TORNADO—LIFE LOSS BIG.

Regina, Sask., July 1.—There is scarcely a family in Regina that is not mourning a dead or badly injured member as the result of the tornado that swept the city last night.

Thirty-five bodies already have been recovered. The total number of dead will surely reach half a hundred. There are 300 known injured.

Hospitals and morgues are full to overflowing. Churches and schoolhouses and halls have been pressed into service.

Husbands are searching for wives, wives for husbands, and parents for children in the ruins.

Regina is the capital of Saskatchewan. Yesterday it was in gala dress in honor of Dominion day, a national holiday. Today it is in ruins and mourning. Red Coats are patrolling the streets. The property loss will be over $5,000,000.

The great buildings of Parliament House, built of solid steel, still stand, but are half wrecked. The government telephone building collapsed. All the telephone girls escaped, but many of them are badly injured.

Railroad cars standing in the yards were picked up and hurled many feet. Boats were lifted out of Wascana lake and deposited in Victoria park. Automobiles full of people were thrown out of their course and their occupants killed or injured.

Of the thirty-five bodies recovered all but three have been identified.

The storm played freakish tricks. It tore out one side of many houses and left the inside undisturbed. It twisted many houses so badly they will have to be torn down.

Four hundred of the finest homes in the city are in ruins, and among these ruins can be heard the cries of trapped women and children.

The Democratic convention today became marked with just such bitterness as distinguished the Chicago fiasco.

The story of the day is best told by the ballots. It is the story of Woodrow Wilson's growing strength, of Champ Clark's loss of strength.
