AT BAR HARBOR.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Bar Harbor, July 29.—Edward Barton Pendleton, of Philadelphia, a cousin of Vincent Astor, was arrested for the second time this morning for speeding his racing car. The court doubled the fine and admonished the offender. Young Pendleton and his passenger, Clark Woodhouse, denied the charge, but other witnesses testified that Pendleton almost ran into a fish wagon while joy riding.

The first of a series of concerts was given at the Building of Arts this afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. An innovation was promenade music at the close of the concert, while tea was served on the green.

Mrs. Edgar Howard defeated Miss Katherine Force, 6—1, 1—2, 6—3, 6. The match between Mrs. Howard and Miss Force was one of the most brilliant of the series and lasted almost two hours. Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Howard will play the final to-morrow afternoon.

Etienne Marskowski, of New York, has arrived for the remainder of the season.

Other speakers were Miss Mary Shannon Smith, of Meredith College, Raleigh; Miss Harriet Greeve, of Chattanooga; Miss Penelope McDuffee, of Winthrop College; Miss Barnette Miller, of the Women's College of Constantinople, and Miss Euphemia McClintock, of the College for Women in Columbia, South Carolina.

PAULIST FATHERS ELECT

Father J. J. Hughes Remains Head of the Order.

The quinquennial meeting of the General Chapter of the Missionary Society of St. Paul the Apostle, or Paulist Fathers, is taking place at the Paulist Fathers' church, Columbus av. and 60th st., beginning yesterday, and to continue three days longer. There are twenty-one delegates present from several states.

The chief work of yesterday was the election of Superior General. Father John J. Hughes, the present head of the Paulists, was re-elected for another term of five years.

Three consultors were elected, the Rev. M. P. Smith, of Portland, Ore.; the Rev. Charles J. Powers, and the Rev. John J. Burke, editor of "The Catholic World."

ABORNS PLAN NEW OPERATIC SCHOOL

Classes Will Be Organized as Casts and Sing with Full Chorus and Ballet.

Five to ten million dollars is being spent in Europe annually by American students of grand opera, when they might stay at home and receive instruction every bit as good, according to a statement made yesterday by Milton Aborn, who, with his brother, Sargent Aborn, manages the Century Opera House in this city. Mr. Aborn was a passenger on the Hamburg-American liner Vaterland.

"In Milan alone," he said, "there are thousands of American students, many of whom will never reach the operatic stage or even be self-supporting. If they stayed at home and learned that they would be better off financially.

"The lack of opportunities in provincial opera companies in this country," he continued, "has led us to establish in connection with the Century Opera House a school, in which classes will be formed as casts of operas. On completion of their instruction each class will give a performance, supported by the Century ballet, chorus and orchestra."

Among the singers engaged by Mr. Aborn for the coming season are Hardy Williamson, tenor; Florence McBeth, American soprano; Bettina Freeman, soprano; Muriel Gough, Earle Gutt, Marcella Kraft and Sylvia Nills.

GOOD NEWS FOR FIREMEN

Adamson Orders Semi-Monthly Pay Envelopes.

There will be rejoicing to-day among the wives of the city's firemen. The fire fighters themselves will be smiling as pleasantly as the police did yesterday. There are to be no more "short" weeks at the end of each month.

Fire Commissioner Adamson promulgated an order last night for all the men in his department to be paid semi-monthly in the future. Beginning with August the men will get their envelopes on the 2d and 17th of the month. A similar order has been put in force for the police.

The firemen have wanted to get rid of the "hard up" fourth week, which sometimes spreads into a fifth week at the close of every month. The Commissioner has arranged it so that life insurance will be paid out of the first envelope each month and all deductions for fines, lost time or leaves shall be held out of the second envelope.

PLANS 16-STORY HOTEL

Lessee of St. Andrew Deals for Adjoining Church Site.

Gustave Kaufman, lessee of the Hotel St. Andrew, confirmed yesterday the report that he is negotiating for the purchase of the church adjoining the hotel for a site on which to erect a sixteen story hotel.

