DYNAMITE CLIMAX.

A Most Successful Attempt of the Dynamite Plots to Destroy Westminster Hall, Parliament Buildings and the Tower of London.

LONDON, Jan. 24, 2:10 p. m.—An alarming explosion has just occurred in the House of Parliament.

2:30 p. m.—The House of Parliament and government offices were severely shaken, and considerable damage done. It is impossible at this moment to tell the extent of the calamity.

The report of the explosion was heard in Downing street.

Great excitement prevails, and enormous crowds are assembling at the scene of the explosion.

The origin of the explosion is wrapped in mystery, but it is believed to have been caused by dynamite.

4 p. m.—The explosion occurred close to the House of Lords, near Westminster Hall. It is reported that the explosive was placed in the crypt under the building. A policeman was hurt.

The force of the shock was tremendous. It was felt at a great distance. The amount of damage done is very great.

Rumors are current at this hour that another explosion occurred at 2 o'clock this afternoon at London Tower.

Excitement is on the increase with every moment, and the city is filled with flying rumors.

There were two explosions instead of one, as at first supposed, at the Parliament Houses. The second came about three minutes after the first.

One man was struck near the scene of the explosion.

The detective force are now hard at work seeking further developments, which are anxiously awaited, particularly the people in the neighborhood of Westminster Hall.

Saturday being the usual visiting day at the Houses of Parliament, the building contained a great number of sightseers at the time of the explosion.

The first explosion occurred in the crypt of Westminster Hall; the second took place in the stranger's gallery in the House of Commons. Immediately before the first explosion a lady visitor, who was alone and about to enter the building, beckoned to a policeman and called his attention to a package lying upon the steps outside the crypt. The policeman picked up the package carelessly, not suspecting anything, and went with it into Westminster Hall. He no sooner had reached the hall than the package exploded.

This explosion knocked the policeman down, and injured him seriously. His case is considered critical. His force also knocked down two other policemen standing in the vicinity, and stunned them. A lady and gentleman standing near the officer who had the package were also prostrated. The great window that is over the entrance to Westminster Hall was smashed to atoms, and all the side windows blown out.

In the interior of the House of Commons, and upon the floor, the only seat damaged by the explosion was that which Gladstone occupies. A small chip was also torn off the top of the Speaker's chair.

The explosion caused a panic among the visitors. Those who were in the House of Commons fled precipitately, and many ladies were bruised in the crush.

The second explosion in the Parliament buildings occurred three minutes later than the first and was far more disastrous. The dynamite which caused the second explosion must have been placed under the peers' gallery on the left side.

Little hope is entertained of the survival of the wounded policeman.

The force of the explosion was such that one man was blown to the earth 800 yards from the point of the explosion. The lobby of the House of Commons is completely demolished.

A clue to the perpetrators of the outrage is thought to have been discovered. Just before the explosion occurred a man and woman, the latter carrying a hand-bag, entered a cab outside of Parliament yard and drove rapidly away, giving no directions as to destination.

They had not gone far when the explosion happened. The cabman hearing this, stopped his cab. The man and woman at once leaped out and hastened quickly from the spot. The cabman went in pursuit of the runaway, and they were soon overtaken and arrested by the police.

LONDON, 4:30 p. m.—The prevalent belief is that the destructive agent was conveyed into the House of Commons by some Saturday visitor.

The fullest investigation shows the extent of the damage to be much greater than at first supposed. The western extremity of the House is a total wreck.

There is no doubt that the explosive was placed under the Peers' Gallery on the Government side of the House. All the woodwork on that part of the building wide is shattered and a hole made through the floor. The gallery was displaced, and even the solid stonework of the doorways either pulverized or shifted from its position. Every pane of glass in the house was smashed to atoms, the gallery benches overturned and broken, and the gallery generally dismantled.

The glass roof of the House of Commons is completely shattered. The clock in the House stopped at precisely 2:13 p. m. A heavy beam which formed one of the supports for the gallery was projected into the Speaker's chair, seriously injuring it. Gladstone's seat was torn to pieces.

A lady visiting the House of Commons at the time of the outrage was seriously injured. Immense damage was done in the lobby. The Masonic decorations and sculpture were utterly destroyed. The place is described as literally blown to pieces.

The shock was felt in Pall Mall, and persons in the vicinity say the very earth shook.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Home Secretary, and the Marquis of Hertington, Secretary of State for War, are visiting the scene.

Another account of the explosion at Westminster Hall says the explosion was more disastrous than at first anticipated. Four persons were badly injured, including two policemen, fatally wounded. A lady who was in the hall sprang the infernal machine and called the attention of Policeman Cole on duty at the time. To other Cole rushed to the spot, seized the machine and attempted to extinguish the fuse, but was not quick enough. The fuse burned so rapidly and closed so quickly upon the machine that the officer dropped it. The explosion followed almost immediately.

The explosion in the lobby of the House of Commons occurred three minutes later than the one in Westminster Hall. It came from directly under the stranger's gallery and very close to the seat usually occupied by Gladstone when visiting the Commons. The lobby was completely wrecked, the gallery torn down, the Speaker's chair destroyed and the massive stones displaced.

