PINEAPPLE PRICES UP
Good news to the independent pineapple grower is the announcement of higher prices to be paid this year by the canneries, an increase of nearly 20 per cent over prices of last year. Next Step forward should be better grading and sizing of pines by a mechanical process at the cannery. This would do much to insure a square deal both to the grower and to the cannery buying the fruit. We will have more to say on this subject later.

THE SWEET POTATO AND GARDEN WEEDS
With the approach of summer and school vacations close at hand, when school and home gardens are usually abandoned to weeds, we ought to give special consideration to the humble but useful sweet potato, Teachers and pupils, householders and farmers who have not yet tried planting the sweet potato as a fill-in crop would do well to set all available land, which would otherwise be ideal, to one of the rank growing varieties. We know of none better than the New Era. The vines cover the ground quickly, smother the weeds, mellow the soil and produce a crop at little cost, and with little attention. The essential part is to give the plants a good start by providing a fair and clean seed bed. After this they will take care of themselves if necessary.

Make your plans now to grow sweet potatoes in place of weeds during the long dry summer months which will soon be upon us. Select well matured cuttings rather than soft succulent ones; unless your soil is especially mellow and fairly moist. This is essential to getting a good full stand, without which weeds are sure to crowd in and replace the otherwise universally adaptable sweet potato.

INSECTS IN STORED FOODS
We do not know just how much money is lost every year in Hawaii from destruction of stored foods by insects, but we know the loss is enormous. Rice, corn, barley, flour, beans, peas, dried fruits, dried fish, and meats and many other kinds of food in storage are attacked and devoured by various kinds of insects. The loss in the United States from these enemies is said to be over 100 million dollars every year.

In addition to eating and destroying thousands of dollars worth of food in Hawaii, these insects also contaminate with their poisons the food they do not eat. Experiments carried on in Ohio prove that these contaminated foods cause serious sickness. One scientist states as his belief that eating rice contaminated by weevils causes beri-beri.

Protect the stored food crops which you raise, for losses in storage from insects may remove all your profit. Protect also the food stuffs you buy and keep in temporary storage, for these may be attacked by the same insects and you suffer loss there, too.
How to Protect
Many experiments have shown that heat is one of the best and cheapest protections against these destructive insects. A temperature of 125 or 130 degrees Fhr. is fatal to them if maintained for an hour or more, but this does not hurt the stored foods and does not kill the germinating power of corn and beans. Of course, one has to be very careful to not let the temperature run too high or injury will result.

Another good method is fumigation with carbon-bisulphide, placing the stuff to be treated in an air-tight room or chest, and putting in carbon-bisulphide at the rate of one ounce to 25 cubic feet of space. Carbon-bisulphide is explosive and inflammable and also has a very disagreeable odor.

For small amounts of stored foods to be treated, we believe that mild heat in an oven is the best. It will pass every farmer and householder to give thought to this matter. If more detailed information is wanted we will be glad to furnish it. For the use of heat on a large scale against destructive insects we suggest that Bulletin 354 of the Ohio Experiment station, Wooster, Ohio, published January 11, 1922, be sent for. This gives detailed information on building a heat plant and its requirements.

SOME GOOD BULLETINS FOR YOU

COMMERCIAL BANANA VARIETIES FOR HAWAII
The successful establishment of a crop as a new industry is frequently more dependent upon the selection and development of a suitable variety or varieties than upon any other factor. The ideal variety of any crop is one that most nearly meets (1), the commercial requirements of the markets where it is sold, and (2) the cultural conditions under, which it is grown, such as climate, soils, shipping distance, etc.

ferred by some for extra quality bunches.
Cabbage is up a little just now, around 2 cents per lb., but it is not steady.
Papayas are firm at 2 and 2 1-2 cents per lb.

White potatoes (California) cost about 2 cents per lb laid down in Honolulu, but island grown white potatoes bring a little higher than that.
Watermelons are abundant now, dealers paying 3 to 3 1-2 cents per pound.
