HORSE STORIES.—We learn that a countryman who came into town last evening to see the show and have a little amusement, had his horse and buggy stolen—he having hitched the same near the circus tent.

THOSE splendid summer hats have arrived at Farrand's; also a large lot of fine and coarse straw goods, for both gentlemen and ladies. Straw and palm leaf hats selling very low.

REGARDLESS of the late thunder storms, the weather still continues most extravagantly hot and unpleasant to endure. Thermometer ranges up to 96° in the shade, with no prospect of getting lower at present.

WHY stand ye here all the day idle?—Why don't you rush into Sam Perry's, opposite the Post Office, and get a suit of his excellent summer clothing? He has the best, sells the lowest and suits every customer perfectly.

FAMILIES should know that the place to find a stock of fresh and well selected groceries is at Eldridge's, corner of 3d and Perry. He has just made large additions to his stock, sells very low, and delivers goods to all parts of the city. Let him be handsomely patronized.

BOY DROWNED.—On Saturday last a boy by the name of Hunt, aged about 15 years, whose father resides in Le Claire, jumped from a raft near the levee and attempted to swim to the shore. His father seeing the danger his son was in, jumped in after him but did not succeed in rescuing him from a watery grave.

PHOTOGRAPHS, ETC.—The place to procure a really splendid photograph or ambrotype is at Olmstead & Co.'s, on Brady street, below the Auction store, east side, and also in Hill's new block, on Brady, between 3d and 4th streets. They are masters of their profession and warrant perfect satisfaction. Give them a call, jne20d1w

AFFRAY AT THE FIFTEEN MILE HOUSE.—Yesterday afternoon a bloody scene was enacted at the the Fifteen Mile House, on the Dubuque Road. A law suit had been in progress in that neighborhood for two or three days, before a justice of the peace, and much interest being felt in the result by the community, a large number of persons, probably sixty or seventy, were drawn together. Mr. Jacob W. Stewart and E. L. Cook were managing the suit for the respective parties, and we learn from them that much excitement existed during the day. At 5 o'clock the case was given to the jury, and during their deliberations the outside crowd imbibed pretty freely in liquor. When the crowd went in to hear the verdict of the jury all seemed in good humor, but shortly afterward Charles Kehoe asked Frank Lee to drink with him. Lee refused; Kehoe kept urging, and Clay Cressler told Kehoe he must not take Lee to drink. Kehoe then attacked Clay Cressler, who pulled off his coat to defend himself, and while so doing his brother, Charles Cressler, stepped between them, trying to keep Kehoe away. In an instant a large part of the crowd was engaged in the affray. Clubs, stones and other weapons that could be hastily found were used. Mr. Stewart had left before the fight commenced, and Mr. William Cressler (father of Charles and Clay) and Cook were settling the costs with the Justice of the Peace, Jas. B. Hopkins. All three of them rushed out so soon as they found there was fighting, to quell the disturbance. At that time three men were pounding Clay Cressler, one using a heavy club. His father went to his rescue, Clay got upon his feet and retreated. Charles Kehoe, (a very large and powerful man) followed him, wielding a huge club. Clay drew his revolver, and in defense of his life shot Kehoe through the arm.

In the meantime the Justice, Hopkins, had commanded the peace, and called upon the bystanders to quell the riot. Richard Maguire, the constable (and his actions there are deserving of all praise), William Cressler, E. L. Cook, and several others, went among the crowd and used their utmost endeavors to restore peace. In the meantime, John Kehoe, Charles Cressler down, and was to the very act of striking him with a large club. They were apart from the rest of the crowd, and Cressler's life seemed worth little. At this time Ed. Cook was standing some thirty feet from Charles Cressler and Jim Kehoe. He had just that moment persuaded one man to leave the scene, and turning, saw the imminent danger of Charley Cressler. It was impossible for him to reach them in time to save Charley, and for the first time he drew his revolver and took deliberate aim at [illegible]

WASHINGTON, [illegible]
June [illegible]

To Adjt. Gen. Belger:

Gen. Buckingham's letter of September 26th, cannot be considered by the Department as applying to enlistments made prior to its date, and the uniform rule of the Department, except in cases provided by that letter, is to regard all enlistments as for 3 years and to hold the men accordingly.

As to men in Veteran Reserves who have served 3 years, they of course should be discharged, and I have instructed Col. Coles, to look after them.
