LITERATURE.

Magazines.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. (Harper & Bros., N. Y. $4 a year.) The March number has as frontispiece an engraving from Geo. H. Houghton's picture, "Tee Burgomaster." William Henry Bishop has a sprightly and attractively illustrated paper on Arizona. George H. Houghton continues his Holland papers, with fine drawings by himself and Abbey. Col. Higginson continues his series on American history in a chapter on "The French Voyageurs." But the most interesting of all the illustrated papers is that of Mrs. Van Rensselaer on Parsifal at Baireuth. The illustrations include pictures of the most striking scenes in Parsifal, a full page portrait of Wagner, and another of the soprana, F. Therese Malten. E. Mason contributes a paper on Philip Wouvermans the old Dutch master, with a portrait and specimens of his work. Charles Francis Adams, jr., contributes an interesting chapter on our early colonial history, entitled "Sir Christopher Gardiner, Knight." Gen. Benjamin Alvord is the author of a paper entitled "The Morning Star: an Indian Superstition." William Black's novel, "The Shandon Bells," is continued, and there are good short stories by Mrs. H. P. Spofford and M. Howland. There is the usual instalment of poems; the Editor's Chair is pleasing and instructive as usual, and the Drawer, besides its usual sprightly melange, contains a comic operetta with fine illustrations.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE. (Century Co., New York. $4 a year.) The March number gives us a spirited portrait of Gambetta for frontispiece, to accompany a paper on the great French republican, the preparation of which was commenced long before his death. Leonard Woolsey Bacon contributes a short biographical sketch of his father, Dr. Leonard Bacon, and defends the position of his father on the anti-slavery question against the Boston extremists of the Garrison school; and Mrs. Runkle puts in an earnest plea for the higher education of women, under the head "A New Knock at an Old Door." John Burroughs, in "Signs and Seasons," chats pleasantly of country life and nature; and H. H. contributes an interesting study of "The Village of Oberammergau," which he visited at the last time of the Passion Play. "The Architectural League of New York" is the title of a profusely illustrated paper by Roger Riordan, describing a club of young architects in the metropolis. Mr. Cable concludes his illustrated historical series with "The End of Foreign Dominion in Louisiana;" and Dr. Edward Eggleston, in his third historical paper, treats of "The Migrations of American Colonists." The short story is a romance of the late Russo-Turkish war, entitled "Yatil," by Frank D. Millet, the artist war correspondent. The serials, "A Woman's Reason," and "Through One Administration," are continued, and "The Led-Horse Claim" is brought to an effective conclusion. The poems, of which there are half a dozen, include one, unfinished, by William Cullen Bryant. Various public questions are discussed in "Topics of the Time," and the other editorial departments treat of new books, in "Literature," of "Home and Society" topics, and of new inventions in "The World's Work." In "Bric-a-Brac," besides light and amusing verse, may be found an extract from Swedenborg's "Treatise on Hell," which applies with singular aptness to the political "boss" of to day.

POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY. (D. Appleton & Co., New York. $5.00 a year.) The leading articles in the March number include the "Growth and Effect of Railway Consolidation," by Mr. Gerrit L. Lansing, showing that thus far the public has gained by the absorption of the smaller by the larger corporations; "Queer Phases of Animal Life," by Dr. Oswald; the conclusion of Mr. Boodie's thoughtful review of "Natural Religion;" and an article by Dr. Yeo, a distinguished British physiologist, showing the benefit to mankind from experimental physiological research. Other notable articles are, "Evolution of the Camp-Meeting," by Dr. Parrish; "Sewage at the Seaside," by Miss Rhine; "Icebergs and Fogs in the North Atlantic," by Capt. J. W. Shackford; Remedial Value of the Climate of Florida," by Dr. Geo. E. Walton; and "A South African Arcadia," by Mr. Buettner. Mr. Leonard Scott argues that reptinting foreign books is not piracy; Prof. Grant Allen furnishes an interesting account of the "Evolution of Wheat," and Dr. Radcliffe gives a lesson in physiological chemistry.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for March opens with an article on "Money in Elections," by Henry George, who brings to the discussion of that hackneyed subject a contribution full of originality, freshness and keen insight. Robert S. Taylor writes of the "Subjugation of the Mississippi," a work which, in his opinion, and in that of the Mississippi Commission, of which he is a member, can be accomplished only by employing, for the purpose of deepening and straightening the channel, the forces developed by the river itself. Moncure D. Conway contributes a very striking study of Gladstone as a man and a statesman, showing how even the more or less sinister moral and intellectual traits of his nature, quite as much as his pre-eminent native force and elevation of charter, conspire to make him the foremost Englishman of his time. Hon. George W. Julian's "Railway Influence in the Land Office" is a grave, judicial exposure of the practices which, against the manifest intent of the law and the determinations of the highest courts, have won for corporations millions upon millions of acres of the public domain. Richard A. Proctor writes of the "Pyramid of Cheops;" Prof. Wm. G. Sumner, of "Protective Taxes and Wages;" Elizur Wright of "Some Aspects of Life Insurance;" and finally, there is a symposium on "Educational Needs," by Prof. G. Stanley Hall, Prof. Felix Adler, President Thomas Hunter, and Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi.

THE ART AMATEUR. (Montague Marks, No. 23 Union Square, New York.) The March number contains admirable full-sized working designs of clover, azaleas and water-lilies for china painters; a South Kensington chair seat, and a cialice veil for embroideries; a score of delicious cupids, and a page of fresh and excellent monograms. The leading article in this issue is a capital notice of the Water-Color Exhibition, by Edward Strahan, with illustrations of over thirty of the noteworthy pictures. Boughton's beautiful painting, "Snow in Spring," is finely reproduced, and there is a good portrait of Dore, with some well-chosen examples of his work. Flower painters, fan painters, china painters and photograph portraitists are remembered in the practical articles, and there is much pleasant and copiously illustrated talk about French furniture, Japanese art, new houses, old fashions, and a variety of other art topics. On the whole, the March number is an excellent specimen of this always attractive magazine.

PERENOLOGICAL JOURNAL. (Fowler & Wells, N. Y. $2 a year). The March number gives us interesting sketches, with portraits, of Sir John Lubbock, the great English banker naturalist; of William E. Dodge, the merchant philanthropist; and of Leon Gambetta, the great popular leader of France. The number contains its usual well-assorted variety, including articles On Language; The Four Windows of Character; Brain Weight and Brain Power; The Olive Tree; A Sensible Preacher; Alexander the Great; March and its Lessons; Education and Health; Hygiene of Walking; Should Men Cut Their Hair; Kitchen Leaflets, &c., &c.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. (E. A. Gibbs, A. M., M. D., 138 8th street, New York. $2 a year). Of all publications of its class in this country none has ever attained a higher position, or has been more frequently referred to or copied from by the press as authority on matters of health than Hall's Journal of Health. Its teaching is always direct, simple and practical, despising quackery and all highfalutin nonsense. A partial list of the contents of the number before us illustrates its character: Ventilation; How to Sleep; Simple Remedies; Babies; Cure of Ivy Poisoning; Hot and Cold Drinks; When to Eat Meat; Remedy for Catarrh, &c., &c. Its regular monthly visits to a family are worth as much as would be those of a first-class physician.

WIDE AWAKE. (D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. $2.50 a year). All boys of vim will of course read first what the 83 business men have to say in the March number to "Our Business Boys," in the article entitled "Rocks of Danger," after which they will probably turn to Fred Ober's Yucatan serial, "The Silver City," or to Rev. Irving L. Beman's story of "Evan Cogswell's Ice Fort," or to Edward Everett Hale's To-Day Talk about the dead French statesman, Gambetta, or to "A Boy's Workshop," or to Prof. Sargent's "Health and Strength Paper," or to Mrs. Cheever's jolly out-of-doors story, "Camp Hamperford"—for all these contributions, interesting to everybody, are of peculiar interest to the boys. Then we have Act II of the White Mountain Comedy, "More Than They Bargained For;" "Old Caravan Days;" The John Spicer Lecture on "Clothes;" "A Winter Garden," &c., &c. The number, in short, is strewed all over with beautiful pictures, sweet poems and other attractions altogether "too numerous to mention."

