Mrs. Mallory Drops Set in Tennis Victory—Wilson Defends Ring Title Here To-night

Net Champion Rallies in Tilt With Hub Girl

Miss Sigourney Beaten After Taking Opening Set; Miss Zinderstein Wins Again

By Fred Hawthorne

BOSTON, March 16. — Miss Edith Sigourney, of the Longwood Cricket Club, achieved lasting fame this afternoon by taking a set from Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the national turf court champion, in the third round of the women's national indoor championship lawn tennis tournament, on the Longwood covered courts, at Chestnut Hill. Playing a plendid driving game from deep court, Miss Sigourney only succumbed after the sets had gone to 2—6, 6—0, 6—3.

In that first set the Boston girl played better tennis than I have yet seen her show, trading deep court drives with the national champion stroke for stroke, and actually beating Mrs. Mallory at her own game. The Norse girl apparently was taken by surprise by the vigor of Miss Sigourney's forcing attack, and the latter ran into a lead of 3—1 on games before the champion could make a stand.

There were many spirited driving duels from the base line, but Miss Sigourney was not to be denied at this stage and ran out the set in decisive manner. Not only was her driving superior to Miss Mallory's, but the Longwood player also showed fine judgment in coming in behind her forcing shots to finish off her points at the net by sharp volleying or smashing.

Champion Makes Misplays

Mrs. Mallory seemed unable to concentrate on the match in this set. She made numerous errors as she drove into the net and out of court, nor did her shots carry the sting that distinguished Miss Sigourney's.

At the start of the second set, however, the national title holder realized she was in danger, and then she began playing with that sweep and fierce aggressiveness that has proved irresistible so many times before. The exchanges between the two grew in speed and space, but now Mrs. Mallory was hitting the ball more cleanly and scoring beautifully on splendid placement shots. It was not that Miss Sigourney had let down appreciably in her own game, but that Mrs. Mallory was going at her old whirlwind clip that accounted for the sudden shift in the tide of battle.

After taking that second set at love and squaring the match, the champion again began to play unevenly, making glaring errors off both fore and back hand. Miss Sigourney, who was beginning to tire from the furious pace, ran into a lead of 3—1, and for a time those present thought they were about to witness one of the most sensational tennis upsets of the last four or five years.

But it was not to be, for Mrs. Mallory again got a grip on herself and began a fierce attack, driving, volleying and forcing the net more frequently than is her custom, and she was placing her returns so accurately that Miss Sigourney wore out her strength in chasing the ball. Mrs. Mallory took the last five games in a row, for the set at 6—3 and the match.

Miss Zinderstein Advances

Miss Zinderstein, who probably will face Mrs. Mallory on Friday in the semi-final round, continued her uninterrupted march through the field, this time defeating Miss Rosamond Newton, of Longwood, 6—0, 6—2. An idea of the pace at which the little clay court champion is going may be gathered when I say that in three matches she has lost only one game, a considerable accomplishment in a national tournament.

Miss Zinderstein played to-day with all her customary versatility, relying upon no particular shot to gain her ends, but combining severe ground strokes with crisp volleying and decisive smashing.

Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole, who defeated Miss Phyllis Walsh, Florida champion, by a score of 6—4, 7—5 this morning, showed some of the best driving of the tournament as she fairly tore into the ball after the manner of Billy Johnston. Miss Walsh was powerless before the onslaught in the first set. In the second set the tall Philadelphia girl worked into a lead of 5—2 on games, but then Miss Walsh had one of her unaccountable lapses and Mrs. Cole ran out the last four games for the set and match.

Miss Martha Bayard, the Short Hills N. J. junior, defeated Miss Anna Fuller at 6—2 6—0, displaying the same sound tennis that has been the case all week. Tomorrow she meets Miss Zinderstein for a place in the semi-final round. Miss Florence Ballin defeated Mrs. Bernard F. Stenz at 8—6 9—7.

The doubles also started to-dey, with twenty-four combinations entered.

Advancing civilization continues to grow more and more complex. You either step into a tunnel down below, a fast one on level ground or an air pocket if you leave the earth. Civilization merely means that many more bunkers to the course of existence. Take the case of Judge Landis. He has the baseball muddle to clear up. And three thousand years ago all Hercules had to clean out was the Augean stables.

Trailing Gelett Burgess

I've never lamped a five-base hit,
And yet I'd like to lamp one.
These modern rules won't stand for it.
And bli'me how, they cramp one!

I've never holed a brassie rap,
My best is often punker.
But what a pipe it is to slap
A drive into a bunker!

How Long Before They Learn?