Mr. Kaufman also announced that the notice published recently in The Tribune regarding the financial condition of the former Hotel St. Andrew Company, which went into bankruptcy, has no bearing on the present management.

AWARD DEPENDS ON PHRASEOLOGY

Compensation Commission Ponders Over "Employe" and "Workman."

If, in the minds of the Workmen's Compensation Commission, the words "employe" and "workman" are synonymous, Mrs. Mary Rheinwald will obtain compensation for the death of her husband, a sign painter, who fell from a ladder and was killed July 1. The commission deliberated over the phraseology of the law at its meeting yesterday in the Metropolitan Tower and reserved decision on the claim.

Mrs. Rheinwald, who lives at 1025 Tinton av., declared that her husband was employed by the Builders' Brick and Supply Company, and asked for and got a month for herself and $20 each, $30 a month, for her two children. The United States Fidelity and Deposit Company, which carried insurance, objected to the award being made, on the ground that Rheinwald was a contractor and not an employe, and therefore not entitled to any benefit under the employers' liability act.

A number of billheads with Rheinwald's name printed on them, and his name signed in receipt of money paid on bills for work done for the Builders' Brick and Supply Company were given in evidence by the insurance company to prove its contention. A written contract apparently between Rheinwald and the company was offered in evidence.

Mrs. Rheinwald contended that her husband never was a contractor, but let himself out for hire by the day. The man was killed when he was at work at 172d st. and West Farms Road. The ruling of the board on the question is to be made next Monday.

Hammerstein Funeral Friday.

The body of Lieutenant Harry Hammerstein, of the 9th Regiment, N. G. N. Y., who died on Tuesday night at New London, Conn., arrived here yesterday and was taken to the Stephen Merritt undertaking rooms, in 19th st. and Ninth av., from where the funeral will be held on Friday at 11 o'clock. The body was escorted to the train at New London by a guard picked from Mr. Hammerstein's company and the regimental band. He was the eldest son of Oscar Hammerstein.

TYLER HOME WITH PLAYS AND STARS

Will Present Phyllis Neilson-Terry in Shakespeare.

NAZIMOVA COMING IN HASTINGS PIECE

"The Garden of Paradise" to Have Elaborate Production at the Park Theatre.

Bringing home a trunkful of contracts with playwrights and stars, George C. Tyler, managing director of the Liebler Company, returned on the Kronprinz Wilhelm yesterday after four months in Europe.

"I am particularly gratified," he said, "at obtaining a contract with Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry for a term of years. I saw her four years ago as Viola, and later as Juliet, and realized that she embodied in beauty and in temperament the last word in Shakespearian expression. I have seen most of the great performances of the Shakespearian women in my time, and I consider Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry the finest of them all.

"I shall present her first in New York, about the first of November, in 'Twelfth Night,' with 'Romeo and Juliet' to follow. I expect that Miss Terry will restore to the American stage the traditions Mary Anderson gave it.

"For the engagement of Nazimova—who, by the way, desires to be known without the prefix of Madame hereafter—B. Macdonald Hastings has written a play more remarkable than 'The New Sin.' Nazimova will also give special matinee performances of Ibsen, Schnitzler and Strindberg.

Emily Stevens to Appear.

"In the forthcoming production of Edward Sheldon's 'The Garden of Paradise,' Miss Emily Stevens will appear. Our immediate activities will be centred on this production, a dramatization of Hans Christian Andersen's 'The Little Mermaid.' It has marvellous scenic opportunities and poetic qualities. I am proud that this beautiful play has been done by an American and that it will have its first production on the American stage.

"I am fortunate in having secured the Viennese artist, Joseph Urban. The eleven scenes of 'The Garden of Paradise' will be designed by him. He will also design for the piece costumes entirely new to the stage. They will be made by the firm of Carramba, which did such good work for us at the Century in the production of 'The Daughter of Heaven.' Mr. Sapelli, head of the Carramba house, will come to America.

