

THE EVENING CRITIC. Published daily (Sundays Excepted) by The Evening Critic Publishing Company, 331 NINTH STREET NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Tuesday, April 29, 1885.

AMUSEMENTS TO-NIGHT. Alhambra's Grand Opera House—The White Horse.

An Overburdened Official. It was an Ohio statesman who said, "Let me support the postmasters of this country, and I care not who runs the newspapers."

His First Lesson. Amid a shower of orange-blossoms and under the sweet perfume of an early spring-time, Consul-General Morgan will shortly take his first lesson in diplomacy.

The Streets of Reform. The streets of Washington are among the crowning glories of the Federal Capital.

The Fashion in Gloves. "What style of glove will be worn by the ladies this summer?"

What Cleveland is Doing for the West. Wall B. Butler of West Union has been given a most agreeable reception at the place and Dubuque, Thank Heaven! He will now be able to wear an entire pair of pants at once, a thing he could not do before.

Mr. Gladstone's Speech. That was a significant scene in the House of Commons, yesterday, when Mr. Gladstone asked for his credit of $35,000,000.

THE WASHINGTON correspondent of the New York Sun says that sooner or later the differences in Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet will become so serious as to necessitate its dissolution.

PERSONS who are about to leave the city for the summer can have THE CRITIC forwarded to them, by leaving their names and address at the business office.

Mr. Alex. Hunter, recently associated with Mark M. Pomeroy in the publication of the United States Democrat, severed his connection with the paper to-day.

How does General Hazen account for the area of unreasonably low temperature just now prevailing between our esteemed morning contemporaries on the corner of Tenth and D?

Mr. Armistead Randolph, son of Major James Randolph, and Miss Theresa Carrere Macken, were married at Christ Church, Baltimore, last evening, by Rev. W. Williams.

Charles A. Longfellow and Miss Longfellow, son and daughter of the poet, are at Newport, R. I.

It is something to know that one's services have been recognized in the Cabinet of a President who has characterized him throughout his long connection with President Cleveland, he fought back the twin demons of overwork and malaria until exhausted nature forced him to yield the fight, and he retired temporarily to recover from his wounds.

At any rate Mr. Morgan has determined that, whatever his duties to the Government, his first obligation is to realize those promises of "A castle and a red summer" which he must have given the handsomely "familiar" whom he now goes to bed.

Therefore, let the wedding march begin, the marriage-bell be sounded, and the festivities of the day close amid the innocent love's happy union. This time Mr. Morgan has the "bulge" on the boys. His Democracy can no longer be impeached.

In this era of reform which promises so many clear and wholesome things—and especially that the eve of a hot summer when dirt least consists with salubrity—such things should not be.

We are, therefore, glad to be assured that they are not to be much longer. The trouble is that just now there is not money enough to the square yard. The contractors sweep all they are paid for sweeping.

The committee having in charge the building of funds for the Barthold pedestal announcing that every subscriber sends $1 to the committee, at No. 55 Liberty street, New York, will receive a miniature counterpart of the great statue. There should be many thousands of such subscribers.

England, represents a pitched battle, and is surrounded by a host of military forces. Anote Dujai, the latest claimant to the French throne, is at present earning $25 a month as a time-keeper in a Morristown factory.

Mr. Augustus J. second assistant secretary of the American Legation to Paris, will let his carriage at Newport and go abroad early next month.

Mr. H. H. Wheeler of Newport, daughter of the late William, ex-Lawyer, who was several campaign songs in favor of Mr. Cleveland, has been complimented by an autograph letter from the President.

Mr. Henry George lectured at Philadelphia last evening upon the "Rights and Wrongs of Labor" for the benefit of the striking weavers of Kensington.

At the period when the plague raged with terrible violence, learned doctors could offer no better medicine than dried, powdered pepper. Among those who tried this remedy, the results of surgical operations fall far short of the marvelous, in the beginning of the sixteenth century, at the court of Ferrara.

It minutely gives the particulars and relates that Dr. Sigmund Doctore was publicly executed before the king and the court, in the Plaza de San Francisco, in the city of Mexico, in the year 1570.

What style of glove will be worn by the ladies this summer? "The old style, Swede nonpareils, will still be worn in a great measure."
