REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

By Adele Garrison

HOW MADGE KEPT HER PROMISE.

"Dicky! Dicky! what have I done that you are so changed? How can you be so cold to me when you remember all that we have been to each other? Don't be so cruel to me. Kiss me just once, just once, as you used to do."

Over and over again the plaintive words pierced the air of the room where Grace Draper lay while Dr. Pettit and the nurse battled for her life.

The infection which the physician had dreaded had developed in her self-inflicted dagger wound. Even before the nurse had detected the presence of the infection the girl had uncannily realized her own condition and had sent for me, telling me that she was certain her death was but a matter of days and wanting from me a promise that I would stay with her until the end.

I had made her the promise, wondering at a curious little steam as of savage triumph in her eyes as I did so. The nurse had summoned Dr. Pettit promptly, but by the time he had reached the girl's bedside she was seemingly unconscious and babbling in delirium.

The theme of all her delirious cries and mutterings was Dicky. She lived over again all the homely little humorous incidents of their long studio association. She went with him upon the little outings which they had taken together, and of which I learned for the first time from her fever-crazed lips.

"I do not think Dr. Pettit knew I was in the room when first entered, anxious because of his imperative summons by the nurse. Lillian's guest room had the alcove characteristic of the old-fashioned can Red Cross, of which the local chapter is a branch, distributed from Jan. 1 to Sept. 1, 1918, 256,906 knitted articles. These articles were distributed as follows: To Camp Sherman, O., 62,410 pairs of socks, 17,224 sweaters, 8,498 helms, 17,224 wristlets, 10,774 mufflers; to Camp Taylor, Ky., 15,046 pairs of socks, 25,631 sweaters, 13,468 helms, 6,250 wristlets, 2,018 mufflers; to Fort Harrison, Ind., 18,056 pairs of socks, 11,097 sweaters, five helms; to Wilbur Wright field, 1,205 pairs of socks, 345 sweaters, 288 helms, 261 wristlets, 162 mufflers; to minor camps, 8,848 pairs of socks, 2,116 sweaters, 2,390 helms, 3,225 wristlets, 326 mufflers; to Camp Merritt, N. J., (port of embarkation), 20,000 socks.

Members of the St. Joseph Hospital Aid society sewing committee, of which Mrs. John Nugent is chairman, will be entertained at the hospital Wednesday afternoon. The time will be spent in making surgical bandages.

WHEN YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO COMPLAIN.

In nearly every newspaper in the country the housewife will find a fair price list. This list shows what foods are most plentiful in the local markets each day and also gives fair prices for them.

These prices are determined by local committees representing wholesale dealers, retailers, and consumers. They aim to give the dealer a fair profit and at the same time to guard the housewife from being exploited.

But these fair price lists are a club without a handle unless the housewife uses them as she should. To do this, she should clip the fair price list as printed in her paper each day and take it to market with her. Then, if she is quoted prices in excess of those quoted on the list she should immediately bring this fact to the attention of her dealer. If he refuses to sell at the prices quoted, the housewife should at once report him to her city food administrator if there is one, or to her county food administrator. He will take such action as seems to fit the case.

So much the fair price list can do, if rightly handled by the housewife. But there is another side to it. With the fair price list there is no excuse for the housewife to wait until the end of the month and her bills begin to come in, and then complain because her grocery account is higher than she thinks it ought to be.

The only time she has a right to object is the day her dealer asks her a higher price for a certain food commodity than the price at which it is listed in the fair price list quoted for that day.

She has no right to complain just because her grocery bill is higher than in pre-war time. Food is bound to cost more. Labor is scarce, transportation is difficult. The higher cost of food is part of the war burden that must be cheerfully borne by every housewife.

Let the American housewife who complains over prices in America compare them with those in other countries.

The only time we have a right to complain in America is when we are charged prices in excess of those quoted in the fair price list.

There are 3,000 tons of tin going to waste somewhere in the United States, says a bulletin issued by the Lake division of the American Red Cross. This tin is found in tinfoil, lead foil, and combination foil torn from chocolates, chewing gum, cigars and tobacco and thrown away; in old pewter articles standing on shelves unused; and in collapsible tubes, emptied of salves, paints, shaving creams, toothpastes, and thrown away.

The bulletin outlines a plan by which the Red Cross chapters can help make of this deficit of 3,000 tons of tin, an estimate made by the war industries board, after allowing for the development of new sources of supply, and for all economies in the use of metal, and not allowing for anything which may cut down the world's available supply.

All chapters are asked to place receptacles in hotels, shops and outdoor places where people may deposit tinfoil and tubes. The material collected may then be sold by the chapter, thus returning that material to its proper channels and increasing the general fund of the chapter.

The local chapter will aid in the collection of this material, definite plans for which will be made soon.