"Our contract with the Park Theatre enables us to have an independent foothold in New York. George Reiph and Miss Renee Kelly will appear in this production. O. P. Heggie will direct the rehearsals. Clifford Brooke, whom Granville Barker considers the best stage manager in England, will be associated with Heggie. 'The Garden of Paradise' will be the most elaborate production we have ever made.

"Almost simultaneously with the production of 'The Garden of Paradise' we shall present Louis N. Parker's new drama, 'The Highway of Life,' founded on Dickens's 'David Copperfield.' Sir H. Beerbohm Tree will also produce it next month at the Haymarket Theatre, in London. Lennon Pawle will play Micawber here. The piece will be presented at Wallack's Theatre with as fine a cast as I can get. I have already made some engagements in London for this play.

"The success of Cyril Maude in 'Grumpy' in New York last season has been duplicated by him in London at the New Theatre. I have tried to induce Mr. Maude to begin his American tour four weeks earlier than originally planned. He will probably play a short preliminary season in New York before beginning his American tour at the Plymouth Theatre, in Boston.

"Before I left for Europe last spring I obtained a play called 'The Philosopher,' by Grace Heyer, which I shall produce early in the season.

Wireless from Tynan.

"When I stepped aboard at Cherbourg I expected to have a rest until I landed. However, in midocean, I received a wireless from Brandon Tynan, on his way to Ireland on the Aquitania, asking about my plans for next season. He will open August 20, at the Auditorium Theatre, in Chicago, in 'Joseph and His Brethren.' In January we shall star him in an Irish play of which he is the author.

"I have obtained the dramatic rights of Eleanor H. Porter's novel, 'Pollyanna,' which will be presented about the first of January.

"The success of George Arliss in 'Disraeli' seems almost inexhaustible, but he will begin his fifth and last year in this play, going with it to the Coast for the first time. I have a new play for Mr. Arliss, and he will probably be presented in it in the spring.

"'The Garden of Allah' will begin its fourth season and make its first trip to the Coast.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The Columbia Theatre will reopen for the season of 1914-'15 Monday afternoon, August 10, with Bert Baker and the Bon Ton Girls, which is generally regarded as one of the best of the Columbia Amusement Company's burlesque shows. During the summer weeks the Columbia has been completely renovated.

Three hundred children from the Hebrew Orphan Asylum of New York were the guests of H. H. Frazee at yesterday's matinee performance of "A Pair of Sixes" in the Longacre Theatre.

Charles Frohman has engaged Miss Madge Titheradge as leading woman at the Prince of Wales Theatre, London. Miss Titheradge has been appearing for several years in principal parts with Lewis Waller, and acted with him in this city in repertory.

The Academic Producing Company, with offices in the Fitzgerald Building, will make several dramatic productions during the coming season. Its first offering will be May Robson in a new comedy, "Martha By-the-Day," a dramatization of Julie M. Lippmann's novel of the same name.

Joan Sawyer announces a new dance of the Macabre order at the Palace Theatre, to be called "Death and the Maiden," with music by Grieg and stage settings after Rheinhardt.

ENGLISH ACTRESS-BEAUTY WHO IS COMING HERE.

Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry as Desdemona and Sir H. Beerbohm Tree as Othello.

OBITUARY.

ADRIEN HEBRARD.

Paris, July 29. Adrien Hebrard, editor of "Le Temps," and one of the leading journalists in France, died today at the age of eighty. He had been managing editor of "Le Temps" since 1870. He was a Senator from 1879 to 1897.

It was a curious coincidence that at almost the very moment when the slayer of Gaston Calmette was being acquitted Adrien Hebrard should die. For these two men were perhaps of all the most conspicuous and forceful in French journalism, while at the very extremes of contrast. To those who know the press of France, the names of their papers are epigrammatically significant of the two men: "Le Figaro" and "Le Temps."

Francis Marie Adrien Hebrard, in a sense, was "Le Temps," for he had been at its head since the foundation of the French Republic, and what it is and what it has been for more than forty years it owes to him. He was born at Grisolle, in the Department of the Tarn et Garonne, on New Year's Day, 1834, and was thus in the prime of young manhood when the war occurred, the empire fell, and it was necessary to reorganize the press in support of the republic.