Organized baseball showed a passionate reluctance, amounting to a keen abhorrence, toward taking up the White Sox scandal. Organized baseball finally moved when it was pushed over the cliff.

The developments of that affair offered O. B. a fine opportunity to learn something connected with sudden action and quick publicity. What did O. B. learn? Not a lap-eared thing.

Then followed the Benton-Herzog muddle—then the Zimmerman flare-up. Again, was there any sudden leap to clear up the scandal brought on? Again, there was not. Always the old cry—"These things hurt the game." Apparently it has never occurred to organized baseball in its fifty years of existence that the public has anything to do with the game or any rights to be respected.

It has never occurred to any one to let the public know precisely what is going on, without waiting a year or two.

"These things hurt the game"——

They do. Especially "these things" that consist of balking or attempting to cover up every scandal that develops.

This is where Judge Landis will have his greatest chance. There is nothing in connection with any scandal that a baseball magnate knows which the baseball public is not entitled to know as well.

The Livelier Ball

It is with no intention of yawping at the modern batting eye that we call attention to a few vital statistics connected with the modern baseball used.

Just how much livelier the present baseball is than the ball used eight years ago we can't say. But you can do a bit of surmising on your own hook after perusing these figures:

In 1913 the hard hitting Athletics, with Collins, Baker, McInnis, Strunk, Schang, Oldring and others at work, accumulated 1,413 base hits for a grand average of .285.

Last year St. Louis gathered 1,615 hits for a grand average of .308. Also it might be noted that St. Louis, Cleveland, Chicago and Washington all had a higher club average last season than the slashing Mackmen had eight years ago.

In Addition

This testimony isn't all of it. In 1913 the eight American League clubs managed to disperse a total of 158 home runs, using practically the same bats and the same ball parks in use to-day.

But last year the eight American League clubs ran up a total of 370 home runs, or well more than double the 1913 output.

It isn't unlikely, of course, that even with the same ball some increase might have been noted, although that old Mackian machine was a whale with the mace.

But to find four ball clubs of to-day outbatting that machine by many points and to find the home run deposit lifted from 158 to 370 are proof enough that the ball's inlay has been injected with about 50 per cent more pep.

Not that any secret has been made of the case or that any scandal is involved. If the ecstatic fanatic esteems the Big Blooie above everything else, why not give it to him?

But when it comes to comparing late batting records with those made a few years ago, the comparison doesn't stand.

In 1913, when Collins was at his best, he batted .345. Last season, seven years older, he batted .369. In 1914 Collins scored 125 runs on 184 hits. Last year he scored 115 runs on 222 hits.

As a spectacle the livelier ball helps the game. The 212 additional home runs struck off last season over 1913 merely meant an additional 212 page-cracking thrills. We have never seen a crowd yet leave a ball park growling because too many home runs were pelted over the palings. Not yet. Nor very soon.

The next move should be for a livelier football that you can kick seventy-five or eighty yards on a fly. Then you'll get action—plus nine.

Cochran Proves Easy For Young Schaefer

Jake Schaefer, of Chicago, made quick work of defeating Walker Cochran, of Detroit, in the two opening blocks of their 1,200 point 18.2 match at the Strand billiard parlors yesterday afternoon and last night. Schaefer completed the night block of 300 in three innings, winding up his evening performance with an unfinished dun of 280 points. Cochran scored 188 points in his three turns.

The Detroiter put up a weak opposition in the afternoon, scoring only 28 points. Schaefer also was off his pace and went ten innings.

12 Challengers Paired in Test For Davis Cup

Teams Placed in Order of Competition to Fight for World Tennis Trophy

In the presence of representatives of several challenging nations and officeds of the United States Lawn Tennis Association the drawing for the Davis Cup competition took place yesterday afternoon in the office of the local association.

With challenges from twelve countries, the greatest entry in the history of competition for the trophy which William Tilden 2d, and William Johnston recently brought back to this country from Australia, it was necessary to place only eight competitors in the first round. The other four took byes, which were equally divided between the upper and lower halves.

It was a "blind" draw. That is, the name of each entry was written on a card, the twelve cards were placed face down on a table and after being shuffled were drawn at random. Here is the result:

FIRST ROUND

Spain vs. British Isles.
Canada vs. Australia.
Japan vs. Philippines
Czecho-Slovakia vs. Belgium.

BYES

Argentine vs. Denmark.
India vs. France.

Nations all Notified

The winner of the Argentine-Denmark match will meet the winner in the upper half of the first round and either India or France will meet the team victorious in the lower half.

Immediately following the drawing notice of the outcome was cabled to all the competing nations, and the cup committee will shortly determine the date by which the first-round matches must be completed. In event of disagreement on this point decision will be reached by arbitration.

