KUHIO FIGHTING FOR PLANTATION LABOR

SANITATION WORK MADE HONOLULU NON-INFECTIBLE FOR $100,000

$100,000 SPENT IN CLEAN-UP

Honolulu has been made "non-infectible" at an expense of approximately $100,000, $23,000 less than the original estimate made by Dr. Donald H. Currie in the anti-mosquito campaign was set in motion as the result of a discovery of a yellow fever case here.

This morning the Civic Sanitation Committee, which has headed and organized the work, held a meeting in the office of Governor Peear and discussed, concurrent with the approval of the Merchants' Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

A report which is to be forwarded to expense to the Territory of running the campaign for five months has been $91,000, while with the money spent by the Federal authorities included it is just over the $100,000 mark. This is against the estimate prepared by Dr. Currie of $123,000 for a "three months' campaign."

The report outlines the reason for the committee being called and gives a short summary of what has been done in connection with the mosquito work.

A strong recommendation is made that businessmen should see that proper legislation is carried through to ensure the Board of Health the necessary $2500 a month that is required for keeping down the mosquitoes. It is pointed out that keeping the town immune from yellow fever is now a matter of commercial interest.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF R. WILCOX' FIRST WIFE

Under the title of the "Romance of an Italian Girl," an English newspaper gives the following account of the death of the first wife of the late Robert Wilcox, Hawaii's first Delegate to Congress:

The celebrated woman journalist known as Manteo, whose career is lined with romance, has died suddenly in Rome. Donna Gina Sobrero, for that was her real name, was the daughter of a Piedmontese colonel and a Neapolitan baroness, Colouina di Stigliano. When a girl of fifteen, studying in Turin, she met the notorious adventurer Wilcox, a native of Honolulu, who boasted royal lineage and claimed to be king of the Sandwich Islands.

Signorina Sobrero, stirred by the pseudo prince's personality and the legends of chivalry associated with his name, ended by marrying him and accompanying him on a honeymoon voyage back to the land where she expected to reign as queen. On her arrival she learned that the youthful pretender's nearest title to the throne was that of having a father-who, as a skillful carpenter, had been employed in constructing a handsome wooden throne for the monarch. After a long period of martyrdom at the hands of her brutal spouse, this refined, highly educated young lady succeeded in escaping to California with her infant daughter. Finally she came back to Italy, where her lawsuit for the annulment of her marriage created immense interest, terminating in a favorable judgment on the score of mistaken personality.

HAWAII IMMIGRATION IN DANGER; HOUSE DECIDING

COMMITTEE URGED TO EXCEPT ISLANDS FROM LITERACY TEST

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—(Special Bulletin Cable.) Delegate Kuhio and other representatives of the Hawaiian Islands appeared today at the hearing of the House Committee on Immigration, to protest against the educational test incorporated in the immigration bill that has passed the Senate and is now before the House. It is proposed that Hawaii shall be excepted from the requirements of the test.

(Special Bulletin Cable.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—(Special Bulletin Cable.) Delegate Kuhio and other representatives of the Hawaiian Islands appeared today at the hearing of the House Committee on Immigration, to protest against the educational test incorporated in the immigration bill that has passed the Senate and is now before the House. It is proposed that Hawaii shall be excepted from the requirements of the test.

Grave fears are felt by the members of the Territorial board of immigration that the House will pass the new immigration bill without excepting Hawaii from the workings of the education or "literacy test," which requires in effect that all aliens entering the United States, except children, be able to read and write.

Up until a few days ago, it was taken for granted that Hawaii would be given an exception, such as was incorporated in the Dillingham bill. This substitute bill, however, passed the Senate with the literacy test applying to Hawaii as well as to the rest of the mainland. It was stated then that the passage of the bill in this form was due to an oversight, which would be corrected in the House.

Just how serious this oversight may be is shown by the fact that, according to the records of immigrants entering here, about 75 per cent. of the Spanish and Portuguese are illiterate and from 30 to 40 per cent. of the Russians. This is in round figures.

Commissioner of Immigration Clark was asked this morning as to the effect of making the literacy test applicable to Hawaii.

"Of the three nationalities entering most largely into our immigration," he said, "the Russians are the best educated, the Spanish next and the Portuguese next. However, the Portuguese immigrants have been more strictly country-bred people, which may account partly for this. Approximately 75 per cent. of the Spanish and Portuguese are illiterate and 30 to 40 per cent. of the Russians."

