

WOMAN, lovely woman, has at last made up her mind to clean out the Chinese wash-washe business. At a meeting of the Woman's Industrial League, held at Washington, D. C., the other night, resolutions were adopted, declaring, "That the good of the public and the health of the country demand that the Chinese laundries shall go, and calling upon the administration to recommend to congress to pass such laws that will protect the industries of this country from further encroachment of these heathen barbarians, and the community from the introduction by them of that hideous disease known as leprosy, which has hitherto been unknown in our land, and denouncing Secretaries Manning and Lamar for "the encouragement given these Chinese laundries in letting out the washing of the towels of their departments by contract." A copy of the resolutions was ordered sent to the president of the United States, members of the cabinet, speaker of the house and president of the senate.

ONE of the most useful yet neglected of all the arts is that of lying in bed. The damage that is done by persons getting up is past all reckoning. All the mischief and crime, the counterfeiting and forgery, the murder and theft, are perpetrated by parties who persist in getting up. Not only individuals do wrong by leaving their beds, but rivers as well do an immense amount of damage. What man was ever dunned by a creditor, had his eye put in mourning by a too close proximity with some one's first, broke his leg on a slippery pavement, was run over by an omnibus who lay in bed? What great achievements have been accomplished in war, in poetry, in literature, by genius a-bed? "Coming events cast their shadows before"—one of the most memorable lines in the English language—originated with the gin loving poet, Tom Campbell, one morning before he had risen. Longfellow thought out that exquisite poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," after he had retired. Ben Franklin said, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." There is the fatal mistake. People who rise early are sure to catch the malaria. The ground is full of half-hatched poisonous germs; the sun is not up and had not warmed them into life, given them wings and set them adrift. Poor, mistaken man, he rises, inhales them all, they fructify and poison his entire system, hence chills, fever, malaria, and half the ills that human flesh is heir to.

Rise before the sun. And make a breakfast of the morning dew, served up by nature on some grassy hill. You'll find it better.

Was ever more arrant nonsense written? Fancy a man getting up on a cold rainy morning and climbing high hills on an empty stomach, and leaving his coffee and hot rolls, and poached eggs to eat what? Why, dew! How long would that fellow last? Wouldn't he be a fit candidate for Jacksonville, and no questions asked? But the early bird catches the worm. Yes, but the sharp boy knocked the delusion on the head forever and eternally when he said: "Father, there's the point, what in thunder did the worm get up so early for? He trifled with destiny; he tempted fate; he should not have done it. That boy was a benefactor to the human race. He was sound on the lie-a-bed question."

THE HENDRICKS EPISODE. It is somewhat amusing to observe the serious attempts of the republicans to create a disturbance over Vice President Hendricks' recent speech on Irish affairs, delivered in Masonic hall, Indianapolis, says the New York Star. To have the English journals, most of which applauded the result of our last presidential election, now come out and relieve their wounded national dignity by pronouncing the Indianapolis speech "a breach of neutrality," is like the dropping of heavenly dews upon the worn and jaded partisans of the bloody shirt. Their happiness would be complete if by some means the British lion could be so thoroughly infuriated by Mr. Hendricks' kind words for Ireland and his deserved eulogium of Parnell as to demand an official explanation or apology from Washington. This teapot tempest is all the more ridiculous, as it serves to show the utter hollowness of the loud republican professions made a year ago to catch the votes of our citizens of Irish birth and descent. If it was possible to "pander a little to the moral sense of the community," as Senator Everts once wittily observed, the republican leaders improved the hint and pandered to the home patriotism of the Irish to an extent that must have disgusted every intelligent citizen who read their appeals. A distinguished democrat, who happens to be vice president, speaking in a purely unofficial capacity, and upon an unofficial occasion, has openly advocated for Ireland the same local self government which every state of the Union today enjoys. He has spoken well of the great Irish parliamentary leader, who is the apostle of his reform in Irish affairs. He has expressed not only the generous sentiments of his party, but of a vast majority of the American people on this question. For these reasons he has incurred the animadversions of a portion of the English press, which would gladly apply Carlyle's remedy of utter extermination to Ireland. And the republicans, by their present attack, have given the lie to all their late professions to Irish American voters, and have exposed their party to well earned ridicule. Mr. Hendricks transgressed no rule of international policy for which his government will ever be questioned. He did not represent the administration, but himself alone, and his able and fearless arraignment of British misrule in Ireland cannot fail to command approval wherever the elements of human sympathy and justice exist.

