Former Champion Unable to Make Long Trip Because of Pressure of Business

By Fred Hawthorne. A sensation was sprung last night by the Davis Cup Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association when it was announced that Richard Norris Williams, 2d, of Boston, had resigned from the international team that will leave for New Zealand next month in search of the famous trophy.

Choice Open to Argument

At first glance the choice of Washburn seems open to considerable argument, for the West Side man has had his bumps during the season just closed. The names of Willis Davis, of California, and Robert Roberts, of California, Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia, S. Howard Vesseli, of Brooklyn, and Vincent Richards, of Brooklyn, naturally come to mind when the name of Williams is mentioned.

Richards Has Beaten Stars

Richards not only won the singles at Southampton, against a field that included Clothier, Washburn and Cane, but paired with Ralph H. Burdick, of Chicago, in the doubles, defeating Tilden and Charles Johnston in the final round, and purely through the brilliance of his individual play, the seventeen-year-old boy also gave Tilden his hardest defeat in the national singles up to the semi-final round.
