No better investment can be made for so small a sum.
HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU
Has acquired a world-wide fame.

ALL of my preparations are meritorious. A period of twenty years has proved this to be the case.

Some remarks made by Benjamin Traverse, F. R. C. S.: Speaking of those diseases, and diseases arising from the excess of mercury, he states that no remedy is equal to the Extract of Sarsaparilla, its power is extraordinary, more so than any other drug I am acquainted with. It is, in in the strictest sense, a tonic, with this invaluable attribute—that it is applicable to a state of the system so sunken, and yet so irritable, as renders other substances of the tonic class unavailable or injurious.

H. T. Helmbold:

Esteemed Friend—I congratulate you on having the handsomest and at the same time the Most Effective Pill that I have ever known for the purposes intended. WM. R. WARNER & CO.

H. T. Helmbold will remark, in conclusion, that his remedies are the result of long and careful study. The Fluid Extracts have been before the public twenty years. The sale of them in that time proves their value. All have been benefitted by them who followed my instructions, and to-day they stand unequalled in the extent of their sale, and unsurpassed by any medicament in the Dispensatory of the United States, not excepting a single Herb, Root, Plant, or Scientific Preparation.

Pharmaceutical I claim all mine to be, and have never patented a single one.

To dispel any impression or prejudice that might exist in the minds of many against my preparations, from the publicity given through advertising, and that I am and have been a druggist for a period of twenty years, and more conclusively to prove this see letter from the largest manufacturing chemists in the world:

November 4, 1854.

I am acquainted with Mr. H. T. Helmbold; he occupied the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise. WILLIAM WIGHTMAN.
Firm of Powers & Wightman, manufacturing chemists, Ninth and Brown streets, Philadelphia.

ALL STAND ON THEIR MERITS.

The Pill I have thought of offering to the afflicted for ten years.

They are now perfect, and I shall stake my time, money and fame on their effectiveness. The inviting style in which the pill itself is made, the bottle, label, wrapper—all show with what care they have been prepared. After examination, no English or French preparation will show greater care, and I am really proud of them.

Instead of the nauseous-looking, carelessly prepared Pills vended generally, and put up in wooden boxes, and made generally, or offered by those having no experience as physicians, druggists or manufacturers of medicines, test the medicine offered by your obedient servant,

H. T. HELMBOLD.

EARLY HISTORY—LOCATION—MANUFACTURING FACILITIES.

Is Cairo Unhealthy?

TOBACCO MARKET, ETC., ETC.

[From the St. Louis Journal of Commerce.]

Cairo is undoubtedly the best slandered town on the continent. Ever since Dickens wrote "Martin Chuzzlewit," it has been associated in the popular mind with all the dismal horrors of Scadder's Colony, so that most people have realy come to believe that here, fever, death, inundations and ague, hold high carnival, poverty becomes chronic and incurable, and life a burthen—in short, that it is "a place without one single quality in earth, or air, or water to commend it."

We confess to a pleasant surprise in finding this traditional Cairo as much a pure fiction as the "Valley of Eden" itself, and having seen and become pretty well acquainted with the actual Cairo, we propose, in the following article, to spread before our readers some of the facts we have gathered respecting its location, resources, present condition and future prospects, together with a brief account of

ITS EARLY HISTORY.

Thirty years ago an effort was set on foot to build a city at the mouth of the Ohio. English capital to the amount of a million and a quarter of dollars was enlisted and some headway made with the project. Foundries, saw mills, machine shops, a dry dock, hotel and other business and manufacturing establishments were erected, and some of them placed in operation. Protective embankments were thrown up, and a city marked out that comported with the utopian ideas of the projectors. Many hundred acres of land contiguous were bought at extravagant prices, and made the basis of a credit for the company. During a period of two or three years that inspired an undue confidence in the future of the city, and the company, believing that the excitement had not yet reached its zenith, peremptorily refused to sell or lease a foot of the land to either individuals or corporations, for any purpose whatever. In this way the very element that builds up Western cities was cut off. In time the Company's means were exhausted; the English house through which it had negotiated loans failed, and soon thereafter the abandonment of the Company's works and projects became unovoidable. During a succeeding period of fourteen years, the place maintained a state of torpidity. Interested parties were urging the passage through Congress of the Illinois Central land grant, while others were engaged in the work of relieving the city site of the incumbrances to which it had been subjected. The passage of the bill referred to through Congress was the signal for more vigorous measures. The property was conveyed to two trustees, who removed every shadow from the title and in the year 1852 commenced laying off the city. By an arrangement with the Illinois Central railroad, the present levees were, in part, constructed—the trustees completing them—the whole at a cost of nearly half a million of dollars. In the summer of 1854 the first lot was sold, and what the city is to-day is the growth of the intervening period, something more than fourteen years. Every vestige of the original effort to build a city here has been wiped out, Cairo as it stands being the creation of the time stated.

For the above facts we are indebted to the Cairo Bulletin, a wide-awake daily and weekly, published by John H. Oberly, Esq.

AT PRESENT,

Cairo is enjoying more real and substantial prosperity than ever before. Having suffered severely from several "spells" of spasmodic growth, incident to extravagant speculating shemes, damaged equally by dazzling visions of sudden wealth and greatness, and by the gloom of an inevitable reaction, she has, at least, settled down to a steady prosperity, bassed upon a wise development of her resources, a system of judicious city improvements, and upon the well directed efforts of a class of reliable business men to build up a prosperous commercial and manufacturing center.

The levees, which now entirely surround the city, are more than seven miles in extent. These levees are several feet above the crest of the highest flood ever known in this locality, broad based and well settled; and, with an outside slope of five or six feet to one, all lateral pressure of the water is destroyed affording the most ample guarantee against even serious annoyance from the floods. These levees were constructed and will be maintained perpetually, free of any cost to the citizen and tax payer.

