Wilson Offers Peace Terms, Based on U.S. in World League and Victory for Neither Side

Wilson, President, has set forth in a message to Congress a proposal for a world league in which the United States would participate and a plan for the establishment of a new world order. The proposal is intended to avert the possibility of another world war and to provide for the maintenance of peace and security.

The President's proposal includes the following elements:

1. The establishment of a world league composed of all nations, with the United States as a permanent member.
2. The adoption of a new world order based on the principles of self-determination, freedom, and equality.
3. The establishment of a system of international courts and tribunals to settle disputes and enforce international laws.
4. The imposition of economic sanctions and the use of military force to ensure compliance with international agreements.
5. The provision of financial assistance to nations in need.

The President's proposal is based on the belief that the United States has a special responsibility to lead the world in the promotion of peace and security. The proposal is intended to be a model for other nations to follow, and it is hoped that it will be adopted by the United Nations.

The President's proposal has been met with mixed reactions. Some have praised it as a step forward in the promotion of peace and security, while others have criticized it as too weak and insufficient to prevent another world war.

The President's proposal is a significant step forward in the promotion of peace and security, and it is hoped that it will be adopted by the United Nations.
