

JURORS FREE 3 ACCUSED IN GIRL MURDER

Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso Found Not Guilty at Salem.

EMBRACE EACH OTHER

Charged Men Incited Fatal Riots in Connection With Lawrence Strike.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 26.—The jury found Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso not guilty of the murder of Anna Lopizzo, who was killed in the Lawrence strike riot.

When the three men heard the words freeing them from the charge, they embraced each other in the prisoners' cage.

"Gentlemen of the jury," Giovannitti said, his face beaming with joy, "in the name of justice, truth and civilization, I thank you."

Ettor addressed the jury thusly: "I thank you, not only for myself, but in the names of my companions. I thank the court for a fair trial. The thanks we offer are not only ours, but are thanks in the name of the working class."

The court interpreter, Sacco, for Caruso, said: "Caruso wants to thank you all, and now that he is a free man, he says he is innocent of the crime."

JURORS ARE CHEERED.

The jurors entered the court room at 8:30. The prisoners, each wearing a red carnation, were brought to the cage in the center of the room. All were smiling. Judge Quinn asked if the jury had agreed. When the verdict of not guilty was returned the jury was excused from further service in a notable trial which lasted six weeks. The jury was cheered by crowds of mill workers in the streets.

When the jurors left, the court announced to Caruso that there was another indictment against him charging assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, and that the court would release him on his own recognizance. When Caruso was released from the cage, his wife fell into his arms and a dozen male companions rushed forward and kissed him.

Ettor and Giovannitti are also held on another indictment charging them, with William D. Haywood of the Industrial Workers of the World and others, with conspiracy to incite riots in the Lawrence strike, on this they were released on $500 bonds.

RELEASED FROM CAGE.

The Lawrence strike leaders were then freed from the prisoners' cage. They were beset by a crowd of men and women. For several minutes they were recipients of kisses from the men and congratulations from the women. The defendants and the attorneys held a jubilation meeting in the court room when court adjourned. Later, followed by a cheering throng of mill workers, they marched through the streets to the office of the Industrial Workers of the World, where they remained some time.

"I have no immediate plan," said Ettor. "I'm going as soon as possible to my home in Tacoma, Wash., where I have a paralyzed father. He has been paralyzed since my arrest."

Giovannitti said he expected to visit friends in Boston and vicinity. Both were very happy.

sachusetts on guard to avert disastrous consequences, attracted worldwide attention for many weeks. Riots were frequent; cars in Lawrence were attacked; men, women and children who attempted to work were assaulted and in some cases injured, and there were repeated clashes between strikers and the organized forces of the law until citizens of Lawrence were alarmed at the threatening struggle. Its climax came Jan. 23, a day begun with a parade of agitated foreign workers to demonstrate their solidarity against the mill owners and ended with a riot in which the young woman was slain and Oscar Benoit, a Lawrence policeman, stabbed.

CONGRESS APPEALED TO.

Even congress was appealed to during the struggle following an attempt of strike leaders to take from Lawrence to Philadelphia a hundred children of strikers' families to be cared for by sympathizers. This effort, preceded by successful deportation of strikers' children to New York and other cities, was frustrated by the police in a clash at the railroad station in which fathers, mothers and children clashed with the authorities. Many men and women were arrested. This occurrence, widely heralded, aroused protests from all parts of the United States and prompted Victor Berger, socialist member of the house of representatives to plan a congressional investigation of the strike and working conditions in the mills of the American Woolen company and others. A resolution directing such an inquiry brought about a preliminary hearing before the rules committee of the house in which Lawrence strikers, men, women and children, representatives of the Lawrence authorities, participated. The hearings held in the caucus room of the house office building in Washington aroused intense interest, hundreds of persons, including Mrs. Taft, wife of the president, attending them for several days. No congressional action, however, was recommended.

The strike began Jan. 12, when workers in mills of the American Woolen company left their looms in protest against a reduction without notice of two hours' pay a week in consequence of there going into effect a new state law restricting labor to 54 hours a week. Rioting about the mill gates immediately followed, and on the following day Ettor, a young Italian-American labor leader from Pennsylvania, went to Lawrence to take charge of the strike for the Industrial Workers of the World and to organize the dissatisfied and unorganized army of laborers.

By Jan. 15, 30,000 persons were idle; the mills were closed; special police were sworn in to add the regular force in preserving order; state troops were ordered to Lawrence by Governor Fuess and an industrial crisis was at hand.

