

EFFECTS OF GLOBE TROTTING

Young Man With Receding Chin Expatiates on Educational Advantages of Travel.

The young man with the sloping forehead and receding chin had been... the group on the porch of the country club for nearly an hour with... of the people he had met and... the wonderful things he had done on his one trip abroad.

"After all," he said, "there is nothing to travel abroad to develop a man and complete his education, don't you know? I might say that the person who has never traveled abroad is a perfect ignoramus. Travel abroad broadens one's mind so, don't you know?"

"To a certain extent that is true," replied the old banker with the Van Dyke beard, "but it all depends upon circumstances. Now, here is a remarkable instance in itself—this walking stick which I carry. It is, as you see, a handsome malacca stick with a gold head, carved in curious characters.

"This stick was given to my grandfather, who was a Boston merchant in the China and East Indian trade, by an eastern potentate in Calcutta. My grandfather carried that stick with him on six voyages around the 'Horn.' Had it with him in China, Japan, India and most of the other Oriental countries.

"My grandfather gave the stick to my uncle, who took it with him to Russia when engaged in surveying a proposed railroad from Paris to St. Petersburg. My uncle at his death left the stick to my brother, who, as you know, was in the diplomatic corps. It was with him in every European country, and was constantly in the company of kings and queens.

"My brother gave the stick to me; it has been my companion on several trips to Europe besides making a trip to Australia, and one to South Africa, and here it is, still helping me to hobble about."

"Just fancy," said one of the young ladies, examining the stick curiously. "Really, it is very remarkable, isn't it?"

"Very," responded the old gentleman. "But the most remarkable thing about it is this: In spite of all its travels and its association with royalty and the bar, it is nothing but the same old stick that it was when it first started out."

The young man with the receding chin retired into the solitude of the clubhouse.

Etiquette Lessons for Men. When a lady gives you her seat in a street car, thank her, but in such a manner that she will not be emboldened to open a conversation with you. As a bit of instruction doled out on the man's side in the Bellecoteur.

When someone calls you by phone and says: "Do you know who is talking?" and you answer that you do not, and the person continues to ask if you do or can't guess, utter a joyous cry of laughter and say you know it is the sartorialist. Then hang up the receiver.

If you know a fat girl with a slim sister, always mistake the fat one for the slim one, and vice versa.

When walking with a lady who steps upon your toes, it is nice, if you have a wooden leg, to keep the foot of that leg where she will step upon it whenever you can do this unobtrusively with a little practice.

The Straw That Showed. Mother—Do you think that young man has matrimonial intentions, my dear? Daughter—I certainly do, mamma. He tried to console me last night that I looked prettier in that two-dollar hat than in the three-guinea one.—Scaps

Art Today. "She is being fitted for the stage." "Studying hard, I presume?" "Oh, no. Just being fitted with the necessary gowns."

Cows That Never Drink. The "wild cow" of Arabia, in reality an antelope, the Beatrix oryx, is said never to drink, which is probably correct, for unless these animals can descend the wells they can find no drinking water for ten months in the year. There is no surface water, and rain falls but precariously during the winter, says the Wide World magazine. These antelopes, however, are provided with a curious food supply, especially designed as a thirst quencher. This is a parasite which grows on the roots of the desert bushes and forms a long, slender, full of water and juice. The antelope digs deep holes in the sand in order to get at these.

A Clew. The Man—Does Mrs. Sudds, the fisher-woman, live in that house on the corner? The Boy—I guess so. Anyway, she hangs out in the back yard.

Revised. It is easier for a camel to get into the public eye than for a rich man's wife and daughters to keep out of the eye.—Puck.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

Health Marvelously Restored by Doan's Kidney Pills.

William T. Thomas, 211 So. Franklin St., DuBois, Pa., says: "A physician informed me I had Bright's disease and I was laid up for three months. I had terrible backache and the passages of the kidney secretions nearly killed me. I was nervous, had night sweats and could not sleep. In fact, I was a physical wreck. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me prompt relief. Continued use cured me."

PROMISED A LIVELY TIME

Mark Twain's Outline of Editorial Policy He Had Made Up His Mind to Adopt.

Mark Twain took the editorial chair on the Buffalo Express in August, 1863, and this is the paragraph in which he made the readers acquainted with his new responsibility: "I only wish to assure parties having a friendly interest in the prosperity of this journal that I am not going to hurt the paper deliberately and intentionally at any time. I am not going to introduce any scurrilous return or in any way attempt to make trouble. I am simply going to do my plain, unpretending duty—when I cannot get out of it. I shall work diligently and honestly and faithfully as all things and upon all occasions—when private and want shall counsel me to do so. In writing I shall confine myself to the truth, except when it is attended with inconvenience. I shall without scruple rebuke all forms of crime and misconduct, except when committed by the party inhabiting my own pen. I shall not make use of slang or vulgarity upon any occasion or in any circumstances and shall never use profanity except in discussing household and taxes. Indeed, upon second thought, I will not even then, for it is inelegant, un-Christian and degrading. I shall not often meddle with politics, because we have a political editor who is already excellent and only needs a term in the penitentiary to be perfect. I shall not write any poetry unless I conceive a spite against the subscribers."

"The Wish Is Father to the Thought." Dr. Robert L. Wagnoner, the president of Baldwin university, said, in the course of an address on pedagogy at Perusa, O.:

"And one of the most remarkable changes in the last 30 years of teaching is the abolition of corporal punishment. A boy of this generation is never whipped. But a boy of the last generation—well!"

Doctor Wagnoner smiled. "The boys of the last generation," he said, "must have believed that their instructors all had for motto: 'The wish is father to the thought.'"

Unfair. Senator John H. Bankhead, discussing a political move said with a smile: "Oh, it's too coldly calculated. It's almost unfair. In fact, it's like Mrs. Blank."

"Mrs. Blank is a leader of Bar Harbor society. Her husband said to her, one afternoon, as she made a very elaborate toilet for a garden party that she was giving to some members of the British legation: 'Why did you write to all our guests that this party was to be absolutely informal?'"

"Mrs. Blank laughed. 'So as to be the best-dressed woman present, of course,' she said."

NOT THE TIME FOR THAT

Scotsmen Objected to Mixture of Good Whisky and Religious Conversation.

Geon Seaman, editor of Punch, was the principal guest at a dinner of the London Authors' club recently, which was followed by a discussion on "Humor." Mr. Seaman began with a story representing the smiling of good dinners by any discussion at all.

There were three characters in the story—a bluebottle and two Scotsmen. The story at once struck a note of probability by showing the Scotchman drinking whisky. The bluebottle looked on the pun; otherwise silence reigned.

This was broken by one of the Scotsmen trying to locate the bluebottle with zoological exactitude. Said the Scotsman:

"Sandy, I'm thinking if you fly in a bunch or a beak."

The other replied: "Man, don't spoil your whisky with religious conversation."

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible vesicles from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few scattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalded. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed."

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with vesicles. Mrs. Joseph Kneemann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."
