the Right Rev. Dr. Keane, of the Catholic University.

DURRANT MAKES DEFENSE

His Mother the First Witness in His Behalf.

TELLS OF HIS CLOTHING

Her Description Radically Different From That of Witnesses for the Prosecution—Tracing His Movements on the Day of the Murder. Chisel Found in the Pastor's Study.

San Francisco, Sept. 25.—Attorney Durrant, for the defense in the Durrant case, made his opening statement this morning. He said he would show that on the morning of April 3 Durrant left his home for that of George King for the purpose of making arrangements for the latter to help him fix the gas apparatus in Emmanuel Church in the afternoon. He met Blanche Edmont on Twenty-first and Mission streets.

She was waiting for a car to take her to the high school and invited him to take a ride with her. He left her at the high school and continued on his way to Cooper Medical College, where he remained until about 3:30 o'clock or later.

DURRANT'S WHEREABOUTS.

It would be shown by the college records and otherwise that Durrant had attended the lecture, which would take him up to about 3 o'clock; that he left the college at 3:30, took a car, and reached Emmanuel Church at five minutes to five o'clock.

Witnesses would be introduced to prove this, and that when he reached the church he went into the library room, left his coat and hat there, and then went up stairs to fix the gas-burners, where he was overcome by gas. Everything that occurred in the church subsequently, as stated by King, would be admitted. It would be shown that Durrant saw King home from church and then proceeded to his own home, where he ate his supper and after a short time retired.

The defense will further show that the accused wore an entirely black suit on that day, and this will disprove the testimony of Mrs. Vogel, who swore he wore a light pair of trousers. Mrs. Leach's testimony would also be proved to be valueless, as her sight is defective. As to the witness Oppenheimer, it would be shown he was visited by a young man who wore a blue overcoat, as Oppenheimer had described, and who offered rings for sale similar to those of the murdered girl, but that the pawnbroker was entirely mistaken as to his visitor being the defendant.

In the course of his statement, Mr. Durrant announced that he would take the stand.

HIS MOTHER'S TESTIMONY.

After a recess Mrs. Matilda Durrant, mother of the prisoner, took the stand as the first witness for the defense. She testified on the morning of April 3 her son was dressed in a blue chevrot suit, the blue trousers of which she identified and the garment was introduced in evidence. Mrs. Durrant stated that her son returned home that evening shortly after 6 o'clock, dressed in the same blue chevrot suit. He wore an overcoat. She testified that the trousers were made to order by a local tailor.

When Theodore left home on the morning of April 3 he kissed his mother good-bye and called her in the same manner when he returned at night. The family dined that evening at 6:15, but the witness said Theodore had little appetite and he didn't look well. At 8 o'clock that evening he took his mother to a street car, and when she returned at 11:30 he was in bed and asked Police Sergeant Reynolds described the chisel marks on the bell door. He searched for a tool with which the mark might have been made and in the pastor's study found a chisel which fitted the marks exactly.

HIS DEATH A MYSTERY.

Editor Schwarz's Family Refuse to Talk About It.

New York, Sept. 25.—Anton Schwarz, managing director of the United States Brewers' Academy, publisher of the American Brewer and the leading expert in the country on brewing matters, died suddenly at a nearby house this morning at the residence of a Mrs. Baldwin, of East Twenty-sixth street. Considerable mystery surrounds the circumstances of his death and the members of the family refuse to make public any statement concerning it. His eldest son, Max Schwarz, said to a reporter: "I refuse to say when, where or how my father died. I have nothing to say except that his remains will be cremated to-morrow at the Fresh Pond crematory."

Mr. Schwarz had just returned from a trip to Philadelphia when he died. The coroner was notified and finally issued a permit for burial. Mrs. Baldwin and everyone else who knew anything of the case refused to talk about it. Mr. Schwarz leaves a widow, three sons and a daughter. Telegrams of condolence are being received from many brewers.

FITZSIMMONS AND HIS LION.

Piece of His Leg Torn Off by the Cub.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 25.—Bob Fitzsimmons stopped over here to-night and gave a sparring exhibition at the Columbia. His cub lion came within an ace of knocking him out before the curtain was raised. Fitzsimmons was feeling the brute in his dressing-room. The cub was not satisfied with his allowance and seized a large chunk of beef which was intended for his breakfast.

Fitz tried to take it away. He threw the cub on his head. Quick as a flash the brute turned on his back and made a swipe at Fitz. "One claw closed on a leg and pulled away some of the flesh and half the garment. The lion showed fight. He was subdued by a bucket of ice water. Fitz was painfully hurt, but was not seriously injured. The party leave here for Corpus Christi in the morning.

FIGHTING IN FORMOSA.

Japanese Capture Two Towns After a Desperate Resistance.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 25.—The Nova Yvetzka has received a dispatch from the Novotroick that the Japanese captured Changhua and Taitan-Fu, in Formosa, at the end of August.

The rebels made a desperate resistance, and the two towns were taken only after severe fighting.

Subsequently the Japanese marched on Anpin, where the rebel forces are concentrated. There are 60,000 Japanese troops in Formosa, but 3,200 are sick in the hospitals, and all the troops are exhausted from their campaign in which they have been engaged. The Japanese government will send reinforcements to the island.

