

AN INCIDENT OF CHICKAMAUGA.

Brigadier-General Carlin Riding Bare-Headed and Alone Before the Enemy's Fire.

"Brigadier-general Carlin, as far as I am aware," remarked Dr. L. D. Waterman to a Journal reporter, "has not recently been before the public; nor do I now know his residence, nor have I seen or heard from him since the event of which I am about to speak, out of regard for the truth of history. The time was the afternoon of the second day at Chickamauga. I was surgeon and medical director of the (Major-general Jeff C. Davis's) Second Division of the old Twentieth Army corps. The right of our army had been driven back and a new line had been formed by the regiments remaining and such support as had been sent to them from Gen. Sheridan's division, and, perhaps, Wilder. I had no necessity to show the courage of a soldier, nor was it my duty, but, remembering a contemptuous allusion, in the report after Pittsburg Landing, by the brigadier-general commanding, to the medical director, that he supposed he was doing his duty, as he saw nothing of him during the engagement," and, realizing that I was not a favorite with the adjutant-general, I determined to avert such report as to myself. So I rode to the front and reported in person to Major-general Davis, with the remark, "General, my work is organized at Twin Springs, and going on satisfactorily. Can I be of service to you?" The General answered, "Yes, my staff are all out on duty. Stay here and keep my division flag and orderly here whilst I confer with General Rosecrans, who, with his staff, was on a hill in our rear. The situation was unknown to me, but I saw a regular line of battle rapidly forming on my front two rods away, while half a mile in front of that, winding over the rolling ground, I saw another line of some army which I supposed to be ours. Firing was sharp, both of muskets and batteries, and the leaves of the scattered trees on the hill slope were falling, as in autumn, from bullet cuts, and the dirt was frequently dashed up in front of and beside the white horse on which I sat. The line of our troops in front of me broke away and retreated backwards up the slope. The line in front, driving steadily advanced until I could see clearly that it was not our army. A new battery sent its balls around me. Then I appreciated that I was in peril without doing any good, so I turned to the orderly who had charge of the division flag, to find him gone! I looked over the field, and not a soldier of our army was in front of me save one officer on horseback who was riding bare-headed in a slow trot towards me, with his back to the enemy, a rod away. The bullets and cannon-balls were by this time so frequent near me that I said mentally as each one struck or whizzed past, "That one did not hit me!" I recognized Brigadier-general Carlin, whom I had met before, and by this time he rode abreast of me a half rod to my left. I whirled my horse so as to bring myself on his left, two yards from him and abreast, and spoke to him, "General Carlin!" He was very erect in his saddle, bare-headed, his face waxlike in color, his unsheathed sword in his right hand and at his shoulder, his eyes directed, statue-like, before him as he rode from the enemy, and in the roar of artillery and musketry he neither heard nor noticed me, although I rode beside him for three or four rods. I then turned to the left obliquely, put spurs to my horse, and dashed up a ravine, out of range of the firing."

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

Prices Advancing and a Better Outlook than for Several Years.

The real estate transfers for the last week almost doubled those of the week previous, and yet the transactions were not as large or numerous as was expected. It is the dull season of the year in the real estate business, and no great boom is expected for a few weeks yet. However, the indications are that it is going to be a live spring and summer in real estate circles. There is a marked advance in the ruling prices over last year, and real estate men are of the opinion that city property will command better prices than for ten years. The transfers for the week amounted to $78,890. There were but few transfers where large amounts were involved. The most notable sale was that of "Bird's Point," at the corner of Indiana avenue and Illinois street, by F. Bird to Charles Scholl, for $25,000. The park at Great Blipple, a beautiful tract of ground of thirty acres, was sold by James Huffman to William Bushman for $9,700. It is the intention of Mr. Bushman to make an outlay of a considerable amount in beautifying the park, and making it an attractive summer resort. The only other transfer involving any considerable sum was that of a lot and residence on South East street, by the Indiana National Bank to Susan E. Brennan, for $6,500.

A Charge Without a Foundation.

Some time ago Mrs. Mary J. McMillan, one of the heirs of the estate of Robert M. Wingate, deceased, of Brazil, asked for the removal of Wm. P. Blair and J. N. Nees from the trust of executors of the estate on the ground that they were in a conspiracy with a number of other persons to convert the property into their own hands and defraud Mrs. McMillan out of her share. Master in Chancery W. P. Fishback filed his report in the federal court yesterday, which says that there is no truth nor foundation in the assertion of Mrs. McMillan.

THE LARGEST IN THE WORLD.

Record of a Fire Insurance Company That Has Paid Over $815,000 to Indiana Policy-Holders.

During the year past the Phenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn received the largest income of any fire insurance company in the world, and in the United States paid $9,730 for losses every day of the year. The Phenix received nearly $200,000 in premiums in this State last year, and since its organization has paid over $815,000 to Indiana policy-holders. These facts speak for themselves. The Phenix has agents in every town and hamlet in America.

SO DOES UNDERWEAR!

Few things are more essential in this particular than Muslin Underwear.

One may dress in outer garments of various kinds that appeal only to the eye. Muslin Underwear is even more than a comfort—it is a necessity.

SIMON STERNE'S SELEBRATED!

We only handle these celebrated goods in this market, and anyone who uses underwear (and who doesn't?) knows what they are.

We shall open a complete line in these goods. You shall not ask for anything here that we have not got.

THE FIRST OF FEBRUARY

Is when we shall open them and something else. This is: All sorts of Underwear.

Then it is that our great annual sale begins, and we are confident that there is nothing in this way that you cannot find better and cheaper at this sale than anywhere else in this market.

THE ACCEPTED TIME!

With the weather beginning about now to change from warm to cold and back, from wet to dry, the question of Underwear becomes a special interest.

Come see about this on Tuesday.

DEPARTMENT.

During the month of February we shall be busy with carpenters and painters fitting new shelving to several of our departments and otherwise making improvements in the interior of our store. In order to interfere as little as possible with business, we shall fix one department at a time. The first to receive new fixtures will be our Linen department, and the coming week we want to reduce the stock as much as possible, as we shall be obliged to move all goods remaining at the end of this week and place them with some other department. This will crowd us for a while, and if we can reduce our stock largely we prefer to do so, and willingly make a sacrifice in prices to accomplish our purpose. We cannot go through the stock and re-mark each piece, and therefore will make a regular discount on all purchases in this department, whether such purchases be large or small. This will be serving all customers alike, as the prices will be the same as marked and the discount taken from the amount purchased.

Customers will find a full line of Table Linens, Napkins, Towels, Crashes, Glass Toweling, Sideboard Covers, Art Linen, Cloths and Napkins in sets, Piano Covers, Table Covers, Turkey-red Tabling in cloths and by the yard. All of these goods are useful every day in the year, and you can buy any of them the coming week at our regular market prices, and we will allow you a discount of 10 per cent. on all purchases. This is the time to replenish your linen goods, and every economical housekeeper and hotel or restaurant keeper will avail themselves of this opportunity.

Remember, for the coming week we sell all "Linen Goods" at 10 per cent. less price. Carpenters will be at work in this department the first Monday after the coming week.
