

The Ad-Visor

Conducted by Samuel Hopkins Adams.

This department is devoted to separating the sheep of advertising from the goats—and hanging a bell on the goats. Its deals with a very serious topic in a way that is not too serious. Its honest endeavor will be to answer with fairness, either in print, or, where that is inexpedient, by private letter, all fair questions about advertisements, while reserving the right to plead ignorance when that is the right answer. It asks nothing for its services except the confidence of its correspondents in giving their names and addresses, a confidence which will never be violated. Please state clearly whether you prefer to have your name withheld from answers printed here. No unsigned communications will be read. Address: The Ad-Visor, The Tribune, New York.

I wish to relate to you my experience in real estate carried on under the direction of a reputable newspaper, namely, the company you represent.

On July 14 my mother, sister and self left Jersey City via C. R. R. of N. J., at 10 a. m., and arrived at Beachwood at 12:30 noon. Your representative handed me a map and marked out where I would find my lots, which were lots 23-23, Block A-14, Plat A. After tracing about a mile through thickets, brush, sand, etc., I came upon a place where I assumed my lots must be, there being no stakes placed on the end of the wood where my lots were supposed to be situated.

I have, when I told him that I could not definitely locate the lots. Will you kindly favor me with your views on the subject?

JOSEPH CHRISTENSEN.

Beachwood is the New Jersey real estate circulation enterprise conducted by The Tribune. Many correspondents have written me about it in various moods of suspicion, accusation and simple inquiry. Some assume that, at $19.60, the price per lot at which the property is offered, the land must be uninhabitable because of swamps or tidalwater, or untenable because of some flaw in the deed. Others fear that there is a trick in the price.

Following Mr. Christensen's suggestion, in which others concur, I visited Beachwood, and this is what I have found: The land is good, solid earth, eminently suitable to human habitation. It is well above tidalwater and is not swampy or marshy. The title is guaranteed by the Fidelity Trust Company, of Newark, N. J.

Not being a real estate expert, and knowing almost nothing of New Jersey property values, I went to men who do know and inquired, not about Beachwood, but about property, identical in type and in natural advantages, immediately adjoining it. I found that lots on this property are held at a price so far beyond the Beachwood price that the disparity fairly shook my confidence and I was almost ready to believe that there was indeed something queer in The Tribune's proposition. So I carefully went over every possible point again. To the best of my belief there is not a lot in the whole Beachwood parcel which can be duplicated at anything like $19.60 on equally good ground anywhere in the vicinity.

Some locations are better than others. Mr. Christensen's two lots are not in the most desirable, nor are they in the least desirable, part of the Beachwood map. It inheres in the nature of a large land sale in small parcels that not all corners can get the best. Naturally, certain business locations have been held for purchasers who will agree to put up stores or business blocks; the price of these lots is, in every case, $19.60 each. The most attractive residential lots go to people who formally undertake to erect houses of a certain standard at once; the price of these lots, also, is, in every case, $19.60 each. This method makes for the best advantage of the property as a whole, and in the long run enhances the value of the outlying as well as of the frontal parcels. But there is not a single unsold lot in the whole tract which cannot be purchased from The Tribune tomorrow for $19.60, by any buyer who will formally agree to put up a certain standard of building within a reasonable period. And there is not, and will not be a single lot offered by The Tribune at any other price than $19.60.

"Outrage" and "swindle" are strong words, Mr. Christensen. If you will consult any real estate man who has expert knowledge of property values in the Toms River district, I think you will wish to retract them. Further, I believe that you will be well inclined to hold your purchase, despite the prognostications of the gloomy minded railroad towerman—who, by the way, denies the interview!

The label on the jar of Del-a-tone hair remover which I bought says that after several applications the growth will be less and less. Will Del-a-tone remove superfluous hair permanently? Is it harmful? Do you know of anything that will permanently remove hair?

M. E. S. Del-a-tone will not remove superfluous hair permanently. No drug will. Del-a-tone contains barium sulphide, persistent use of which is harmful to the skin.

I have read with interest your campaign for the betterment of conditions surrounding so-called "bargain sales," and especially the campaign against "quacks" and "cure" patent medicines. In this connection I take pleasure in submitting an advertisement which one of the druggists in this city is using in the street cars. I think it quite good, and if this same method were adopted generally by our better class of druggists, it would make the undertaking business less profitable and further the interest of practicing physicians. You can use this in whatever way you see fit. Wishing you all success in your efforts to save the "lams from fleeing," I am, E. J. WALSH.