Peter Raczen, of Gordonville, Pa., writes: "A few days ago I had a severe attack of cholera morbus. Your agent told me if Mischler's Herb Bitters did not cure me he would refund the money. SHERMAN'S OPINION

OF THE WARNER-SILVER COMPROMISE BILL.

He Says the Scheme is Absolutely Impracticable—Thinks There is No Danger in Issuing Silver Dollars If Their Weight is Increased.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 21.—Senator John Sherman, who is stopping at the Kennard house, was called upon by a reporter Saturday morning and asked to give his opinion of the Warner silver compromise bill, as reported through the senate. "What is your opinion of the compromise silver scheme?" was asked. "It is absolutely impracticable. The dispatches represent Warner as claiming to be able by his plan to prevent the falling of the silver market by producers and speculators. It is a more feasible way to prevent this in the case of silver than it is in the case of grain or cotton. It is not practicable to give certificates for silver bullion circulating power when these certificates are in use for silver at the market price on the day of issue and redemption at the market price of silver on some other day."

"It is not practicable, it is simply preposterous, so much so, in fact, that I can hardly believe that Warner or any other intelligent man would advocate it, although it is so represented in public prints. Such certificates could never become a part of the currency. It is a more feasible way from day to day with the price of silver. They could not constitutionally be made legal tender, therefore banks would not receive them. The government would be the only party that would receive them, and the government would have to take them for its use, as they would be used or redeemed them in lawful money, not bullion—following the provisions of Warner's plan. The government would in that way become the opesitory of all the certificates as well as all the silver and the whole thing would be a farce so far as it respects the currency of the people. Certificates of the kind Warner proposed would be as unstable in value as the 'red dog' money of antebellum days. They would not be money in any true sense of the term."

When asked if congress had power to make such certificates, receivable for public and private dues, the senator replied that it had not. "The present gold and silver certificates," he continued, "which are not, as many suppose, legal tenders, but being receivable for public dues at a fixed value, have great creditability and circulating power, and, in my judgment, as near as the government can get, what the people want in this regard, excepting always that the silver dollars at the base of the silver certificates should contain silver enough to make them intrinsically equal to gold."

He says the government will have to assume the risk in the circulation of the value of silver. He also thinks there is no prospect of issuing too many silver dollars providing the dollar was strengthened by increased weight, as he advocates. There would be 100,000,000 such dollars hoarded instead of 50,000,000 as is now the case. He thinks the policy of suspending payment on the public debt since Secretary Seward's death a mistake. "The requirements of the sinking fund should have at least been kept up. He infers that there is $50,000,000 now in the treasury that should go toward reducing the public debt. The alleged sale of fractional silver in New York for gold was a silly piece of business. There is no prospect of getting plenty of gold for silver certificates if desired or necessary. He continued that while secretary, he gave large amounts of silver certificates to foreigners, who came here to buy our products. Millions of gold came into the treasury in this way. Manning has since is opposed to the silver issue and so ran short of gold for a time.

An Ohio Sensation. TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 21.—A remarkable story comes from Monaca, Ohio, this county. It is in substance that about thirteen years ago Thomas Hubbell, the owner of a prosperous farm, died and was buried in the village graveyard. He left a wife, who has since married, and an estate which was divided among eight children. Hubbell was largely forgotten, when a few years ago the wife received a letter from a Michigan gentleman, who said there was a man, but no name was taken, friends supposing it a freak of a fanatic. This week another letter was received, and to quiet suspicions, the grave was opened, when, to the surprise of all, the casket was there, but empty. It has caused great excitement. Since then the brothers of Hubbell have been following up the clue in Michigan, and now believe the solution of the mystery is that when Hubbell was buried the body was stolen by robbers for the Ann Arbor medical college. It is supposed that life returned on the dissecting table. Hubbell had been at work in the mine, and a terrible shock awoke him and proving to be a lunatic he was placed in an asylum. The return of the brothers from their investigation is eagerly watched for. The affair has created a profound sensation hereabouts.

Y., Sept. 21.—On the New York West Shore & Buffalo railway, just east of this point, upward of 700 feet of an embankment thirty feet high suddenly and mysteriously sank, tearing down both rail way tracks. A temporary roadbed about a quarter of a mile in length, was marked out around the hole and in a short time the track was in readiness for trains. All sorts of theories have been made to the cause of the sinking, the most tenable one being the existence of a subterranean cavern.

