

grain scopolamin for the first dose and repeating this same amount at regular intervals of 1½ hours. He has naturally enough many blue babies.

Sometimes doctors who are not yet skillful in Twilight Sleep give the mother a dose of scopolamin within less than 1½ hours of the end of birth. This sometimes brings a baby of a pinkish-bluish color who is sleepy and breathes very lightly for 10 to 20 minutes. This is not a very dangerous condition like the deep asphyxia due to forceps or prolonged painful births, but it is undesirable. The expert Twilight Sleep doctor has none of these apnoeic babies, as they are called. Within a year or so, those doctors who are working in Twilight Sleep in good faith and who desire to succeed will have no apnoeic babies.

In a generation there will be plenty of experts and no woman will have to go to the doctors who carelessly overdose and bring breathless babies over to the world. At the present, women must remember that it is the tiny dose individualized to each patient and widely spaced by the memory test that makes true Twilight and true Twilight is safe for mother and child.

In another generation we shall have happier and healthier mothers and babies who have come into the world without the dangers that come to them today through long and painful births; every maternity hospital will have its death rate in babies cut like Freiburg, to less than half what it was before Twilight was used.

FASHION FORECAST

By Betty Brown

"The princess gown is coming," predict the fashion prophets, but just take the word of Betty Brown, the princess gown is HERE.

Almost all the new gowns I saw in a tour of the shops the other day were made in one piece. Some of them were girled and some of them slightly bloused, but almost all of them had the direct, straight line extending from neck to skirt hem—and what can you call the straight line gown but a princess.

The redingote with its long, straight lines is also noticeable among the new gowns. The coat costume is a very economical garment as it's a dress and coat in one, and may be worn with only a founced petticoat.

MEXICAN GIRL SPENDS SUMMER IN THE EAST

ISABEL ANGELES

Miss Isabel Angeles, daughter of Gen. Felipe Angeles, Villa's chief of artillery, who is spending the summer in Massachusetts.

To remove wine stains from linen soak the spots in sweet milk.