Colonel Majendel, Chief Inspector of Explosives, in an interview this afternoon, said the explosion was due to nitro-glycerine. The compounds were precisely similar to those used in the previous outrages in this city. He believes the women charged the explosive apparatus at Westminster Hall and the lobby of the House of Commons.

6 p. m.—It has been ascertained that a great quantity of explosive matter had been placed inside the great ornamental gates leading to the crypt under Westminster Hall. These gates were blown clear of their hinges and thrown to the ground. All the windows on the north and south sides of the immense building were blown to atoms. The concussion shook down from the stonework roof of the hall the accumulated soot of centuries. This in its downward movement, made a dense cloud.

The city is in a frenzied state of excitement. The whole police force on duty and troops in and around the city are under arms. Police patrols are stationed everywhere, in close proximity to each other, and a cordon of police has been thrown across every street.

Chief Superintendent Williamson, of Scotland Yard, personally inspected the scenes of destruction at Westminster Hall, the Houses of Parliament and Kelly. One of the wounded policemen is dying. Several men have been arrested, but are held on suspicion of any connection with the horrible outrages. The man taken into custody in the vicinity of Westminster Hall is a Canadian, apparently a seaman, who was thoroughly searched, but nothing of an incriminating nature was found.

The Green Telegrapher for the particulars of the explosion at Sir William Harcourt.

9 p. m.—The officers on guard became alarmed, and did not enter the room in the lobby, Splinters were for a time as thick as water, and blinding snow storm, and were propelled with great force, and ripped leather from the seats and torn out and scattered home, hair stuffing were all over the house. A man who happened to be standing upon a scaffolding near the crypt at the time of the explosion, was knocked forcibly to the ground.

The statues of King William IV, and King George IV, in Westminster Hall, were blown to atoms. The fact that an unusual number of ladies visited the Parliament Building to-day has given rise to the suspicion that the mischief was carried by many women, and they seemed to bestow unusual care in guarding them.

Visiting Day at the Tower a Terrible One for Sight-Seeers.

LONDON, Jan. 24, 4 p. m.—Rumors regarding the explosion at London Tower are confirmed. The outrage was the most successful yet made upon any public buildings since the inauguration of the present era of dynamite warfare.

The famous old building was crowded with visitors at the time of the explosion.

The widest rumors are in circulation as to the number of persons injured. These rumors are being carried through the city and constantly exaggerated by visitors present at the time.

Up to 4 o'clock sixteen persons had been reported as injured by the explosion, none mortally.

The attack was made on that portion of the building known as "the White Tower." It was fairly filled with the visitors at the time, and the sound of the explosion was heard in the neighborhood of the Tower at the time of the explosion.

The roof was blown clear of the structure. All the persons known to have been present at the time of the explosion, the police the moment they realized the nature of the explosion, effectually barred all access from the Tower and grounds, and now subjecting every person detained to the most rigid search upon the theory that the attack was perpetrated by some person inside the premises at the time.

Surveys were promptly summoned to the assistance of the wounded, who are now securing all the attention practicable.

The excitement is growing as the news of the explosion spreads. Crowds in the vicinity of the damaged buildings are increasing momentarily.

4:30 p. m.—Investigation so far leads to the conclusion that the explosives used in the attack on the tower were handled by persons who had access to the structure as sight-seeers. The ruins also show that the explosive operated from a point on the inner or the esplanade nearest the Thames tower.

It turns out that the police were unusually prompt and successful in their embargo upon all access from the lower grounds. But few persons had left when the explosion occurred, and every person within has become subjected to personal examination.

The report made by the tower exploder was terrific. It was heard for miles up and down the Thames, and at once attracted an immense crowd to the scene.

5 p. m.—Later reports show that the first stories about the damage to the White Tower were somewhat exaggerated. White Tower building was destroyed. It is now said that the structure is not even seriously injured.

The latest reports tended somewhat to allay public excitement. If the explosion really demolished the White Tower, the result must have been immensely more serious, for that part of the building is an armory, used at present for the storage of rifles, and often of large quantities of ammunition. This fact makes the popular indignation against the perpetrators of the outrage indescribable.

A large number of children were among the visitors. Many of these little ones had their faces and hands badly torn by broken glass and flying splinters. The most pitious sight in the vicinity of the White Tower is the number of children who were blown to the earth and sustained within the tower walls was afforded by these little ones, with their pale faces and bleeding heads.

Another account of the explosion at the Tower gives the following details: The scene in and around the tower is indescribable. Several children are among the injured. Their faces, bloody heads and broken limbs roused the great crowd that congregated in the vicinity to frenzy. Yells were heard on every side to "lynch the villains," "roast the fiends." All visitors are still detained in the Tower, and will be kept there until their antecedents have been thoroughly inquired into.

Hundreds of rifles were damaged in the Tower, which was gutted, and the fire was suppressed with great difficulty. The ancient armors were destroyed.