ST. NICHOLAS. (Century Company, New York. $2.50 a year). The first that arrests the attention, in the March number, is a vividly interesting story, "Where was Villiers," by Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent of the London Daily News. Then comes a capital story of the Michigan fires of 1881 entitled, "The Wrong Coat." Lucretia Hale continue's to follow the rambles of the Peterkins; Prof. Griffis, the eminent orientalist, writes about Ho Kusai, a famous Japanese comic artist; W. O. Stoddard tells a characteristic American boy story, "That Sly Old Woodchuck;" and Miss Anna Eichberg has a delightful tale from the German of Leander; E. S. Brooks finishes his story of "The Field of the Cloth of Gold;" Frank R. Stockton contributes an installment of "The Story of Viteau;" and J. T. Trowbridge continues his interesting narrative of the Tinkham Brothers. Of course there is the usual abundance of fine pictures, with numerous other stories, poems, &c.

THE NEW MOON. We have received the February number of The New Moon, a bright, popular, illustrated monthly of 32 pages, published by the New Moon Publishing Co., Lowell, Mass., at the low price of $1 a year. Its novel title promises much, and its popularity seems assured.

We have received from Mr. J. C. Vaughan, the Seedman, 42 La Salle street, Chicago, a copy of his very neat "Corn and Potato Manual," crammed full of important information in regard to the cultivation of these staples, and of which he will send a copy free to all farmers who ask for it.

A Cure for Crick in the Back.

The prescription is very brief: Take Hunt's Remedy, the great kidney and liver medicine. It infallibly cures. Do you know that a "crick in the back" may be—probably is—a symptom of dangerous kidney disease—of the frightful Bright's Disease, perhaps?—Don't "fool" with such symptoms, reader. Get Hunt's Remedy, and with it assured safety, at once. Many a man has started with a pain in the back on Monday morning, and been laid in the grave with Bright's Disease before Saturday night.

CRIMINAL VARIETIES.

Culled Here and There from the Big Dailies.

There was, so far as we can learn, no hanging bee in the United States last Friday, and no murder in Chicago on Sunday—both being strangely exceptional omissions.

MURDER AND LYNCHING.

The following dispatch from East Tawas, in the heart of the Michigan lumbering district in Northern Michigan, was sent out by way of Chicago on the 22d, and no later dispatch contradicts it:

At a lumber camp, twenty-five miles from this place (East Tawas) on Thursday, one man chopped off another man's head, and the murderer was lynched. The trouble commenced over two men's dispute as to whose team could haul the heaviest load. At the completion of the trial the driver whose team had won went into the cabin and sat down. His defeated competitor stepped up behind him and with one blow of an axe severed his head from his body. The head rolled on the floor, and to the horror of the spectators of the crime the eyes winked several times and the mouth opened. In another moment the murderer was seized, a log chain placed around his neck, and he was strung up to a tree. The loggers then placed a guard over the murderer's corpse to keep it suspended until the arrival of the sheriff.

The loggers in a neighboring camp friendly to the murderer hearing of the crime hastened over to cut down the corpse. Word of their intention reached the place before them, and when the parties met a general fight ensued, during which seven men were killed outright and others were wounded.

ELLIS CRAFT FOUND GUILTY.

