HUERTA JAILED AFTER OROZCO MAKES ESCAPE

Ex-Dictator, Locked Up, Fails to Furnish New Bond.

OROZCO ELUDED GUARDS IN NIGHT

Close Watch on Border—Fugitive Already Reported Across.

MAY TAKE JUAREZ

Garrison Said To Be Ripe for Revolt Against General Villa.

El Paso, Tex., July 3.—For the first time in his life General Victoriano Huerta tonight is a prisoner in a county jail, accorded the same treatment that other prisoners receive and showing the same resentment that other prisoners generally show. Meanwhile, his friend and alleged fellow-conspirator, General Pascual Orozco, has jumped his $7,000 bond, vanished from his haunts here and is supposed to be working trouble in Mexico.

Unable to make his second bond of $15,000, General Huerta and the five men who were arrested to-day were sent to the county jail at 5:15 o'clock this evening. With General Huerta in custody are General Ignacio Bravo, General Estanislao Guzmán, J. B. Ratner, Huerta's secretary, Enrique Gorista and José Dolgado.

United States soldiers are guarding the county jail to-night and deputy marshals are guarding the cells in which Huerta and his companions are held. It is seriously feared that attempts may be made to rescue Huerta and the other Mexicans.

"Never before in my life have I been as treated," said General Huerta as he was told he would have to go to jail. "Then he quickly changed the word 'treated' to 'honored' as he smiled."

General Bravo said: "If I had been told yesterday that I would have been put in an American jail without being given a hearing I would not have believed it."

"Be quiet," said General Huerta, "we will soon be out of this."

All of the prisoners were searched at the jail. General Huerta had only $50, which he was given to the poor. Ratner had $100, and all the others had a total of less than $1,000.

Days of Excitement. Huerta's imprisonment followed a day of intense excitement. In the morning Orozco had disappeared from the house where he was being guarded by six soldiers and seven agents. A thorough search was made, but no trace of the former Mexican general could be found. It is believed he escaped some time between midnight and daylight.

Up to midnight no trace of Orozco had been discovered, and it is assumed he made good his getaway.

The house in which Orozco lived is so constructed and located that guarding it is an impossible task. It is a simple, but ten years ago there was a growth of shrubbery that would make comparatively easy the disappearance of a person after the intervening space had been traversed.

Authorities were of the opinion that Orozco left the building through a window, entered the shrubbery and made his way to an automobile waiting several blocks from the scene.

GUARD WILSON CLOSELY AT HOME IN CORNISH

Washington, July 3.—Extra precautions were taken by the police to-day to guard the White House. The force of policemen was increased and instructions were given to exercise additional vigilance in searching for cranks. Similar measures were taken at the State, War and Navy Buildings.

FUGITIVE POISONER LOOKED LIKE HOLT

Harvard Instructor Who Died After Wife's Death Resembled Morgan's Assailant.

Cambridge, Mass., July 3.—A discovery that Frank W. Holt, who shot J. P. Morgan, bears some resemblance to Eric Muenster, a former Harvard University instructor, who disappeared after the death of his wife by poisoning some years ago, was seriously considered by police officials to-night.

It was in the spring of 1906 that Mrs. Leone M. Muenster died of slow poisoning, which she had taken with beef tea. Her husband, who had been an instructor in German at Harvard for two years, died before the authorities could question him. He was never apprehended.

RUSSIA AUTHORIZES $500,000,000 ISSUE

Two Loans Will Be in 5 Per Cent Short Term Notes, Free of Tax, in Low Denominations.

Petrograd, July 3.—The "Official Journal" published to-day an imperial edict authorizing the Russian Minister of Finance to make two issues of treasury obligations of $250,000,000 each. The issues are to be in the shape of 5 per cent short term notes, free of income tax.

TURKS REPORT BRITISH REPULSE

Declare Enemy Was Driven Back on Gallipoli Peninsula with Heavy Losses.

Constantinople, July 3.—The repulse of British assaults on the Gallipoli peninsula is reported in an official statement issued to-day at the Turkish War Office. The communication follows:

PALMS TO SHADE 5TH AVE

Broadway, Too, May Blossom Forth with Rustic Bowers.

