

PINNED UNDER AN AUTO.

Man Pulled Out Dead as Boys Who Struck Him Run Away.

Two boys on a wild midnight ride in a "borrowed" automobile killed a man, destroyed the machine and barely escaped with their lives in a wreck early yesterday on Jerome avenue, where it crosses the city line into Yonkers.

James Finn, the man who was killed, was the motorman of a Yonkers car which had just reached the city line to make connections with the Jerome avenue cars in the Bronx.

The automobile, going north, rushed up over a low rise in the road fifty yards below and tore down on them. Courtney saw it and cried out. Finn turned, startled, and took one quick step toward the car.

Courtney hurried up, with two other men who had stood near the car. The two young men who had been in the automobile came scrambling out of the bushes and stood in the road, brushing themselves off.

After the wreck the police traced the route of the speeding automobile. The two lads had stopped for drinks at a roadhouse at Jerome avenue and 21st street.

Several of the defendant's violations of its license limitations were cited by the plaintiff for Saturday and Sunday in front of a Park Row newspaper office, he said, "which is more advantageously situated to get public fares than the public hackmen's stand, a block away.