That the explosion occurred on the second floor of the White Tower all authorities agree, and that dynamite was used. The third floor is thoroughly wrecked, and the explosion damaged many hundreds of arms. The explosion occurred exactly at 2 o'clock.

Lord Chelmsford and General Milman are now engaged in the work of inspecting the structure. Some reports place the number of persons injured by the tower explosion at four. No arrests have yet been made. The police have been ordered to be doubly vigilant.

Further Particulars of the Dynamite Explosions.

LONDON, 7:30 p. m.—The Tower was fairly filled with visitors at the moment the explosion occurred, and many persons are seriously injured. One man had a leg smashed, another had an ear completely severed from his head. The two were taken to the hospital, where their wounds have been carefully dressed. Excited crowds still remain about the tower, and cries for vengeance are heard on every side. The throng of people about the Parliament buildings continues as great as ever at this hour, and are tumultuous with excitement. The policeman most seriously injured by the explosion is sinking rapidly. All hope of his recovery has been abandoned.

Of two persons arrested immediately after the explosion, as they were hurrying away from Westminster, the man is middle-aged, somewhat above the medium height, and dressed in a coat as a Canadian seafarer and part owner of a vessel. It is generally supposed the explosive was conveyed into the Parliament Houses and placed in position by a woman.

An eye witness of what occurred at the Parliament Houses relates that immediately after the first explosion took place he entered Westminster Hall and lent his assistance in removing the wounded. He says he found three Constables prostrated upon the stairs leading down the crypt under the hall, all of whom were seriously injured. Near by a gentleman was lying stretched upon the ground, completely prostrated. The head of a gentleman and a portion of his clothing were torn to ribbons and he himself had received severe injuries. The locality of the explosion in the House of Commons is always in deep shadow, being directly under the gallery. The person who exploded the dynamite was thus much less likely to attract notice than in almost any other part of the House.

A woman who was visiting Westminster Hall at the time says she was descending the stairs leading to the crypt, when she saw what appeared to be a burned dress, and volumes of smoke issuing from the burning article. She then saw a Constable pick up the article and immediately throw it from him. As soon as she thus struck the ground it exploded with a frightful report.

The Pall Mall Gazette summarizes its account of the explosion in the House of Commons in the following language: "Thus the whole interior of the House of Commons presents a remarkable scene of devastation. Although there is a great litter, everything may be put right within a week's time. Nothing is more surprising about the whole disaster than the utter failure to detect any substantial injury."

The Canadian arrested on suspicion of complicity in the perpetration of the outrage has proved his innocence and been freed from the custody of the police. Constable Cole said "Cox" who was seriously injured by the explosion in Westminster Hall are still unconscious, and their recovery is considered absolutely hopeless.

Count Von Munster, the German Minister to England, and the Lord Mayor of London visited the scene of the explosion at the Tower this evening.

It has been ascertained that the crown jewels and regalia, which have been for long times in the tower, are unharmed. The noise of the explosion was preceded by a blinding flash, followed by great clouds of dust. Additional guards are placed to-night around the Tower, Parliament Houses and public buildings.

About sixty visitors were in the Tower at the time of the explosion. The explosive agent was deposited in what is known as the Banqueting Hall of the White Tower. This hall is large room, an armory, and it was stored with large number of Martin rifles, which were to be shortly issued to the volunteers. It was behind the curtain, which is the most recent addition to their distorted and filthy habits, the apartment in a marvel of confusion. All the glass and other fragile articles in the hall were smashed to atoms by the explosion. Their former selves. A large hole was crushed through the floor at the spot where the dynamite was placed. Directly overhead a similar hole was blown through the roof. The wood work was set on fire by the explosion, but before they were extinguished. All the persons arrested during the afternoon on suspicion of being the perpetrators of the explosion were released this evening, there being no facts against them sufficient to warrant keeping them in custody. The police are completely non-plussed. They are incapable of even forming a theory, and appear to be at their own wits' end to prevent the escape of the guilty perpetrators when they have been committed. The popular rage was high, and the claim for some retributive justice was loudly urged. The awful crimes of this afternoon was so insupportable that persons arrested on suspicion narrowly escaped lynching when set at liberty. However men courage at the clubs, coffee houses, hotels, on the street, at home and everywhere, the one topic of conversation throughout London and throughout the United Kingdom was the explosion. This was the last instance of the dynamite devil's work.

The popular rage was high, and the claim for some retributive justice was loudly urged. The awful crimes of this afternoon was so insupportable that persons arrested on suspicion narrowly escaped lynching when set at liberty. However men courage at the clubs, coffee houses, hotels, on the street, at home and everywhere, the one topic of conversation throughout London and throughout the United Kingdom was the explosion. This was the last instance of the dynamite devil's work.

Remainder of places. Directly overhead a similar hole was blown through the roof. The wood work was set on fire by the explosion, but before they were extinguished. All the persons arrested during the afternoon on suspicion of being the perpetrators of the explosion were released this evening, there being no facts against them sufficient to warrant keeping them in custody. The police are completely non-plussed. They are incapable of even forming a theory, and appear to be at their own wits' end to prevent the escape of the guilty perpetrators when they have been committed.
