TRUE STORIES OF AMERICANS OF ACTION

John Brown may have been insane or he may have been merely erratic. He may have been a man of remarkable mind, as well as of wonderful will.

He was born of poor parents in Connecticut in 1800. There was Welsh and Dutch blood in him as well as English.

Brown was of a wandering disposition. From Ohio he had gone to Pennsylvania in 1825. In 1835 he returned to Ohio.

In 1848 he removed to Springfield, Mass., as the agent of western wool growers. Five years later he became bankrupt through taking a cargo of wool to England.

Gerritt Smith, a rich abolitionist, was trying to colonize freed negroes there, and this enterprise attracted Brown. But the experiment failed.

Brown was an abolitionist by inheritance. His father had grounded him in the faith. He used to help runaway slaves when he lived in Pennsylvania.

In 1849 he had begun to study the art of war. At the time of his visit to England he went to the continent to learn something of military matters.

He was made captain of a free-state company and took part in range and bushwacking. On one occasion he "executed" five proslavery men who had been terrorizing their neighborhood.

Brown kept on fighting. In one battle twenty-three men surrendered to Brown's force of nine. He planned to keep them captive until the authorities had liberated an equal number of free-state men.

In 1852 he went to Boston and secured money from abolitionists. Two hundred rifles had already been shipped to him at his headquarters in Iowa.

He appeared at Harper's Ferry as a farmer seeking a home. Renting a house, little by little he got his rifles and spears there. Spears were considered good weapons for the negroes.

He seized the town and arsenal and sent parties into the surrounding country to liberate and gather in slaves. Masters were captured by the aid of negroes. Everything went well at the beginning, but Brown permitted a railroad train to pass through and spread news of his actions.

When only three defenders remained with him a company of marines burst in the door and he was so seriously injured that it was thought he was killed.

beginning, but Brown permitted a railroad train to pass through and spread news of his actions. Up to 9 o'clock on Monday he could have safely withdrawn to the mountains, but he made no movement to do so.

Troops surrounded the town. Citizens were killed. Brown's various outposts were driven in. With his six last men he barricaded himself in an engine house.

When only three defenders remained with him a company of marines burst in the door and he was so seriously injured that it was thought he was killed.

Brown had denounced attempts to have him declared insane. He had rejected suggestions of rescue. He said he would not walk out of the door if open, that his object was more nearly accomplished by his death than by life.

The world saw when he died that there were men who regarded slavery as such a wrong that they were willing to die in the endeavor to end it. Victor Hugo said, "He died for the cause of Christ, like Christ."

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

The committee on credentials was then appointed as follows: K. M. Kohou, W. N. Punakala, T. B. Lyons, David Napahi, Abraham Halli, Antone De Rego, Sol. Meheula, J. H. Raymond, Noa Mahuka, Antone Perry, J. W. Kahalepuna, N. Meheula.

The committee on rules was named as follows: Jos. Perry Jr., J. K. Paahao, Charles Ka, Honohi, W. L. Kopa, Keawe Puhl, C. W. Ashford, Moses Palau, R. L. Gilliland, Er. N. Sulifu, George Fountain, John Koani.

Following the report of the credentials committee, which was returned after noon, the election of a permanent organization was in order. O. S. Shipman being nominated without opposition as permanent chairman of the convention. Chandler of Kauai beat T. B. Lyons for the honor of vice-chairman by a vote of 59 to 41.

The committee on platform was then appointed as follows: Henry West, T. J. Ryan, G. W. Kahukula, George Kauwe, Nelson K. Kaloa, H. H. Ewaliko, G. P. Keawehaku, E. H. F. Wolter, D. L. Kalawala, M. O. Kaleiopuu, J. S. Chandler, David A. White.

There were two hundred delegates present at the opening of the convention this morning. Whether or not Col. McCarthy would appear was a question that was discussed at length, but he did not appear. R. H. Trent dropped in for a few minutes with two tourists who were anxious to see a Territory convention in full running order and hear some Hawaiian music at the same time.

The "platform committee," which is supposed to have been perfecting the details of the 1910 principles of the party, appears to be a figment in the imagination of Boss McCandless. No delegate could be found who has seen the platform, and the greatest light that has been shed is the statement of McCandless himself that the platform would contain a plank declaring against assisted immigration for a period of two years.

With the exception of Col. McCarthy, all of the Democratic notables appeared at the convention this morning. Mayor Fera was busy shaking the hands of the country delegates as well as those of his own constituency, and encouraging the musicians, who were predicting all sorts of Democratic success in tuneless melodies.

"What is going to be in the platform?" was the commonest question that was heard in the convention hall this morning, but the platform was safely tucked away in the pocket of Boss McCandless and will be presented to the delegates this afternoon. They will be expected to swallow it and say nothing—or, at least, as little as possible.

McCandless wants none of the McCarthy conservatism, but at the same time asserts that he is not a radical. The Boss was a busy boss this morning, perfecting his machinery and making sure that it will run smoothly when the platform comes up for consideration against the assaults of any misguided delegate who thinks that the convention ought to have some voice in the framing of the important document.