In the years before the war he won his journalistic spurs, and became an expert writer and judicious director. Immediately after the war he succeeded Nefftzer as director of "Le Temps." That paper was already recognized as the representative organ of moderate Republicanism. He kept it so, and at the same time so enlarged it, developed its activities and extended its circulation and influence as to make it one of the very foremost journals in France and, indeed, in all Europe.

Particularly did he cultivate the department of foreign correspondence, so as to make "Le Temps," above all other French journals, a compendium of the news of the whole world and not merely of the gossip of Parisian cafes and boulevards. For critical authority, in literature, music and the drama, and the fine arts, he made it also one of the leading journals of the Continent. It may be added that he kept it to the end of his long life more constant to the standards and ideals which he had originally established than perhaps any of its contemporaries.

In addition to his labors as director of "Le Temps," he was for many years actively and efficiently engaged in the legislative work of the nation. As early as 1871 he was put forward as a candidate, but not until 1879 was he elected to the Senate. There he took his place in the Left Centre, or Republican Left, and was one of the most diligent and influential members of the body. He was repeatedly re-elected until 1897, when, owing to failing strength, he voluntarily retired. He was a member of the Syndicate of the Press of Paris and of the Superior Council of Fine Arts and Historic Monuments. His younger brother, Jacques Hebrard, who also for some years was a Senator, is now the principal editor of "Le Temps."

Mr. Jackson was a direct descendant of Oliver Jackson, one of the early Governors of New Jersey. He was a director of the Fidelity Trust Company, of Newark, and a member of the American Bible Society. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3:30, at the Jackson home, 646 High st., Newark.

LITTLE ANTONIA GAVE HER MITE

Asked Teacher to Save It for Her to Spend in the Country.

BUT THOUGHT IT MIGHT HELP ANOTHER

And So She Left It Behind for the Fresh Air Fund and a Fine Example.

Read about Antonia's penny.

It wasn't a bad penny, as you will see, but a good, sound, bright penny, and Antonia was a good girl, too. The story has a moral, for all that, just as the tale about "The Poor Clerk and the Crooked Sixpence" had.

Antonia lives in Charlton st., which, as everybody knows, isn't the pleasantest place in the world. It's a sort of narrow, dingy street, without any grass or trees or flowers, or any birds except dingy sparrows that match the color of the rest of the place.

But Antonia is a sunny little creature, despite her surroundings. She loves to hear birds sing, to see dew sparkling in the grass, to smell the fragrance of flowers. She loves to laugh and sing herself.

Now in Charlton st. there is scant chance to enjoy such pleasures as these, so Antonia thought she would like to go to the country for a while this summer. She had been there once; in fact, that was how she gained her only knowledge of birds and flowers and sparkling dew.

Went to Sunday School.

Antonia has gone to Sunday school regularly. She knew that the teacher there sends good girls to the country every week during the summer. So one Sunday she asked the teacher if she might be one of those to go, and the teacher told her that she might if she kept on being a good girl.

The next day Antonia got her penny. It was pay for running an errand for a neighbor. She was just about to spend it for a stick of candy when a happy thought occurred to her and she ran down to the church and asked the teacher to save it for her so that she would have it to spend when she got to the country.

Antonia planned to add other pennies to this one. But although she waited for three weeks not another one came her way.

Then the chance to go to the country presented itself. There was room at a place called Happy Land for fifty Antonias, and the teacher said that Antonia-of-the-penny might be one of them. The day when they were to go, visions of flowers, birds and sunshine so filled the head and heart of the little girl that it was no wonder she forgot all about the hoard in teacher's keeping.

Even that kind-hearted lady herself forgot about it until all her charges were aboard the train. Then the recollection of it came to her and she rushed down the platform to the window where Antonia's head, with its red bow, added a touch of color to the scene. Just then the train began to move.

"Antonia!" called the teacher.