At Grayson, Ky., on Friday of last week, Ellis Craft, one of the men charged with the outrage and murder of the Gibbons girls last summer near Ashland, Ky., after a trial that lasted a week, was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged on the 25th of May next. In reply to the usual question "what he had to say," &c., he made a rambling speech, solemnly protesting his innocence. "I never did it," he said. "You might as well take a little innocent child and hang it as hang me. The closest I was to Mrs. Gibbons's house that night was when I lay in bed at home asleep. I did not see the house or George Ellis or Bill Neal or any of the children that night. The last time I saw any of Mrs. Gibbons's children was the Wednesday before. That was the last time until I was aroused by the alarm of fire. I did all I could, not knowing the children were burned up. I can stand on the scaffold and hold my hand up and swear before high heaven that I did not see those children or Neal or Ellis that night. I am as innocent as the angels of that thing." This disposes of the second of the three men engaged in that fiendish outrage. Ellis was lynched last summer, and Neal is to be tried next week.

AN ALABAMA FIEND.

A Chattanooga dispatch of the 22d says: In Meigs county to-day a man named Cagle was killed by John Harwood. A brother of Cagle with a shotgun then fatally shot Harwood and dangerously wounded a Mr. Scott who was with him. The whole affair is the result of a long standing feud.

AN AGED REPROBATE.

One day, some five years ago, an aged man named MacQueen walked into police headquarters at St. Louis and announced that he had murdered his wife. He was not believed at first, but investigation showed he had told the truth, and he was sent to the penitentiary for the crime. His time was out about two months ago, and on his return to St. Louis he took up his abode at the poor house. Last Sunday evening he walked into police headquarters again and said he had killed a pauper named O. T. Burnham. Investigation showed that he was again trying to tell the truth. He said he walked into the room where Burnham was lying asleep alone, and thinking the old fellow had lived long enough, took the grate out of the fire-place and with it dealt the sleeping man a blow intended to kill. Burnham was not dead at midnight, but it is thought he cannot recover. MacQueen is in jail.

CONVICTS ESCAPE.

Last Saturday morning I. H. Gant, a contractor, had 70 Arkansas convicts at work on the Mississippi levee, three miles below Helena. They agreed among each other to make their escape. One of them, working with a spade near a guard, knocked him down. Other convicts then rushed upon the other guards. At this time Gant came upon the scene riding a horse. He fired at the convicts, but seeing them armed, turned to retreat, when one of the convicts fired, the lead passing through his body, killing him instantly. Seventeen convicts then made their escape. They came across a lot of negroes working near, and compelled them to change clothes.

MUTINOUS CONVICTS.

There was a savage mutiny in the Missouri state penitentiary at Jefferson City on the 23d, resulting in serious damage, but unsuccessful so far as escape of the prisoners was involved. The leader in the revolt was one John B. Johnson, who had been sent up for 12 years for highway robbery. He was at work in the harness shop. As the men returned from dinner, at a preconcerted signal eight men seized their formidable leather cutting knives and the revolt began. Four of them seized the foreman and stripped him of his clothing, and four others seized the foreman on the floor below. Then Johnson ran into the collar stuffing room and set a pile of straw on fire, and then ran into the saddle tree shop to stir up the men there. But here he was confronted by a guard who placed a revolver to his ear and walked him into the "blind cell." The revolt now became general, but not only the guard but several hundred citizens, who had been instantly armed, presented such a formidable front that the prisoners were soon subdued and marched to a cell building away from the fire. The fire, after destroying the harness department, was, after vigorous efforts, brought under control. The loss by the fire is estimated at $300,000, the heaviest part of which falls on the Standard Shoe Company and Strauss & Co.'s harness and collar factory, both of which companies had factories inside of the walls, employing convicts.

A WIFE POISONER.

Near Columbia, S. C., about a year ago, E. J. Terrey, a farmer, married a comely and respectable and in every sense worthy young woman, and although his wife was all that could be expected of a model helpmeet, he fell in love with another woman. As the divorce laws in South Carolina have been abolished, Terrey resorted to a surer and quicker plan to make himself a free man. He purchased a box of "Rough on Rats," which he mixed with a quantity of whisky. Last Saturday night, his wife being unwell, he gave her a drink of the mixture and fled. Sunday morning the neighbors found Mrs. Terrey dead in bed. A large party of incensed citizens are hunting the murderer. If they capture him they will string him up to the nearest tree.

