

PRETTY NEWS GIRL HAS STOPPED SELLING PAPERS

Mrs. Frank M. Bates.

New York, July 1.—A desperate three-month siege by two millionaires for the hand of a little 19-year-old hotel newsgirl ended the other day when Nan Corrigan left her stand in the great Vanderbilt hotel here to become the bride of Frank M. Bates, jewelry manufacturer of Attleboro, Mass.

It was early in January when the new hotel was first opened that Bates noticed the simple, unassuming girl behind the paper and magazine counter. He contrasted her unassuming beauty with that of the proud dames that strutted up and down "Peacock Alley," as the great blue-green corridor is called. And he was unanimously in favor of Nan's looks.

So was a millionaire widower from Buffalo, who was also a guest at the hotel. And then the fun began. Nan was besieged with flowers and candy and trinkets by the score. And then, as the month of brides and roses came, she surrendered her heart to Bates.

"He's more my age," she said, "and I love him. I am sorry that anyone had to be hurt by my decision. But I have to marry the man I like the most."

Bates brought his mother down from her mansion in the hills of