A Village Destroyed by Fire. PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis., Sept. 21.—Intelligence has been received that the village of Soldier's Grove was almost entirely destroyed by fire Friday night. Full reports have not yet been received, but the loss will reach $50,000.

Is England Mad About It? LONDON, Sept. 21.—The morning paper preserve the same stances on the subject of the Gonesta's winning Vice Commodore Douglas cup Friday that they continue to display in this regard. The Post was the only sporting paper with a leader on the Puritan's victory, and this is mainly a review of the history of the race, without expressing any views. The Saturday Review couplet-likes water with the waves over which the Puritan sailed, and blames Sir Richard Sutton for accepting an abortive condition and taking a "wagging" stance yacht across the Atlantic to contest with a racing machine.

OHIO POLITICS.

TWO PROMINENT POLITICIANS COME TO BLOWN ON THE CAR.

Ex-United States Marshal Wright Strikes Durbin Ward in the Face—Separated by Friends—Hoodly on the Mistakes of Sherman.

LEBANON, Ohio, Sept. 21.—About 5 o'clock Friday evening as L. S. Wright, ex-United States marshal for the southern district of Ohio, and Gen. Durbin Ward, both of Lebanon, Ohio, were coming up on the Cincinnati Northern road, they got into an altercation about the manner in which Ward acted in the election at Cincinnati last fall. In a speech at the City of Xenia Thursday night the general charged that Lot Wright had been cognizant of and had furthered a rape on the ballot. Both men occupied the same seat in the car, and they became entangled in a heated discussion on the subject. Ward was open in his charge against Wright. Wright warned him not to repeat the charges. This warning was not heeded, and the consequence was that Ward received a terrific blow over the left eye, that brought blood. Ward was about to respond with a heavy cane, when mutual friends intervened and hostilities ceased. A correspondent met both of the men at their respective homes. They both have a different version of the row, except that Ward admits that he charged Wright with unbecoming conduct as a United States official, and with contempt for the election at Cincinnati last fall, and reverts the charges. Both men are resident politicians on opposite sides and are highly-respected citizens.

Hoodly at East Liverpool. EAST LIVERPOOL, Sept. 21.—Governor Hoodly was warmly welcomed at the skating rink Friday night by an audience of 3,000 people. His first effort was an abominable denial of the statements made by Senator Fawcett at a Republican meeting in Mahoning county, in which he had charged with over-confidence in suppressing the labor difficulties in the Hocking valley, and a personal affront to the interests of the coal operators. He then reviewed the situation at that time in minute detail, giving a reason for his every action. The governor then reviewed the mistakes of Sherman, which, as he said, "were made by an overwhelming majority of the errors of any other individual known to history." Mr. Sherman's attempt to paint Ohio a demagogue by flouting over the state some stained linen, came in for an exhaustive rebuff, and when the speaker, who said that he numbered among his friends Sherman who is now engaged in refighting a battle, the audience went wild, and the large building echoed with applause. The governor's position on the liquor question was also discussed at length.

Concerning Senator Chaffee's Utterances. NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Referring to the alleged utterances of Senator Chaffee on the subject of Gen. Grant's resting place, Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., who was seen at the family mansion in Sixty-six street Friday in a rage, said: "I do not for a moment believe that the senator said the things attributed to him. I have heard him talk in an entirely opposite way on the subject. The only reason I can see for publishing such a story is the desire to defame the monument enterprise here. I know that the publication of what I believe to be a false statement of Senator Chaffee's views has made talk about the monument of course more or less impudic the work of raising subscriptions. For my own part I do not feel authorized or inclined to speak on the subject of my father's burial place."

Mr. Grant said that for the present he did not wish to speak on the subject, but that he would do so in the future, and that he intended to enter the matter of the general's expressed preference for New York as a place of burial.

There are thirteen troops of cavalry in pursuit of the band. The country is extremely rough and the pursuit so close that the hostiles cannot do the damage they want to, and can only kill those whom they happen to run across in their line of march.

A Coal Barge and Five Men Lost. GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 21.—Capt. Griswell and a crew of five men on the barge Orient, laden with coal from New Orleans, were lost in the heavy storm which prevailed here Friday night.
