HIS GIFT THIS YEAR WAS A FAN OF OSTRICH PLUMES

By BETTY BROWN.

New York, Dec. 19.—A veil may be trimly tied close to the face. It may hang in loose ripples held only at the top or it may be tied closely enough in a bow high at the back, but for all that, hang rather loosely at the chin. That's the style from Parisian shops, as shown in this sketch. The veil is of castor lace, tied in a large knot high on the turban hat.

Wherever you go these days the ostrich plume and feather is in evidence. Albeit the feather may give an airy impression on a summer day, a simple wide-brimmed hat of creamy tulle and silk braid becomes elaborate to just the right degree when the brim is softened by a circle of ostrich feathers. Best of all, though, is the fan of proudly waving plumes, as complement to the feather-edged hat—a "sure-fire" Christmas gift from galling admirer. Just a suggestion—her appreciation may be doubled by a theatre invitation following the gift, giving opportunity to display to advantage the best fascinations of both hat and fan.

three days old.

CARYVILLE

Caryville, Dec. 20.—Caryville, an important industrial center of West Florida deals largely in the manufacture and sale of lumber and timber. The L. & N. railroad furnishes transportation for the immense shipments leaving daily for Pensacola. The Henderson-Waits Lumber company operates one of the largest turpentine industries in the south supplying thousands of barrels of rosin and turpentine.

Caryville is one of the oldest towns in Florida, and its lumber business began back in the '70's, when a small saw-mill located where the Henderson-Waits Co. now stands, produced an average of 35,000 feet a day. This little mill was owned by Pensacola capitalists who used it for the square timber market.

Today Caryville is a beautifully situated, pretty saw-mill village, proud of its excellent schools and churches and of its moral and social standing in the community.

SCHOLARSHIPS STATE SCHOOLS

GENERAL EXTENSION DIVISION REPRESENTING THE UNIVERSITY AND COLLEGE EXTENDING CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.

Gainesville, Dec. 20.—(Special).—The role of Santa Claus is the latest one of the general extension division which represents the university of Florida and the Florida state college for women. It is going to hand 150 correspondence course scholarships out of its pack to fifty of the brightest girls, fifty of the brightest boys and fifty of the best young teachers in the state—three for each county.

Scholarships will be awarded to girls on the recommendation of home demonstration agents, to boys on the recommendation of county demonstration agents and to teachers on the recommendation of county school superintendents. All will be regardless of previous training.

Appointments will take effect Jan. 1. These are in the class of serviceable Christmas gifts; in fact, the more they are used the longer they will last. Every scholarship will hold good as long as the person makes a credible grade in any subject he undertakes. This plan makes it possible for those who have not had the advantage of four-year high schools to complete high school work and to get many college credits without seeing the campus of either the university of Florida or the Florida state college for women.

These scholarships carry out the spirit of the bill which was passed at the last meeting of the legislature for the support of the general extension division, as the bill provides for the selection out of ambitious and bright boys and girls in the state for development along lines for which they are best fitted. As ability, not previous training, will count, the members of corn, pig and poultry clubs who have used their heads have equal chances with the boys and girls who can scan Vergil. Not the teachers who have the greatest number of high school or college credits, but some of the best teachers are the ones to whom scholarships will be awarded.

The college courses offered through correspondence include those leading to degrees in arts and sciences, education, agriculture, home economics and music and to certificates in art. For those who wish to enter professional schools the general extension division will arrange for correspondence courses that will count in preparation for the professional courses and in this way shorten the time required for resident courses.

Teachers who win scholarships may take high school courses, college course or review courses which will help them raise the grades of their certificates.

LIFE SENTENCES ARE COMMUTED

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 20.—At least one prisoner serving a life sentence in the North Carolina state penitentiary will not take advantage of Governor Bickett's blanket commutation of all life terms to thirty years. She is "Aunt Sara" Wycoff, sentenced in 1879 for murder, and who expressed today a desire to spend the remainder of her life in the prison where she is well cared for. She would be given immediate freedom under the order issued by Governor Bickett.

Thirty-four other prisoners are affected by the order. These include a number who were saved from the electric chair by executive clemency. Twenty-one were convicted of murder.

In issuing the commutation order, Governor Bickett expressed the belief that "no man ought to suffer eternal punishment in this world."

"When you leave a man his life," the governor said, "you have no right to take away his hope. There is no opportunity of making a better citizen of a prisoner or of developing manhood when he has nothing before him save the prospect of prison walls for the remainder of his natural life."

DUTCH EXPECTING CALL FOR KAISER

The Hague, Dec. 20.—Long inclined to believe the allies would not make a serious demand for extradition of the former emperor, William, the Dutch government now expects such demand, the Associated Press was officially informed today. As far as the Associated Press is able to learn Holland will stick to her original intention to refuse the demand for extradition.

No. 1—Continued From Page One

lows: "It was in 1914 after we had been compelled to declare war upon Turkey that the British protectorate over Egypt was declared. So far as this being intended or indeed regarded at the time as a high-handed act, aimed at the suppression of Egyptian liberties, it was decided upon by Mr. Asquith's government as a much milder and more generous policy than that of annexation, which at that time was strongly advocated by some. Cyprus, which had long been administered by the Colonial office as part of the British Empire, was annexed. But the opportunity of incorporating Egypt in the Empire was deliberately, and I think, wisely rejected because it was intended, in a wide latitude of opportunity which the formulae of a protectorate affords, to give free scope to the political aspirations and the self-governing capacities of the Egyptian people.

"I need hardly elaborate the reasons for which Great Britain is compelled to interest herself in the political fortunes of Egypt, and is unable to give any encouragement to the claim of complete national independence. Quite apart from the fact that Egypt, if left to stand alone, could neither protect her frontiers against external aggression nor guarantee a strong or impartial government at the gate of Palestine, at the doorway of Africa and the high road to India, renders it impossible that the British empire with any regard to its own security and conditions should wash its hands of the responsibility for Egypt.

"Egypt is of course primarily an Egyptian interest, the good government and the prosperity and happiness of its people are the highest consideration. But it is also a British interest of capital importance and I suspect that there are few who would deny that it is also a world interest, and that the world interest is best secured by leaving Egypt under the aegis of a great civilized power.
