

SMALL AND YOUTHFUL IS MIGNON ANDERSON —“DAREDEVIL OF THE MOVIES”

Because of the many risks she has taken in films, Mignon Anderson of the Thanouser film company has been dubbed “the little daredevil of the films.”

One day—just to show you what she is expected to do—the director decided it would be interesting to have Miss Anderson drive a ninety horsepower machine in a race with an express train.

She had never driven a car before, but that didn't seem to her any reason why she shouldn't try.

After a few hours' instruction, she tore down the roadway beside the track with the express train following as a bad second, while the cameras clicked away merrily.

Mignon is small and youthful. But you cannot scare her. And she always makes good.

Mignon Anderson.

Who says the resources of advertising are exhausted? A Belfast grocer had eggs displayed for sale with the legend: “Every one of these is an Irish hen's honest day's work.”