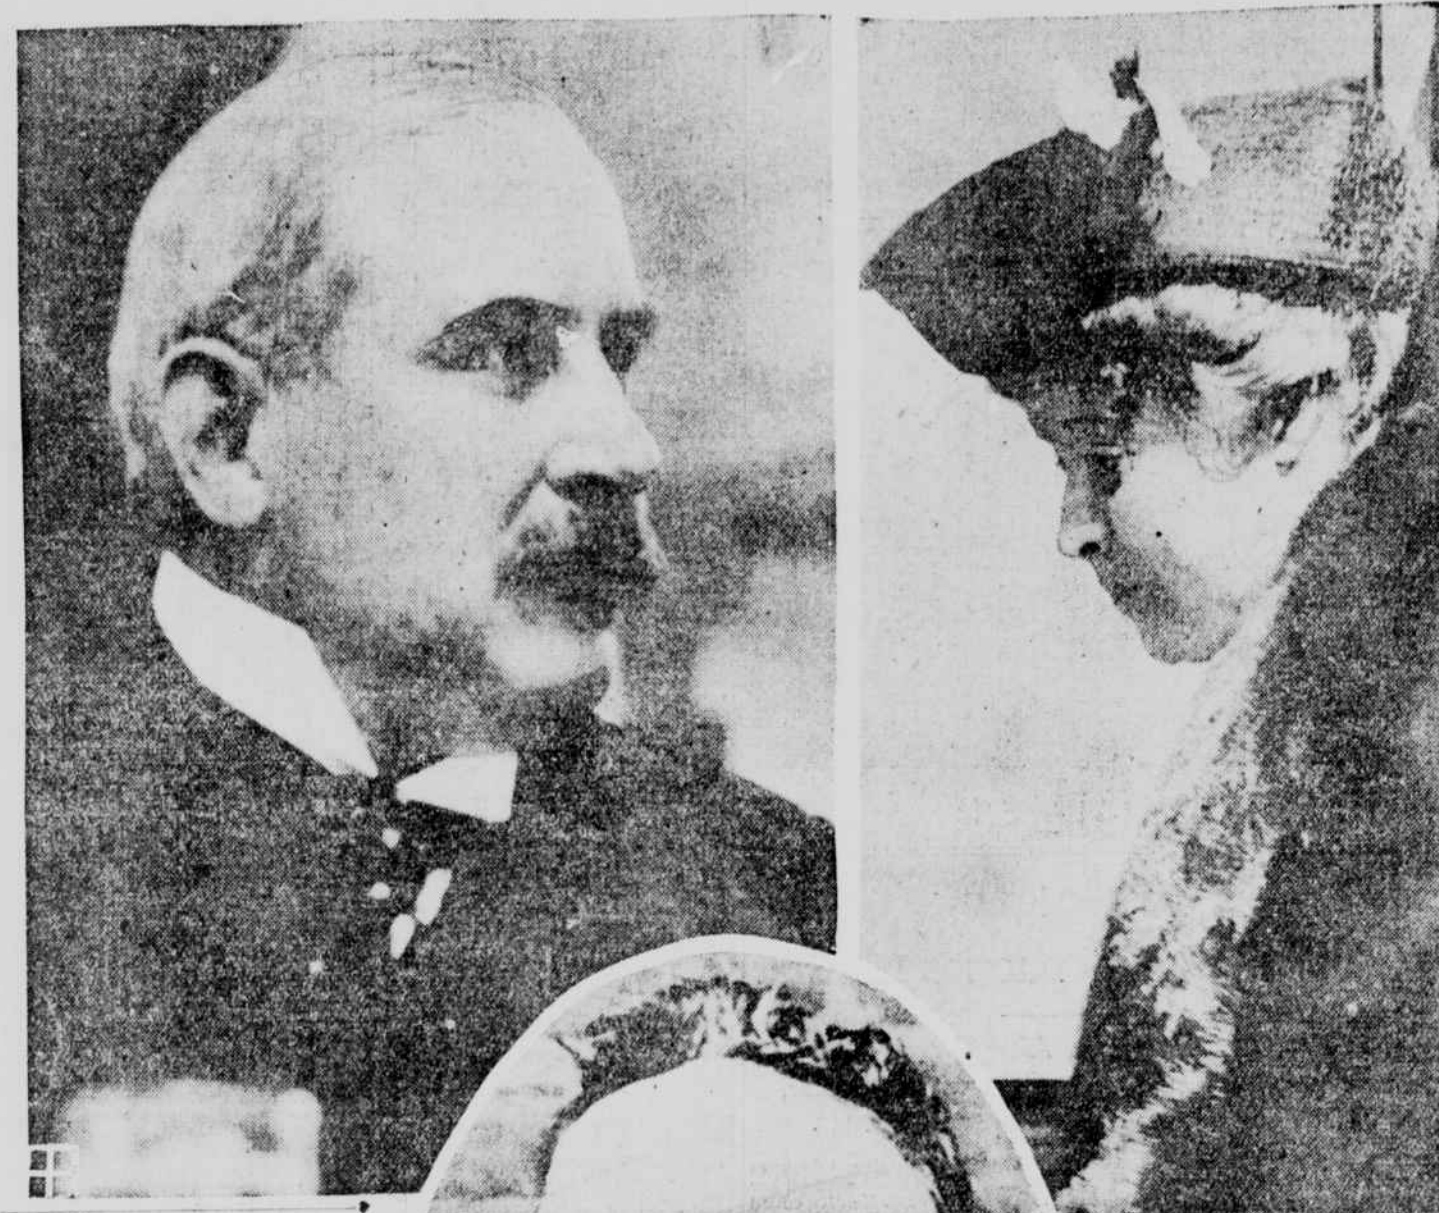

Fifth Avenue will be in the shade of palms, and foliage of quaint, clipped designs will add a rural touch to the city's architecture at the State College of Forestry, in Syracuse, carries out his plans.

ALFRED STEAD REPORTED KILLED

Cablegram to Brother-in-Law Says English Diplomat Was Assassinated in Rumania.

Chicago, July 3.—Alfred Stead, son of the late journalist, W. T. Stead, apparently has been assassinated in Rumania, according to a cablegram received here to-day by his brother-in-law, Frank R. Hussey. The cablegram, sent from England on July 1, was signed by Mr. Hussey's sister, Mrs. Mary Elaine Stead. It reads: "Alfred was assassinated little before I going Rumania."

ITALIANS TAKE TOLMINO POST, KEY TO ISONZO

Unofficially Reported That Town North of Gorizia Has Fallen.

London, July 3.—The Italians have occupied the village of Tolmino, on the Isonzo, north of Gorizia, according to an unofficial Rome dispatch. The Austrians still hold neighboring fortifications and are bombarding the town.

Tolmino, the key to the Isonzo Valley, has been considered by the Italians indispensable in their operations in that district. It is protected by strong natural and artificial defenses, and it is said to have been garrisoned by thirty thousand Austrians.

The following official war report came from Vienna to-night:

"The enemy sustained a fresh defeat on the front in the coastal district. After fruitless attacks near Sagrado and Polazzo the enemy renewed the assault with at least two divisions along the sector of the Doberdo Plateau from Polazzo to Monte Corsich. The attacks everywhere were repulsed with a heavy enemy loss. Attacks against the Gorizia bridge head, southwest of Monte Sabotino, were repulsed with equal losses."

"In the last few days the fighting has progressed on the Carnethian border for Val Grande, east of Ploken Pass, the mountain finally remaining in our possession."

"On the Tyrolean border there were local artillery duels."

Two Civilians Killed by Austrian Plane

Udine, Italy (via Paris), July 3.—Two people were killed and five others were injured yesterday by bombs dropped from an Austrian aeroplane on the town of Cornova, Austria, near the Italian frontier, eight miles northwest of Gorizia. Cornova, which was formerly an Austrian customs post, is now occupied by the Italians, and Austrian aviators throw bombs every day on the little town.