Until the nations involved have had an opportunity to arrange their preliminary matches it is impossible to tell what matches will be played here, but it seems likely that at least six contests will be decided in this country.

The Spain-Great Britain and Czecho-Slovakia matches will likely be played in Europe, while the Australians are expected to meet the Canadians on United States soil.

Japanese Match Here

Largely because Kumagae and Kashi, in whom Japan places its hope, are residents of this country, the Far East tilt between Japan and the Philippines probably will be played here. Argentina and Denmark, it is believed, will play in the United States and France will entertain India's representatives.

The American team will meet the winner of the semi-finals for the Davis Cup at Forest Hills, L. I., on September 3.

Among those present at the draw were Mark Sheldon, Government Commissioner of Australia; Gaston Tisne, of the French High Commission; Julian S. Myrick, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association; Robert D. Wrenn, former president; Charles S. Landers, president of the Metropolitan Tennis Association; Beals C. Wright, of the Davis Cup Committee; S. Wallis Merrihew, O. L. Becker and other tennis enthusiasts.

Canada Gives Dufresne Amateur Hockey Card

MONTREAL, March 16.—George Dufresne, Canadian hockey player, whose eligibility as an amateur had been questioned, to-day was granted his amateur card by the registration committee of the Quebec branch of the Amateur Hockey Association.

His suit to compel the committee to restore him to the amateur ranks was dismissed.

BOSTON, March 16.—The executive committee of the United States Hockey Association, at a meeting here to-night, decided to initiate an arrangement by which, beginning next season, the championship hockey teams of the colleges will play the champions of the several groups of the United States Association for the national title.

As a means of making uniform the systems of play it was voted that the association should recommend that the colleges of the United States accept six-man hockey. Harvard, acknowledged champion this year, already has indicated that it will change from the seven-man system next season. It was voted also that, effective next year, members of college teams should be eligible to play with clubs of their choice after the college season ends.

Mexico City May Have Races

O'Dowd Confident He Will Regain Middleweight Crown

Champion Rules 8–5 Favorite Over Predecessor for 15-Round Contest

By W. J. Macbeth

Greater New York, at Madison Square Garden to-night, will see its first middleweight championship bout in four years, when Johnny Wilson defends his title through fifteen rounds against Mike O'Dowd, whom he bested for the crown. The champion rules favorite at 8 to 5.

This should be a fight worthy of the occasion. The occasion, as every one knows (or should know), is St. Patrick's Day, and Mike is out to make it a red letter day for the patron saint of the Emerald Isle.

For various reasons the middleweight division seems to have been sadly neglected of late. There is a certain psychology to prizering appeal. In styles and sizes it runs in cycles, like milady's taste for fashion. There was a time not so long ago when the best of our heavies couldn't get a passing glance, though good heavyweight attractions are always at a premium. The fault, doubtless, was with the crop of heavies, such as they were.

Just now the little men seem to be in popular favor; none more so than the flyweights, the bantams and the feathers. Benny Leonard stands so far above the lightweights that interest in this perennial shrine had dwindled to next to nothing until Rocky Kansas relighted the torch by knocking out Richie Mitchell. But wherever there has been a lack of interest in any division invariably, an investigation will show, there is also a lack in well-balanced class in that particular division.

Great Middles in Old Days

In the old days the middleweight was one of our most popular classes. A scattering few of its heroes conjure the shades of Ruby Bob Fitzsimmons, Tommy Ryan, Steve Ketchell, Billy Papke and George Chip.

Half a dozen years ago the class went into disrepute. Al McCoy, a southpaw, won the crown by knocking out George Chip. Most every one thought it was a lucky punch, a fluke, that turned the trick. This opinion was solidified by McCoy's actions. He immediately went into his shell and would fight nobody but "marks." He finally bumped into O'Dowd and his Waterloo at the Clermont Rink, in Brooklyn, on the last day of the Frawley law, back in 1917.

Because he refused to fight the tough ones McCoy became known as the "cheese" champion. His traducers declare he was a fluke and rejoiced when O'Dowd flattened him. O'Dowd was a popular champion. He fought them all as fast as they could come. He won his title by a knockout; he lost it to Wilson by a referee's decision after fighting twelve rounds in Boston last May. That decision has since come in for a lot of argument. There are those who maintain that Mike was robbed.

Be that as it may, to-night may decide. The fact remains that the men seem pretty evenly matched, as the accompanying box of comparisons will show. Even since he lost the crown O'Dowd has been on Wilson's trail for a return engagement. There are those who believe that in accepting this match he planned to take Mike unawares. Mike, however, is willing to abide by to-night's result.