Here is the advertisement. It is one of many of the same general character put out by the Stolts Bros' pharmacy, of Syracuse, N. Y.:

This "Ad" Helps You—It Also Helps Us.

Please do not ask us what patent medicines are worth. The question embarrasses us, as they are generally worthless. We sell patent medicines, but do not recommend them. If sick consult a physician. If really sick you cannot afford to take chances with any of the "cure-alls."

STOLTS BROS.

Do Other Druggists Advertise This Way?

It happens that the Stolts Brothers' drug store has been known to the Ad-Visor from personal experience for years. It is the highest class, and, I believe, the most prosperous drug business in the lively city of Syracuse to-day, thus proving that the drug store, properly conducted, is not dependent on the nostrum trade for its profits. "Do other druggists advertise this way?" inquires the placard. Mightily few! McConnell, of the Economical Drug Store, of Chicago, was the pioneer in this line. Blakie, of Utica, N. Y., has for years warned the public against worthless nostrums. A few others have been equally bold and frank. But most druggists still feel obligated to stick to the fraud-medicine trade and hand out worthless or harmful quack preparations with a smug word of endorsement. "This ad helps you" the Stolts Brothers declare to the people of Syracuse. It does, indeed! It is a force for popular education.

As an old reader of The Tribune, I would appreciate it if you would inform me as to the merits and trustfulness of enclosed booklet. While such advertisement is not to be found in your paper, yet it can be seen in "The Globe," and I believe "The Globe" to be a fair evening paper and for that reason would appreciate your opinion.

The booklet is the lure of Eckman's Alternative, a "consumption cure." Eckman's Alternative cannot cure tuberculosis. Its pretensions to do so are fraudulent. Mr. Schwarz is in error in accusing "The Globe" of publishing the Eckman advertising. "The Globe" does not carry this or any other consumption nostrum. Any paper that does, shares the heavy responsibility of betraying its own sick readers into the trap of a species of quackery which may cost them both money and life.

I have been instructed by my doctor to take a teaspoonful of Jayne's Blood Tonic after every meal to strengthen my nerves. Would you be so kind as to tell me what this consists of and if it will do me any good? WILLIAM HARNLEY.

Ask your doctor, Mr. Harnley. As he is prescribing the tonic he must know what it contains. If he does not, get rid of him as quick as you can, for he isn't fit to practise medicine. No physician worthy of the title gives medicine of which he does not know the nature and ingredients.

M'CALL, GOADED BY INVESTIGATOR, YELLS DEFIANCE

Dares Any One to Show Shady Subway Act by His Commission.

DOLBTS POSSIBILITY OF FIVE-CENT FARES

New System Too Long for That Price, He Says—Unmoved by "L" Contract Variations.

"Understand that this is a defiance!" Edward E. McCall, chairman of the Public Service Commission, thumped the table and his eyes snapped in resentment of the efforts made by the legislative committee which yesterday resumed its investigation of the Public Service Commission in this district, to "fasten something" on it.

All day Senator Thompson, chairman, and ex-Senator Merton E. Lewis, counsel, had been boring away at the head of the commission to discover what truth there might be in allegations that the interests of the public had not been properly protected in the subway contracts.

The committee, counsel and witness were seated around a table in the small hearing room of the New York County Lawyers' Association, at 165 Broadway. To keep cool they had shed their coats. Smoking was permitted to soothe the harassed feelings of those who had to toil in such torrid weather.

But the strain finally became too great for the chairman. When Senator Thompson asked why the Interborough Rapid Transit Company had received certain privileges in connection with the third tracking and extension of the elevated lines that had not been given to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit he leaned across the table and with a whack that jarred the whole room said:

"Liar," cries the Chairman. "I defy any living human being to place his finger on any act of mine or any act of my predecessors or any act of the commission at any time that is open to criticism."

The enraged chairman paused a moment and then shot out the declaration that he intended what he said as a defiance.

"Well," said Senator Thompson, tactfully, "we won't go into that now, I guess."

But the witness was not to be so easily mollified. He was aroused and just had to say what was on his mind. He continued: "A member of my family the other day read to me an editorial from a New York paper that Travis H. Whitney, the secretary of the commission, was going to resign because of politics. I had injected into the commission and the favoritism I had shown."

