

THE GREATEST SPORTING STORIES EVER

Hugh Fullerton at His Best in "The Five Tensest Minutes In Sports."

Hugh Fullerton's battered typewriter has produced many thrilling pieces of fact and fiction, but his most marvelous work is yet to be published. It is "The Five Tensest Minutes in Sport," a gripping, powerful series, with excitement and suspense in every sentence.

Truth is, indeed, stranger than fiction. No fiction could compare with these articles, all founded on fact. They are masterpieces in the literature of athletics, and their attraction is not limited to sport-lovers alone. The schoolboy or his grandmother can read them with equal delight.

Every one is a drama of words and a wonderful example of descriptive narrative.

The panther-like Corbett had Jeffries, the bull, whipped and ready to quit. Then came that terrible sixty-eighth minute. What happened?

The daring De Palma was winning. The $20,000 prize was within his grasp. What happened?

The Day Book is going to tell—it's going to publish these entertaining stories. The first one appears tomorrow.

Don't miss them!

"The five tensest minutes in sports."

One minute a day.

DRUG FIEND SAYS HE HAS NO TROUBLE GETTING DOPE

A 20-year-old confessed-drug fiend told Judge Scully today that he could purchase dope in fifty places in and about the loop.

The boy's story was one of the most pathetic ever heard in the boys' court. He was Charles Powers, 2918 E. 72d street, a book agent. Together with Frank Sislby, 19, 416 S. Clark street, he was arrested when a child in the home of Carmenie Altieri, 1002 S. State street said they had intruded. The boys are of good parents. Last night in his cell young Powers tried suicide, but failed.

Powers and Sislby both contracted the habit when morphine was injected into them by physicians. Both have made many attempts to get away from the habit.

Judge Scully sent them out to take the cure for 30 days at their own request.

Never use a brush when cleaning silk goods. Wipe carefully with piece of velvet.

STILL COOL

By Jim Manes.

It's one day into fair July.

It's hot then as a rule;

But something rather wrong this year
It keeps on keeping cool.

P. S.—It's fine weather, so let's don't kick.

LOCAL GRAIN MARKET.—Biggest crops in years reported. Wheat up. Corn down. Oats down. Provisions easy.

N. Y. STOCKS.—Market opened lower, but buying was good. Trading was dull at close, and prices continued to sag.

Mrs. M. H. Cole is president of a real estate firm in New York city.

WEATHER FORECAST

Partly cloudy tonight and Thursday; no important change in temperature; moderate northwesterly winds. Temperature Tuesday—Highest, 73; lowest, 65.