especially those who live in prohibition territory. If some saloonkeepers were to come into the homes of these parents who worked so hard for prohibition and who rejoiced when the saloon had to pack up and leave the country in which they lived—I say if they should come into their homes and offer to sell their boys a bottle or a jug of whisky they would kick them out at the first attempt. But these misguided fathers and mothers will let these whisky peddlers in the shape of a daily paper come into their homes and peddle out the saloonkeeper's damnable stuff three hundred and sixty-five days in the year and double the dose every Sunday; and they will not put in a protest. If this is not straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel, then I fail to read the signs of the times. May Home and State continue to carry glad news and pure truth into homes of the people.—W. J. J. Johnson, in Texas Home and State.

Three years ago the city went "dry" by over 500 majority, but lacked 240 of the required three-fifths. It is believed that public opinion on the liquor question has decidedly changed and there is now good prospect of securing the requisite three-fifths majority.

The supreme court of Michigan has handed down a decree holding valid the law passed last winter, limiting the number of saloons to one to 500 population. This will put 500 saloons in Detroit out of the running.
