Army and Navy News

The following story in the Army and Navy Journal confirms the Advertiser's story published the day following the visit of the Congressional party to Pearl Harbor:

Gen. Arthur Murray, Chief of Coast Artillery, on his way home from the Philippines, made a careful study of the defensive problems involved in holding the Hawaiian Islands as a naval base. While the southern coast line of Oahu at the present stage of development is well fortified, the north side of the island offers an ideal opening for an offensive landing, with every chance of success for any considerable body of troops. Between Kaena Point and Kahuku, a distance of sixteen miles, there is a marvelously fine shelving beach, where a landing could be made very easily. The principal town, Waialua, is situated midway between Kaena Point and Kahuku and is the terminus of the Oahu Railway, which rises gradually up through a broad, gently sloping valley leading southward a distance of twenty miles to Honolulu. At present there are no defensive works on the north coast of the island, and if there were, without the support of mobile forces, they would hardly be adequate to deal with any considerable landing force protected by a few battleships. The water running out to the north increases gradually from eight to eighty fathoms and then dips off suddenly to 170. There is ample anchorage for a navy of any size in ordinary weather, and in case of war the United States should be forced to hold the island, it would take 5000 or 6000 men with rapid-firing guns and field artillery to make any sort of a successful defense. It is not unlikely that several mortar batteries will be placed along this coast within the coming year.

North Pole As Military Station.

It is with regret that I see by the newspapers that Dr. Cook has found the North Pole; this means that there will be a military station located at the Pole, to be garrisoned by the Coast Artillery, as has always been the case when new territory has been acquired. Witness the sending of Co. M, 3rd Artillery, Captain Freyes, to California, via Cape Horn, in 1847, and of two companies of the 1st Artillery to Oregon, via Cape Horn and the Sandwich Islands, in 1849—a short trip of about six months; and of the 2d Artillery to Alaska in 1867.

The Pole possesses many good features for an Army station: First, it is inaccessible; second, it would be a disagreeable station; third, fuel, forage and light are scarce; fourth, contractors would fatten on their transportation contracts; fifth, it would be a good station to send officers to who are persona non grata at the War Department.—S. in Army and Navy Journal.

More Infantry for Hawaii.

More infantry for Oahu's posts is the recommendation made a few weeks ago by an army board dealing with local military affairs. It is presumed this has reference to increasing the force at Fort Shafter so that it will become a regimental post. A site for the erection of more buildings has been chosen on the rise of grounds Waikiki of the present structures.

Fleet Due Today.

The second division of the Pacific fleet is expected to return this morning from the Maalaea Bay tests, and the first division with Admiral Sebree, a little later. All the vessels may be docked before 5 p. m. Coal is on the docks for the bunkers of the entire fleet save the Colorado which has already coaled. The crews may be paid off today.

Former Minister to Hawaii.

Gen. Edward M. McCook, a veteran of the Civil War, ex-Governor of Colorado and former Minister of the United States to Hawaii, died at the Chicago Baptist Hospital, Chicago, Ill., Sept. 9, from Bright's disease. A brother, Gen. Anson G. McCook, U. S. V., of New York, was with him when he died. A cousin, Major Gen. Alexander McD. McCook, U. S. A., died several years ago.

Pearl Harbor Drydock.

Contracts with the San Francisco Bridge Company for the construction of the Pearl Harbor Drydock, Hawaii, at $1,760,000, and with the Maryland Steel Company, of Sparrows Point, for the construction of a fleet collier, at $850,000, were signed on Sept. 7 by Mr. Winthrop, Acting Secretary of the Navy. The contract arrived on the Alameda yesterday.

Mach. W. H. Eidelberg resignation accepted upon arrival of Maryland at Honolulu.

THE OTHER SIDE OF A REQUEST.

The calendar of Central Union church for some weeks carried a request to the people from the minister that they read a book entitled "A Prophet in Babylon." The author is the well-known British literary authority and evangelist, Dr. W. J. Dawson. The book criticizes the Christian church savagely to say the least. It pointedly suggests the question: "Is the Church a Failure," which is the topic on which the pastor will preach tomorrow morning, thus fulfilling his pledge to deliver a sermon suggested by this work.