Will Come Again Nevermore.

London, Sept. 25.—In an interview to-day Commodore Glennie said that he did not attach much importance to the challenge of Lord Durrant's colors for the America's cup. He also expressed his belief that Lord Durrant's colors would never be seen in America again.

McGILL HAS A SURE THING

New Jersey Democrats Will Name Him for Governor.

Fine Work on the Part of the Machine Will Alone Prevent His Nomination Today.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 25.—All the indications point to the nomination of the man McGill for governor by the Democratic convention, which meets here to-morrow. There have been no very warm contests and most of the delegates will come to the convention unpledged.

In the rural districts there has been a very strong sentiment for Augustus W. Carter, who has been making a tour of the state, particularly among the farmers, but in the cities and counties where McGill has a little feeling but no real support for McGill is likely to be nominated on the first ballot. The leaders all look at it in this way and they anticipate a very lame convention.

The champion of McGill means the overthrow of the party machine. One of the conditions on which he will accept the nomination is that he will resign his present position as the executive committee to manage the campaign.

He has the sympathy of the old regime and will therefore, ask for new men. This will undoubtedly split the party, but the result of the campaign with men at the head who are inexperienced in political management is very uncertain.

CARDWELL NOW INDICTED.

Bookkeeper in a Richmond Bank Charged With Irregularities.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25.—The grand jury of the austing court today continued consideration of the case in which Mr. Samuel B. Nelson, the livery man, was allowed to largely overdraw his account at the State bank, and found four true bills of indictment against Mr. Richard W. Cardwell, late bookkeeper in that institution, whose resignation was tendered as a result of the irregularities appearing upon the bank's ledger.

The sum involved aggregates $6,128.82, while the actual amount of the overdraw far exceeds that sum. It is generally believed that Mr. Cardwell will return to the city as soon as he is apprised of the jury's action. His friends are confident that he is not guilty of having had any criminal intent in anything that he has done.

MURDERED HIS COMPANION.

A Tramp Fires Five Bullets Into Another's Brain.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 25.—Lindgripport, a small village on the Cumberland, was the scene of a brutal murder this evening.

Two rough-looking tramps crossed the river bridge this afternoon and took full possession of the town, threatening to kill all who opposed them.

One of them carried two big revolvers and jugged them, cowboy fashion. They had a fierce fight, and one whipped the other, and then they shook hands and resumed their reign of terror, but at 7 o'clock the fellow with the revolvers stole up behind his companion and fired five bullets into his head, killing him instantly.

He then ran away and dared anyone to follow him. He has not been apprehended.

David Hughes Returns After Being Mourned as Dead.

Never Came Back From the War and for Thirty Years Was in the West Accumulating Wealth.

Indiana, Pa., Sept. 25.—Last evening David Hughes, formerly of Estler county, after an unexplained absence of thirty years, rejoined his family of wife, son, and daughter, who have resided here about eight years. The reunion was a most joyous one.

Hughes was wounded during the war, came home, and married Miss M. P. Reed, of Kittanning. In 1864 he returned to the army, and in 1865 was honorably discharged.

Instead of returning home Hughes buried himself in the plerities of Wisconsin. His wife mourned him as dead. Hughes had never seen his son, now thirty years of age.

Hughes has accumulated considerable wealth, and says he is now too happy to discuss the particulars of his absence and long continued silence.

NOT PURELY BRITISH.

American Is Associated With Rose in the Cup Challenge.

London, Sept. 25.—The United Press has obtained the following authentic information concerning Mr. Charles D. Rose, who, through the Royal Victoria Yacht club of Ryde, Isle of Wight, has challenged for the America's cup.

Mr. Rose is the second son of the late Sir John Rose, baronet, of Canada. His mother was Miss Emmet-Temple, of Rutland, Vt.

It is understood that Mr. Lowe, an American gentleman, who has some horses in training in England, is associated with Mr. Rose in building the new challenger for the cup and experts, therefore, do not regard the enterprise as of purely English origin.

Sir John Rose, the father of the challenger for the cup, assumed the management of the financial affairs of the Duchy of Cornwall for the Prince of Wales when he settled in England fifteen years ago and is credited with having greatly improved the finances of his royal highness during his administration.

Struck His Wife With a Hatchet.

Charles Johnson, colored, was arrested yesterday evening by the police of the Fourth precinct and locked up at the station house, charged with assault with intent to kill on his wife, Alice Johnson. The woman was sitting in her front door, crying over some abuse from her husband, and began to quarrel with him. During the row, Johnson finding his own eloquence insufficient to quiet her, seized a hatchet and struck her across the head. She was taken to the Emergency Hospital and the brutal husband locked up.

London, Sept. 25.—The Morning Post to-morrow will print a dispatch from its Berlin correspondent saying that it is considered improbable that Baron Von Hammerstein, the alleged forger, will be captured, inasmuch as there are several countries in which he may safely take refuge, as they have no extradition treaties with Germany. It is reported that the fugitive is now in the Island of Corfu.
