Effect of the Tariff

Various Opinions Expressed and Prospect Less Cheerful in Some Places than Others.

Whitney-Central National Bank, of New Orleans.

The effect of a reduction of 25 per cent in the tariff on sugar would deprive the grower of sugar cane and of sugar beets of practically all of the profits arising from his industry and would necessitate a change of method and greater economy in the future.

From every standpoint the tariff upon sugar falls more equitably and ratably upon every consumer than a tariff levied upon any other commodity.

The political reasons are that it will destroy the Democratic party in all of the states where sugar is produced in quantities.

The rice industry in the last ten years has shown a growth of 50 per cent, principally in the States of Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas.

The money situation in the Northwest is generally satisfactory, deposits falling higher in the banks and the banks in rural districts asking very little or no assistance.

There is a tendency on the part of banks to carry a little stronger reserve. The country banks advise that they are amply able in nearly every instance to care for their local demands without borrowing.

In business centres collections are reported quite good, at the same time our jobbers report sales normal.

There is going to be a stiff demand for money as the season advances. In fact, the demand has already set in, and we reserve city banks will be called upon pretty heavily before the fall crops are harvested.

There is no uneasiness about our ability to handle the situation fully and easily and satisfactorily as in years past.