Ettor, assuming command of the workers' cause, announced that the strikers demanded a wage increase of 15 per cent, abolition of the premium system and pay double for overtime. Numerous conferences were held with state bodies and mill owners and a strike committee was organized, headed by Ettor and composed of representatives of each nationality involved in the conflict, including the Italians, who were most numerous, Poles, Syrians, Lithuanians, Hebrews, Americans and others.

During the progress of the trouble Ettor frequently addressed the masses in churches, halls and on the Lawrence common. In keeping up the enthusiasm thus he was aided by Arturo Giovannitti, who went to Lawrence from Brooklyn, William D. Haywood, the leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, and many others prominent

THE FIRST SNOWFLAKES

W. Murphy of the Chicago National club of being the instigator of the "story" which resulted in the charges preferred against President Fogel of the Philadelphia club. Forman is in New York prepared to testify before the league meeting.

The "Fogel story" attacking President Lynch and his umpire system recently appeared in the Post. Regarding it Forman says:

MURPHY HIS AUTHORITY.

"Murphy authorized me to tell Fogel that Murphy had suggested writing the story. On this representation Fogel wrote it and signed it. He sent it to Murphy, who read it before I ever saw it. It came to me from Murphy's office, and if Murphy had never approved the story it never would have been published. I have Fogel's own word for it that he wrote the story simply to help Murphy fight his battles in the National league."

NO BUSINESS TODAY.

New York, Nov. 26.—Magnates of the National league, in session here, will not take up today charges against Fogel involving his alleged statement that the pennant race was "fixed." The baseball men will go into session at 2 o'clock, adopt a resolution on the death of John T. Brush and adjourn until tomorrow.

Fogel said today he never heard of Forman, the Chicago newspaper man.

FOGEL SUDDENLY RESIGNS.

Horace Fogel, president of the Philadelphia National club, tendered his resignation this afternoon, without explanation, before the magnates had time to consider the charges against him. It was announced Alfred Wilder, a lawyer, and stockholder in the Philadelphia club, was elected president of the club last Friday. It is understood the investigation of the charges against Fogel will go on.

Baseball magnates heard that Christy Mathewson, pitcher for the Giants, had obtained sufficient backing to purchase the Philadelphia club.

BRUSH, OWNER OF GIANTS, PASSES AWAY ON TRAIN

St. Louis, Nov. 26.—The body of John T. Brush, millionaire owner of the New York National League baseball club, who died early today in a private car near Seeberger, Mo., arrived here this morning. Brush, seriously ill of locomotor ataxia when he left New York Sunday on his way to the Pacific coast, failed rapidly on the trip.

New York, Nov. 26.—News of the death of John T. Brush was not unexpected. He had been at death's door sometime, and the trip to California was decided upon as a last resort. In the event of Brush's death, it was said H. N. Hempstead, his son-in-law, would become the principal owner of the Giants.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 26.—The funeral of Mr. Brush will be held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. N. Hempstead, of this city.

Brush began his baseball career here by purchasing $25 stock in the Indianapolis club 25 years ago.

GIRL DIES TO SAVE HONOR; LEAVES NOTE

Nebraska School Teacher Victim of Chicago Building Jump.

BEEN LOOKING FOR JOB

Has Idea She Is Pursued by White Slavers—Believed Mentally Deranged.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Possessed with the idea that she was pursued for dishonorable purposes, Miss Maude Van Deusen, 25 years old, leaped from the 20th story of the McCormick building and was crushed to death on the stone pavement of an alley at the street level, yesterday afternoon. She jumped from an alley fire escape nearly 250 feet above the ground. Her body struck another fire escape at the first floor and bounced into the alleyway.

Nearly every bone was broken. Miss Van Deusen, according to papers found in her pocket book, which she carried down with her, was a school teacher in Humboldt, Neb. From her papers it appeared that she had been seeking a position here and had become obsessed with the idea that she had been in danger from white slavers. She wrote that she had been driven to appeal for protection to Chief of Police McWeeny, and to the federal department of justice, and to social settlement workers.

PREPARED FOR DEATH.

She had prepared for death by pinning across her bosom a strip of white linen which had been stained crimson at each end, and on which she had printed in large letters, "Death before dishonor." She had tied around her neck a copy of the new testament in which she had passages marked.

She had her handbag in her hand as she jumped, and it was picked up near her body. In it was another marked bible and a long typewritten statement which she had entitled "Part of my life's history."

"I will die clean if I have to kill myself," was written at the head of one of the sheets. The police believe the woman was deranged mentally.
