Tree Rings as an Indication of Age.

When Henry G. Sheppard delivered his last lecture before the pupils of the Carriage Builders' Technical School there was a short discussion between Mr. Fitzgerald and the lecturer with reference to the relations which the rings in a tree bore to its age. Mr. Sheppard thought that the number of these rings always corresponded to the number of years the tree had lived, but Fitzgerald intimated that this rule was not to be depended on. In this connection it is worth while to mention some recent observation on tree rings by Professor Bachelant. He said that during a visit to the ruins of Palenque, Mex., in 1859, M. Charnay caused all the trees that hid the facade of one of the pyramids of the palace to be cut down. On a second visit, in 1880, he cut the tree that had grown since 1859, and he remarked that all of them had a number of circles greatly more numerous than their age could warrant, supposing one circle to be added annually. The oldest could not have been 22 years of age, but on a section of one of them he counted 250 circles. The tree was about two feet in diameter. A shrub not more than eight months old had eighteen concentric circles. M. Charnay found the case repeated in every species and in trees of all sizes. He concluded that in hot and moist climates, where nature is never at rest, trees may produce not one circle in a year, but one in a month. The ages of monuments have often been calculated from that of trees that have grown on their ruins. For Palenque 1700 years had been calculated, 1700 rings having been counted on a tree. These observations, however, require the number to be cut down 150 or 200 years. Prof. Bachelant asks if Charnay took account of certain colored rings which some tropical trees present in cross-section, and which are to be distinguished from annular circles.

The Los Angeles City Council has passed an amended license. Saloons, etc., will be taxed $50 each per month—formerly the rate was $10; wholesale liquor dealers, $20; brewers and distillers, $10; circuses $1,000 per day.