McCall Questions 5-Cent Fare. "I will go further than that and say that I doubt the feasibility of a 5-cent fare. I do not believe it will be ample. Please do not misunderstand me as saying I advocate an increase fare, but I am not as sanguine as most men in the expectation that a 5-cent fare will be the successful solution of the subway problem, judging it simply as a financial problem."

"Do you know," said Senator Lewis, with the air of a man who had trapped his witness, "that the Interborough recently declared a 20 per cent dividend, all earned out of five-cent fares?"

"Yes," replied Chairman McCall, "but your conclusions regard to the new systems are wrong, because the haul there will be three times as long as in the present system. I want to say, however, that if it can be demonstrated to me that any corporation earns 20 per cent on its invested capital I will declare that it is too much and that compensation must be made to the public in the reduction of rates."

Senator Lawson, of Brooklyn, wanted to know why the city had not put up all the money needed for the subway system rather than put itself in the hands of private corporations. The question was repeated by Senators Lawson and Thompson in a little different way.

"If I believed for one instant that the city was in a financial condition to construct all of these roads, I would never have signed these contracts," said the witness.

Raps Rare-Brained Persons.

And the chairman expressed in his face a feeling of pity at what he deemed the dense ignorance of the men from upstate. "If you would only look into these things yourself, instead of listening to irresponsible charges of rare-brained persons, you would know what has actually been going on," he remarked.

The chairman said this city had never been able to keep abreast of the times in transportation facilities.

"The system we are now building," he added, "will relieve the congestion for a while, but in five years after it is in operation the congestion will be just as bad as ever."

Senator Thompson made a great point over the divergence in the third tracking contracts for the elevated lines. In the case of the Interborough the city is to receive 2 per cent of the gross earnings. In the case of the Brooklyn roads the plan is that the company and the city shall share equally in the net profit.

Chairman McCall explained that in each case the conditions were different and that always the terms were the best that could be obtained for the city.

"Both sides were clawing at one another like a bunch of tigers," he added, "and it is remarkable that they came to any agreement at all."

"You think that the morals of the city officials will be better in fifty or sixty-five years, when you are going to come into possession of these roads?" asked Senator Thompson. "That their morals will be as high as they are in Niagara County, where I come from, when they can safely handle these roads?"

Laughingly Chairman McCall replied he hoped so.

Quizzed as to the attitude of the various city officials in the negotiations prior to the signing of the contracts, the witness said:

"You place me in an embarrassing position. I have no desire to pose before the critic of any official in the present administration."

"We take the attitude that the present Mayor of the city is no better than you are," remarked Chairman Thompson.

"Am I supposed to take that as a left-handed compliment?" asked the witness with a smile.

The hearing will be resumed this morning.

REHEARSES PART AS CORD SLAYER

Partner of Murdered Man Compelled to Pose at Scene of Crime.

STANDS BESIDE "BODY" OF VICTIM

Automobilists Then Ride Past to See if They Can Identify the Prisoner.

Camden, N. J., Sept. 9.—Olaf Peterson, who has been detained here since September 1 on account of the murder of his partner, Samuel Cord, found dead in a ditch with five bullet holes in his body August 31, was compelled to enact the part of Cord's murderer in a rehearsal of the known parts of the tragedy, staged at the scene of the crime early yesterday morning.

On the night of the shooting an automobile party passed through Pensauken Township, where the crime was committed, and at the spot where Cord's body was found later they saw an automobile standing, with a man lying in the roadway and another stooping over him. The machine slowed up and the party called, "Want any help?" The stooping man answered, "No, no; he's all right."

At the same hour last night a detective lay down in the road and assumed the position of the murdered man while Peterson leaned over him. The lights of the car were dimmed as witnesses said they were on the night of the murder.

Then the same automobile, containing the scenery drive past, slowing down like the man they saw that night, but they could not identify his voice. This seemed a strong point for Swedish accent.

On the way to the scene, Peterson was very talkative, and intimated that Cord had been interested in a certain woman, who often called him on the telephone for fifteen to thirty minutes conversation. When asked to explain what bearing this might have on the case, Peterson said: "If you were a husband and found your home being broken into, what would you do?"

In the jail yesterday afternoon Peterson admitted that on several occasions he had been arrested for land deals. He served eleven months for cashing money orders at the District Court in Jersey City, held there yesterday. They decided to raise the price of a "growler" or can of beer from 10 to 15 cents after the first of next month. Increased license fees and the war tax, which the brewers make of retailers pay, saloon men say will force them out of business. Years ago the "growler" sold for 5 cents. While the "growler" is supposed to contain a pint, its size is really determined by the size of the can and the purchaser's thirst.