Champion Comparatively Unknown

For O'Dowd it may be said he has fought them all in his class. Wilson has not. He was comparatively unknown before he was awarded the decision over Mike. He was born in Harlem of Italian parents. He left the city two years ago as a fourth rate preliminary fighter. The most money he ever got for an engagement before winning the championship was $65 in Philadelphia. He earned $1,200 with the title. His right name is Giovanni Francisco Panica.

O'Dowd, who is 25 years of age, one year Wilson's junior, was raised in St. Paul. He has been boxing eight years. He has held his own in no-decision bouts with Billy Miske and Soldier Bartfeld. He beat Mike Gibbons in ten rounds in St. Paul after he won the championship. He has defeated Italian Joe Gans, Jack McCarren and Ted (Kid) Lewis.

There will be two corking ten-rounders before to-night's final. In one Joe Benjamin, the Pacific Coast lightweight, will hook up with George Erne of Buffalo. Lieutenant Earl Baird, of Seattle, will box Joe Gorman in the other.

Gibbons to Box at Pioneer

Charles Doesserick, of the Pioneer Sporting Club, has signed Tom Gibbons, of St. Paul, for three local bouts. Gibbons, who is in town and is being managed by his brother, Mike, will make his first appearance here next Tuesday night in a fifteen-round bout with Paul Sampson. The winner of the Bob Roper-Homer Smith battle to-morrow night will meet Gibbons in one of the other mills. On Saturday night, at the Pioneer club, Jimmy O'Gatty will meet Oakey Keyes in he feature bout.

Frankie Jerome will box Pete Herman fifteen rounds at the Commonwealth Sporting Club on the night of Wednesday, March 30. This bout was originally scheduled for New Orleans the night that Bob Roper and Marty Burke fought there, but was postponed. On Saturday night, at the Commonwealth, Jerome will box twelve rounds with Frankie Daly.

The Flatbush Sporting Club will present Charlie Weinert and "Battling" Levinsky in their main event to-morrow night. In what betting has been seen so far Weinert is the favorite.

Soldier Bartfield, who will box Italian Joe Gans in the fifteenround feature of the Broadway Exhibition Association, Brooklyn, next Monday night, is able to indulge in road work for the first time since he injured his knee previous to a bout with Benny Leonard last year. The Soldier declares he will stick to the welter division, now that he can train properly, and has visions of wearing Jack Britton's crown before many months slip away.

Tiger Five Eradicates Sting of Yale Defeat

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 16.—Princeton defeated Yale at basketball to-night, 24 to 17. The Orangemen breezed into an 11 to 0 lead before Yale got under way through eleven diagonal shots for the basket by Jeffries, Captain Ophie and Legendre, but long goals by Captain Flyn and Alderman closed the first half with the Tigers leading by only 16 to 9. Yale defeated Princeton in a game last month.

Penn Defeats Green Quintet To Take Title

Supremacy in Basketball Is Undisputed After Clean-Cut Victory at Hanover

Special Dispatch to The Tribune

HANOVER, N. H., March 16.—Pennsylvania won the 1921 championship in the Intercollegiate Basketball League here to-night when the Red and Blue five defeated Dartmouth, 31—16. The Penn quintet went to the fore a few seconds after the start of the game and was never headed.

Faced with defeating the Green in order to have a clear title to the league championship, the Pennsylvanians showed the Dartmouth fans the fastest exhibition of basketball seen here in recent years and, except for a few minutes at the start of the second half, outplayed the home five completely. The first half ended 17—6, in Penn's favor.

Penn drew first blood, Graves rushing down the floor and netting a basket from close quarters. His teammates followed this lead with a rush and had ten points hung up before the Green started. Dartmouth did little until the second half opened when they began with a rush and brought the score to 14-13, before the Red and Blue players got control of the situation.

Dartmouth was forced to do most of the shooting from long range. Both McNichol and Cullen were off form, and Huntzinger and Rosenast were the outstanding Penn players. Summary:

Penn.		Dartmouth.
Rosenast	R. F.	Yuill
Huntzinger	L. F.	Cullen
Grave	C.	Chamberlaine
Millar	R. G.	Voegelin
Heep	L. G.	McNichol

Field baskets—Penn, Huntzinger (4), Grave (4), Voegelin (3), McNichol, Rosenast, Dartmouth, Millar (2), Yuill (2), Cullen, Chamberlaine. Free throws—McNichol, 5 out of 8; Cullen, 4 out of 6. Substitutions—Penn, Millar for Huntzinger.