Dr. Clark, however, makes a comment which may be taken as pointing a possible way to getting plantation labor even should the test be enforced.

"Of late years the character of the Italians coming into the United States has largely changed," he said, "and even the Sicilians are largely literate. Perhaps about two-thirds of the Sicilians can read and write."

Dr. Clark also points out that should the literacy test be enforced on the mainland but not in Hawaii, the result would greatly stimulate immigration here as well as prevent immigrants from leaving for the Coast after coming here at the Territory's expense.

BIG SUM GIVEN PEARL HARBOR IN HOUSE

This sum is not itemized, and there is no means of telling for just what work it is intended, although officials here have a pretty good guess.

This is the exact amount of the estimate of the naval engineers for the proposed 200-foot extension of the drydock, and the appropriation is that this work has been deemed necessary by the committee, and that it has been included in the estimates for the coming year. This will insure the enlargement of the dock from 800 to

DEMOCRATS TO DO PROMOTION WORK ON TRIP

Hawaiian Democrats see a chance to do some effective politics for the whole Territory during the National convention, and the entire delegation that goes to Baltimore will be primed with facts and figures relating to the sugar industry calculated to show their mainland brethren the error of their ways on the tariff question.

Besides a long line of talk, the Territorial politicians intend to carry a full line of samples. There will be hundreds of pieces and hundreds of gallons of Pineapple and pineapple juice, and after being treated to these delicacies, delegates from the anti-sugar States will be informed that every industry of Hawaii, including pineapples and their products, will be shot to pieces if the tariff is tampered with. It is believed that with the taste of the luscious fruit still lingering, it will be impossible for the delegates to side with the free-sugar crowd. Allan Herbert is to have full charge of the Hawaiian exhibit, which will include promotional literature, as well as definite products.

MILLIONAIRES IN ROLE OF SAILORS

How Three Aristocrats Shipped To Honolulu

AS TOLD BY THE "MILLIONAIRE TRAMPS."

[NOTE.—Lured by the spirit of unrest and the desire to see life with the bark off, four young fellows with all kinds of money decided to work their way around the world. The four were Sidney R. Francis, son of ex-Governor Francis of Missouri, A. R. Dupont, son of the famous photographer Amy Dupont of New York and a scion of French nobility; Heywood Brown of New York aristocracy, and George R. Little, son of a noted St. Louis capitalist. Their novel adventure brought them into instant and country-wide notice as "The Millionaire Tramps." After getting to San Francisco and being entertained there at a luncheon to which sat down two Governors and the Mayor of the city, the adventurous young men shipped on the big windjammer Edward Sewall from San Francisco to Hawaii. In the following story, written for the Bulletin, they give their impression of the "romance of the sea."]

Up to our departure from San Francisco the party numbered four. At this point Heywood Brown abandoned the trip to settle down in Los Angeles, so that the party now numbers three.

We applied to Capt. Quick, master of the Edward Sewall, to be taken on as "foremast hands for the trip to Honolulu. We came with a note from Mayor Rolph. He hesitated to take us on, doubting that we expected to be treated as the rest of the crew. We were indignant at this, and finally gained his reluctant consent to take us on. We shipped as ordinary seamen, bunking in the "midship house," wages $15 per month.

On Friday, April 5, we left the Mission street dock and anchored out in the bay. All day the launch plied to and from the boat, bringing the crew in twos and threes. We learned then that this is customary for sea windjamners to be out of swimming distance in order to keep a crew aboard till they can get to sea. Next it appeared that of the twenty men who shipped as able seamen fourteen were as ignorant as ourselves. These things began to throw a new light on the captain's special favor in taking us aboard.

At 9 o'clock the next morning (Saturday) the tug hooked on and we started out of the Golden Gate. What with drunkenness and ignorance it is a marvel how we ever got the ship under sail. The first mate came aboard

WILL BATTLE AT MANEUVERS

The National Guard of Hawaii will clash with Uncle Sam's regulars in mock warfare, as a wind-up to the regular summer camp of the militia. General Macomb, department commander, says no reason why the regulars should not take the field with the militia, and probably the garrison of Fort Shafter will be turned out for the maneuvers.

The Guard camp this year will be at Moanalua, S. M. Damon having given permission for the Territorial troops to go under canvas on his estate. The camp this year will be on a spring will be worked out in practice.