STEINMETZ CALLS FORD ONE-SIDED

Famous Engineer Belitts $10,000,000 Peace Gift.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.) Detroit, Sept. 9.—Charles P. Steinmetz, the world's greatest electrical engineer, who addressed the members of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers at their annual convention here to-day, called Henry Ford a one-sided genius.

"Henry Ford, who has asked me to visit him to-day, is entitled to the qualification of great greatness, but he is one-sided," said Mr. Steinmetz. "Hopes may be laid in his $10,000,000 peace offer, but little should be expected from it."

"The best way to stop the war would be to talk humanity and not bloodshed and conquest. If the citizens of the United States want the nation to remain at peace they should take a less wholehearted, bitter interest in it."

"If they would perform their work and enjoy their play with continually injecting the sentiment of the war into their conversations it would be the first great peace step."

"Science, not devastation, death and ruin, is destined to bring about the new civilization of peace and progress, wonderful electrical, mechanical, commercial and agricultural advances."

"Electricity, which, with every other scientific agency, is in its infancy, is destined to rehabilitate the soil of the earth, which has lost productivity through lack of fertilization after hundreds of harvests. By supplying the soil with nitrogen from the air, through electrical devices, the United States will be able to feed the world. The soil needs fertilizing more badly in this time of war than ever."

"There is growing unrest in Constantinople," the dispatch adds. "The Young Turks are growing weary of German activities. The Sheikh ul Islam has resigned."

JOBBER'S GOLD THIRST UNSLAKED BY TREATS

Congenial Barkeep Shocked to Find He Must Pay Plumber.

Montclair, N. J., Sept. 9.—"Treats is treats, but a plumber's bill is something else," according to a decision handed down in the Montclair District Court to-day. For ten years Edgar D. Ackerman, a plumber of Newton, had been doing odd jobs for Morris Snyder, a saloonkeeper, at 289 Glenwood Avenue, Bloomfield. After each job it was Snyder's custom to say, "Have a cigar, Ed," or, "How about a stem, Ed?"

In all those ten years Ackerman never sent a bill. Snyder never expected one. Recently when the plumber was planning to move to Newton from Bloomfield, he sent a statement to the saloonkeeper for $170.70, covering charges for services since 1905. The saloonkeeper refused to pay, saying the plumber had received compensation for his work in the District Court in Jersey City, held there yesterday. They decided to raise the price of a "growler" or can of beer from 10 to 15 cents after the first of next month. Increased license fees and the war tax, which the brewers make of retailers pay, saloon men say will force them out of business. Years ago the "growler" sold for 5 cents. While the "growler" is supposed to contain a pint, its size is really determined by the size of the can and the purchaser's thirst.

Dealers Think Prohibition Fight Unnecessary. It will be unnecessary to wait for prohibition to put saloonkeepers and liquor dealers out of business if taxes and license fees continue to increase, according to the Wine, Liquor and Beer Dealers' Association of Long Island City, held there yesterday. They decided to raise the price of a "growler" or can of beer from 10 to 15 cents after the first of next month. Increased license fees and the war tax, which the brewers make of retailers pay, saloon men say will force them out of business. Years ago the "growler" sold for 5 cents. J., thirty-eight, of 372 Fifty-second Street, Brooklyn, was held in $1,600 bail by Magistrate Simms in Tombs court yesterday. The magistrate suggested an investigation of conditions at these baths, calling them a disgrace to the city.

Mrs. Spitalo, whose testimony was corroborated by Ida Klein, of 78 Rutgers Street, said she entered the bath on Sunday at 5 p. m., and that Sullivan forced an entrance to her room soon after. She made her escape.

In the past a certain type of merchant has regarded the public as fair game. The advertising columns of otherwise reputable journals have been the preserves in which he has planted his decoys.

Inspector Gray invited his men to take a good look at Gregory, whose Bertillon measurements, he said, corresponded strikingly to those of one Baron Greenbaum, otherwise known as Bernard Greenbaum, who, in June, 1896, was convicted of grand larceny in this city and served one year in the penitentiary. In 1909 Greenbaum was convicted of passing bad checks in St. Louis, fined $100 and ordered to leave the city in twenty-four hours.

In 1900 he got 120 days in jail for larceny and was then deported. When Gray drew attention to a scar on the prisoner's face, Gregory blushed and said, "Now, indeed, these are scars received in Her Majesty's service in the Boer War."