A WICKED WRETCH.

Last Saturday, at Louisville, Ky., a man named Shook, a worthless, drunken character, was drinking heavily. He came and went between his home and the barrooms several times, but did not enter the former until between 5 and 6 p. m., when he went to his wife's room, soon after which the noise of blows was heard in the room, accompanied by the woman's screams and pleas for help. Then all became still, and the husband left the house. The wife was found lying on the floor, blood flowing from her mouth and an ugly cut on her head, besides bruises on her person, caused by the brute's kicks. She has been vomitting blood since. This, coupled with the fact that she is enciente, renders her recovery doubtful. Shook is a notorious character. He served a term in the Indiana State Prison, and came near killing his wife last spring. He is thought to have left the city, as the police are unable to find him.

What are the dear people for but to teach bosses that they cannot be too careful of how much bossing the d. p. will stand. There was evidently a miscalculation in the last election. The proprietors of Cole's Carbolisalve have miscalculated the demand for their great skin remedy and are pressed to supply the quantity necessary to fill running orders.

The Latest Electrical Discovery.

The Rev. Mr. Gilbert, during an address at Christ Church the other night, remarks the Otago Times, while speaking of the telephone, asked his audience if they would be astonished if he were to tell them that it was now proved to be possible to convey by means of electricity vibrations of light—to not only speak with your distant friend, but actually to see him. The electroscope—the name of the instrument which enables us to do this—was the very latest scientific discovery, and to Dr. Gnidrah, of Victoria, belonged the proud distinction. The trial of this wonderful instrument took place at Melbourne on the 31st of October last in the presence of some forty scientific and public men, and was a great success. Sitting in a dark room, they saw projected on a large disk of white burnished metal, the race course at Flemington with its myriad hosts of active beings. Each minute detail stood out with perfect fidelity to the original, as they looked at the wonderful picture through binocular glasses, it was difficult to imagine that they were not actually on the course itself and moving among those whose actions they could so completely scan.—Scientific American.

A Signal Victory.

The value of electricity as a remedial agent has gained a signal victory over prejudice. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL stands foremost in this class of compounds. Testimonials from all parts tell of the wondrous cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, hurts and sores, etc., effected by its agency.

A woman was the only passenger in a Montana stage except her baby, whom she wrapped in her fur cloak, leaving herself unprotected from the zero temperature. The driver saw that she was benumbed and would freeze to death unless roused to violent exercise. He dragged her from the coach and left her by the roadside. "Oh, my baby!" she cried. The driver cracked his whip. The stage flew over the snow with the woman running after. The race was kept up for nearly two miles, when the driver took the mother in again and wrapped his coat around her. He had warmed her blood and saved her life.

To poison a well is one of the worst crimes. It is worse to poison the fountain of life for one's self and for posterity. Often by carelessness or misfortune, or ignorance, this has been done. Ayer's Sarsaparilla goes back of the symptoms, picks up these impure seeds from the blood, the fountain stream, and restores appetite, strength, and health.

A new craze is abroad that is rather more senseless than the autograph mania. The young ladies keep a book or basket in which they collect drawings of some animal or thing. You are handed pencil and paper and required to give your best idea of the thing required without model or assistance. One lady has what she calls a "collection basket," wherein she keeps all the various attempts of her friends to draw a feline. It is astonishing how few people really know what a cat looks like.

Give Him a Rest.

When enfeebled by long suffering proceeding from torpid liver, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, or sick headache, take BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, which give rest to the weary and reinvigorates all the organs of the body. Price $1.00.

A Philadelphia man who wants to die, but doesn't want to commit suicide, has engaged a fifth-story room in a hotel and is awaiting his fate.—Philadelphia Chronicle-Herald.

"What is heaven's best gift to man?" she asked, sweetly smiling on him. "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup," he replied, with prudence. He had just been cured by it of a bad cold.