One of the bombs dropped yesterday fell on the residence of Signora Donda, killing her and wounding five others in her household. Another bomb killed a boy, the son of Deputy Mayor Marni.

MRS. MORGAN TRIED TO SHIELD HUSBAND

Here is the story of the shooting as told by Mrs. J. P. Morgan to a group of friends who called to offer sympathy:

"We were with Sir Cecil and Lady Spring-Rice and other guests at breakfast when the bell rang and Physick left to answer it. In a few moments we heard him cry, 'Mr. Morgan, Mr. Morgan, upstairs, quick!' Instantly Mr. Morgan jumped up and started upstairs, and I with him. It was his idea and mine that something was wrong upstairs. Just what we did not know. It was not our idea that there was any danger in the hall that Physick was trying to get Mr. Morgan away from. We believed, I think, that there might be a fire up there."

"We got upstairs and went through room after room and everything was all right, until we came out into the front hall. I was out first and I saw the fellow coming up the stairs, a pistol in either hand. Then I knew that he was a lunatic, or worse, intent on murdering 'Jack, and I screamed and jumped at him. Mr. Morgan jumped at the same time and brushed me to one side just as the man shot. Mr. Morgan landed upon him and they went to the floor together."

"I think I got one of the revolvers. Mr. Morgan got the other, and was trying to subdue him when the servants and others came in. Physick had something in his hand, with which he hit the fellow, and then he was not so troublesome to handle. For a little man he was very active and strong. Then the servants came and tied the fellow up with trunk straps and ropes."

"I asked him why he wanted to kill Mr. Morgan. He said he did not want to kill Mr. Morgan, but that he did want him to stop sending ammunition to the Allies and stop murdering able-bodied men."

"The first that I knew that Mr. Morgan was hurt was when he called Dr. Zabriskie's number, and said he had been hit."

"After the doctors came I asked Physick what had happened. He said the man had given him a card, and that when he saw that it was no one that Mr. Morgan would want to see at the house anyway, he told the visitor to wait. Suddenly the man pushed the pistol against Physick and forced his way into the hall. Physick very shrewdly tried to get him into the library, and risked his own life to get a chance to warn Mr. Morgan."

"As he came up the stairs at us he said something. It sounded like, 'Want to see Mr. Morgan.' Mr. Morgan made no answer to that, but jumped for him. All the time the fellow was on the floor trying to wrestle his way out he kept talking, but I could not make out what he was saying. I guess I was too excited."

HOLT STUDIOUS, ALWAYS CALM, CORNELL RECORD

Father-in-Law in Dallas Says Act Must Have Been Due to Insanity.

Dallas, Tex., July 3.—The family of the Rev. O. D. Sensabaugh, presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church (South) for the Dallas district, the father-in-law of Frank Holt, who shot J. Pierpont Morgan at Glen Cove, Long Island, was grief-stricken to-day when word came of the event.

Mr. Sensabaugh said he doubted if the man who attempted to kill the financier was really his son-in-law, although the description he had received showed that they were apparently the same.

He is an American citizen, of German descent, and was born in Wisconsin. Both he and his wife, who was Leone Sensabaugh, were in the class of 1907 at the Polytechnic University, Fort Worth.

"He has been a perfect gentleman in the ten years he has been married to my daughter," he said, "and if he really did such a thing there can only be one reason. He must be—Here he stopped."

"It must have been a mental aberration," he suggested.

"It could have been nothing else," he replied, "if it is my son-in-law. I cannot discuss my daughter now," he added.

Holt has two children—a boy three years old and a girl thirteen months. Both are now here with their mother. Before coming to Dallas he worked for a German firm in Mexico, and he speaks Spanish, French and German.

He was the class poet at Polytechnic, and under his picture in "The Parrot," the university annual, there appear these lines:

"Man's a strange animal and makes strange use Of his own nature and various arts, And likes particularly to produce Some new experiment to show his parts."

Banker, Attacked in Glen Cove Home, Gets Bullets in Hip and Abdomen—Doctors Reticent.

