Benediction—W. H. Coleman.

The greeting by Miss Iola Liddon was beautifully worded and spoken with a warm welcome. She touched on inculcating divine truths alongside of secular instruction.

The pastor, Mr. Coleman, read the hundredth Psalm, made a few pertinent remarks about the spread of Commodore Perry's mission to Japan in 1854 with the United States navy and opened it up to mission labors of the world and the wonderful work that has been done for God's kingdom ever since among that marvelous people.

One of the pieces de resistance was "Patriotism and the Gospel," in which the following young ladies participated and acts their parts beautifully:

Miss Johnnie Liddon, personating the East; Miss Nannie Ogden Mathews, the West; Miss Josie Hodge, the North; Miss Sue Barco, the South; Miss Sara Whitfield, Columbia; and Miss Potter, Evangeline.

The four points of the compass, as personated, sang with Columbia in the center, when Evangeline enters with the cross and presents the same to Columbia, when she in turn presents each participant with a flag. This scene ended in a tableau with Evangeline pronouncing a blessing, during which Mrs. Sylvester sang "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." The young ladies joined in the chorus, producing an impressive and inspiring scene.

The climax of the evening was reached when the following maidens and youths in good time went through the brought the musical part of the program to great excellence; while the soloists, Misses Sara Whitfield and Johnnie Liddon, renewed the delight of their host of admirers by their sweet singing.

A pleasing picture was the beautiful manner in which the chancel was decorated and many tarried after the exercises to admire the artistic taste of Mr. Goodrich, of the Ocala Greenhouse Co., in the disposition of the floral offerings.

A collection was taken that netted $13.62 to be used in Sunday school and general church work.

The Star extends congratulations and felicitations to one and all on the admirable manner in which all carried out the parts assigned them and thanks them for the pleasures of an evening well and profitably spent and long to be remembered.
