Men and women enter the city that when they lost an in business, keep his responsibility if it previously, in a case, on the other hand, her more because to take a part in the world. Great surprise expressed by those who had men in this city to be nice to the women whom society when courses in business houses is almost unheard of.

Empires sometimes say that when a man has had no practice in being nice during the day they marvel that he knows how to act, and what to say, when he enters the social world.

A great many men are negligent about giving their seats in the street car to women. When a woman neglects her proper until the officer she should expect to take the seat of a woman, but during the day, particularly a holiday or Sunday, street cars are filled, and many men sitting down while women are going their way to keep from falling with every lurch of the car. In most of the electric cars in other cities here are seats for the passengers, but here one must learn to balance himself as well as a conductor in order to keep up.

FROM A SOLDIER

Editor Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

Sir: As was stated in a previous article, there are about 1000 military men on this island and Uncle Sam is now planning to increase this number to about 15,000 which is itself a significant thing for these islands.

If the average citizen of this city was to go into the police records and look up the number of arrests made by the police of military men in the last two years they would be surprised to know that nearly every one was for drunkenness or for some crime committed while under the influence of liquor.

Also, there are probably far more of these arrests than is generally known. Now, then, let us ask ourselves these questions: What will happen when the military force of this place is increased to 15,000? What will be the condition of the gun-house—empty or full? Who is going to benefit from this money spent by the men in the service? And last, but not least, is the community at large going to reap the benefit of the liquor interests, who have nothing in common with you and your homes, or the people who really buff up a place without which the liquor traffic could not flourish.

It has been a puzzle to me why men will go down the street sober and meet a friend in a drunken condition and nearly always sneer at them and make remarks about their conduct that are not complimentary, and then proceed to go and join the same condition.

There are men in the service who are court-martialed regularly and finally get to the point where they are trial means a dishonorable discharge and yet they put the blame on the army and get a discharge to go back to the army.

Lots of them, in fact, are a good number of them are but a few more than boys, and really are a disgrace what they are doing. They are several thousand of these men and they are here, grabbing the land off land.

There is no one to blame, as they should be, but, on the other hand, they are doing a good habit by the place here. They are not naturally vicious and with the right handling and proper discipline could be made to good enough citizens and a credit to any community.

So, citizens Honolulu, get together and help to protect these representatives of the U. S. government from themselves by killing the liquor traffic here.

I could go on for columns telling of the things I have personally seen done by soldiers while intoxicated, and which may be stopped, not by the police, but by the voter of the city of Honolulu.