WIFE BATTLES ASSAILANT

Frank Holt, Cornell Tutor, Sought to End War by Explosion in Capitol, Appeal to Financier and Threat to Wilson.

Frank Holt, a Cornell University instructor and German sympathizer, yesterday morning shot and seriously wounded J. Pierpont Morgan in his Glen Cove home. Last night Holt confessed that he on Friday placed a bomb in the Senate wing of the Capitol at Washington, and after it had exploded came direct to New York to see Mr. Morgan and attempt to "persuade him to stop sending ammunition and arms to Germany."

Holt in his confession, which Captain Thomas Tunney, of the Manhattan anarchist squad, and Justice of the Peace William E. Luyster, of Glen Cove, wrung from him with what is best known as the "third degree," was prepared, he said, to use dynamite to convince Mr. Morgan of the necessity of "becoming neutral."

The police also have reasons for suspecting that Holt planned to pay a visit to President Wilson at the summer capital in Cornish, N. H., prior to his coming to New York from Ithaca. United States Secret Service men were last night working on the theory that he is one of the men who have been writing threatening letters to the President.

Unofficially it is stated that Mr. Morgan's greatest danger is from blood poisoning, it being possible that fragments of clothing were carried into the wounds by the bullets, which themselves may not have been overclean.

BELIEVE HOLT SENT THREATS TO PRESIDENT

Capital Officials Seek to Link Letters with Other Crimes.

Washington, July 3.—Frank Holt, who has confessed the shooting of J. P. Morgan and the exploding of an infernal machine in the Capitol, is the author of several threatening letters sent to President Wilson, officials who have been working on the case suggested to-night. All day the wires between Washington and Cornish have been busy in an effort to establish such a theory.

The news that Holt had admitted he placed the infernal machine in the Capitol was a source of great satisfaction to Secret Service men here, since it tended to confirm their belief that the three things were connected.

Incidentally, the news that Holt had confessed was held back in New York to give those working on the Washington end a chance to find out what they could about the outrage.

The police believe that Holt has made several visits here recently. A letter which he sent to the local papers to-day explaining that the Capitol bomb was a protest against arms exports was dated June 1. This letter was signed "R. Pearce," and had been mailed an hour before the explosion.

It was learned here that Holt had come to Washington from Ithaca, N. Y. He placed the machine, which consisted of either nitroglycerine or dynamite, with sulphuric acid, matches, and detonating caps, in the telephone exchange in the reception room of the Senate wing of the Capitol, hung around long enough to see that it had exploded, and then took the 12:10 train for New York. He arrived early enough to go to the Morgan home on Long Island.

In connection with the letters threatening the President, it was pointed out here that there had been an unusual flood of letters during the last few months, and particularly since the agitation about the exportation of arms and ammunition started. Owing to the efficiency with which the White House is guarded by the Secret Service men and police, it would be next to impossible for a bomb to be placed there, but it is comparatively easy to place a bomb in almost any other public building.

It is feared here, and that was one of the reasons for the stringent investigation by the Secret Service men to-day, that there may be several cranks out.

Holt's confession that he was guilty of the Washington bomb outrage did not come easily. Repeatedly he told reporters during the day his story of the assault upon Mr. Morgan and his ideas of neutrality, but he had repeatedly denied knowing anything about the Washington affair, insisting he had spent Friday in New York.

At first Captain Tunney was inclined to believe him, but after Holt was made ready for the trip to the Mineola jail he was again put through a course of questions. He was pretty well played out by the events of the day and the loss of blood from a wound on the head and wanted to rest.

Got "Third Degree." The authorities would give him no rest from questions, and finally, taking him from his cell, marched him up and down the corridor, a man on either side of him, and Tunney and Justice Luyster raising questions upon him. The questions came faster than he could answer them, but for a while he persisted in telling nothing that he did not wish to tell.

Then, after more than an hour, he

NO VITAL ORGAN HIT; CONDITION EXCELLENT

The Morgan firm issued this statement last evening:

A further examination of Mr. Morgan's wounds shows that the bullets did not involve any vital organ. The condition of the patient continues excellent. (Signed.)