"What?" smiled Antonia from the window.

Then She Changed Her Mind.

"Your penny; you forgot it," shouted teacher holding out the coin for Antonia to grasp.

But Antonia half put out her hand and then withdrew it, as she called back: "Never mind; keep it so's to help some other girl to go to the country."

Teacher did, and you will find it acknowledged with 1,499 other pennies from the Charlton st. Sunday school at the end of this column.

The story of Antonia and her penny is true, word for word. Have you given your penny "so's to help some other girl to go to the country" yet? It is needed. Unless you send it soon some little Antonia isn't going to get her glimpse of the dew and the birds, her breath of the fragrance of the flowers this summer.

She needs the chance badly, too.

KERMIT TO BE A BANKER

Will Go to South America for National City Bank.

Kermit Roosevelt, second son of ex-President Roosevelt, who recently returned from Spain with his bride, the daughter of Ambassador Willard, has entered the employ of the National City Bank and will take a position in one of that institution's proposed South American branches. Mr. Roosevelt just at present is occupied in familiarizing himself with the bank's policies and the Federal Reserve act.

The City Bank was authorized to establish branches in foreign countries under the terms of the reserve act, and was the first of the big financial institutions of the country to announce its intention of offering its facilities to American business men engaged in South American trade. The branches, which will begin business as soon as the new banking law becomes operative, will be located at Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Ayres.

suffragists term the signatures to the petitions they are collecting from political leaders.

"It was summer dancing that drove me to suffrage this time," Mrs. Burleson explained last night. "My husband is stationed at Tobyhanna for the summer. He works from 5 in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. There was nothing for me to do but dance all the time. I couldn't stand it. I like to dance, but I feel I must do something useful."

Mrs. Burleson rode on horseback, at the head of the suffrage parade in Washington, more than a year ago. Last winter she gave up society to devote herself to political study at George Washington University.

There have been reports that Mrs. Burleson's husband and her father, John C. Walker, of Galveston, opposed her political activity, but Mrs. Burleson asserts now that she has won over both husband and father to a point where they have consented to her devoting her summer vacation to "scalp hunting."

BROADWAY SEES "GHOST"

Orator Bears Striking Resemblance to Mayor Gaynor.

A crowd gathered late last night around a man who was trying to make a speech outside the Hotel McAlpin, on Broadway, at 33d st. Hundreds hurried away, saying the man was the ghost of Mayor Gaynor.

Patrolman Palmiter was unable to persuade the orator to go home, and had to obtain assistance to get him to the West 30th st. station. There, on hearing he had been taken for the ghost of Mayor Gaynor, he insisted on fighting. His resemblance to the late Mayor is striking.

He gave the name of Sanford Gowdey and refused his address. Papers on him were marked "Sanford Gowdey, attorney, 52 Broadway." The supposed ghost was locked up on a charge of intoxication.

Manager's First Offering Will Be Montgomery and Stone in a New Musical Comedy.

Charles Dillingham, the theatrical producer, who arrived on the Vaterland yesterday from Europe, has six new plays for the coming season. Among them is a new musical comedy, in which Montgomery and Stone will star.

"The play, which is as yet without a title," he said, "will be ready in September. The music is by Ivan Caryll and the book by Anne Caldwell and R. H. Burnside. Supporting the stars will be Charles Aldrich, Allene Crater, Juliette Day, Helen Falconer, Belle Story, Violet Zell, Marjorie Bentley, Douglas Stevenson, Gene Revere, Charles Phelps and Edgar Hay."

For this company Mr. Dillingham has also engaged Marguerita Destrees, a Spanish dancer; Jean Clermont's novelty act, and the Breen family, another European contribution.

"The Lonely Heart," by Edward Sheldon, is to be produced early in the season. Jack Barrymore has been engaged for the leading part. Then will come "Romance," by the same author, in which Doris Keane will appear.

In October a revue entitled "Watch Your Step" will be presented by Mr. Dillingham. Irving Berlin has written the music, and the book is by Harry B. Smith.