An extensive system of sewerage effectually frees the city from that heretofore intolerable nuisance, sipe water, many miles of streets have been filled up to a level with the levees, and the rough wooden shanties of early Cairo, are rapidly giving way to fine business blocks, well built, and in many cases, elegant and costly private residences.

To give some idea of the extent of the city improvements we give the following items from a late report of the Trustees of the "Cairo City Property Co." There have been expended by the Trustees over $900,000, in cleaning the ground and draining it, in building levees for its protection, wharves for the accommodation o its commerce and miscellaneous improvements. The corporate authorities have expended about $500,000 in general improvements, and the Illinois Central Railroad Company, not less than $200,000 more, making the whole expenditure for the improvement of about 1,300 acres, not less than $1,600,000. While the material prosperity of Cairo is thus placed upon a firm footing, the moral and intellectual tone or people, is reflected in its

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES.

These, both in the liberality of their support and ability employed and thorough work accomplished will challenge comparison with the best in the land. The Public School Buildings, two in number, were built at a cost of over $60,000, and are tasteful and convenient structures. Six hundred pupils are enrolled, and thirteen teachers employed, of whom Prof. H. S. English, is the able and popular Superintendent. We could fully appreciate the genuine pride which Cairo feels in her public schools after looking through their various departments, as we did the other day. For orderly, quiet deportment, the earnest but cheerful attention of the boys and girls to the work in hand, and prompt and accurate recitation, we have seldom seen these schools equalled. All honor is due to Prof. English and his corps of teachers for the good work they are doing. The churches are eight in number, distributed among the leading denominations and are well sustained.

CAIRO AS A TOBACCO EARKET.

The facilities which a locality possess for handling any of the great staple productions of the country, constitute one of the most important factors in its growth and development. More than three hundred million pounds of tobacco are annually raised in the United States, and, as for well known reasons New York and New Orleans are fast loosing the importance they once had as tobacco markets, it is not strange that wide awake towns all through the Interior, are eagerly grasping for privilage of handling, at least, a share of this tremendous production. Individual enterprise aside, plainly those places will best succeed in the race of competition, that are most eligibly situated with reference to shipments, in the tobacco growing regions. In this regard Cairo simply claims a first place—and this from no spirit of arrogance, but only because Nature compels her to that pre-eminence. The waters of the Ohio, Missouri, upper Mississippi and their tributaries—or more than twenty thousand miles of navigable rivers flow past he wharfs. While these rivers penetrate a large number of the thirty-one States in which tobacco is being, at present, raised, making it possible for them all, to be, in one sense tributary to her maket, those regions in which tobacco is a leading staple of production, are immediately adjacent to Cairo.

Statistics from the Bureau of Agriculture, show that the States of Kentucky, and Tennessee, Indiana and Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas, grow annually over 130,000,000 pounds of tobacco, or nearly one-half the product of the entire country. A market which is so nearly a geographical center of this region, and which offers to the planter such cheap facilities for transportation, possesses natural advantages too obvious, to need more than a mere mention. Another fact important to buyers is this. Being a sort of half-way house, for both the Ohio and Mississippi River Packets, where they all stop, there is such competition for the carrying trade, that freights, both to New Orleans and New York, are now, and will continue to be cheaper from this, than from any other point on the rivers.

Such much for the natural advantages of Cairo for building up a large distributing market. But these without individual enterprise are nothing. To this fact she is beginning to wake up. D. Hurd & Son, the energetic proprietors of the Ballard Warehouse, are rapidly demonstrating that this place ought to have and can have its proper position among the great tobacco markets of the country. Besides sending the right kind of men among the planters, to represent their mutual interests, they issue a weekly circular, which gives a full and intelligent resume of the market, quotations of sales for the week, together with such information and advice as the grower may need. They also have in contemplation a fair, to be held sometime in June, at which at least $1200 in gold will be distributed as premiums. We are glad to be able to report that unexpected succes is attending their enterprising efforts. The opening sale of this warehouse was on the 7th of February last, and up to the present time, May 6th, the receipts have been 4256 hhds, and the actual sales for this year will not fall short of seven thousand hhds. There is a regular board of buyers from St. Louis, New Orleans, Cleveland, Detroit and other cities, while the local buyers, are numerous, and among the most liberal in the country. As an evidence of the satisfactory character of the sales, we would state that there have been only eighteen rejections during the season. The following quotations taken from the Tobacco Circular of D. Hurd & Son issued May 6th, will show the qualities of tobacco offered and prices got on the brakes of Cairo.

Sales to-day were 78 hhds and 3 boxes as follows:

5	hhds	trashy lugs	$4 00 to	4 55
10	"	good Kentucky lugs	4 75 to	5 00

RULLOFF.

His Last Hours—He Rejects the Clergy and Dies With Blasphemy on his Lips.

On last Thursday the noted criminal whose name stands at the head of this article was hung in Binghampton, New York. Below we give an account of the manner in which he spent his last hours, from the New York Sun:

At daybreak he was offered breakfast, but took only coffee. Of this he drank freely. At 6 o'clock he was removed to the room in the Sheriff's house. Here he spent the time lounging on his bed chatting frivoously with his watchman, looking out the window gathering to be near his execution, and pacing the floor. At half past nine he again summoned his only influential friend in town, his counsel, Mr George Becker.

Mr. Becker was awaiting the summons, and was promptly with him accompanied by his clerk and Mr. Whitney, who has also been earnest in his sympathy for him.

The prisoner was then guarded by two watchman stationed in the room, and the third outside the door. Rulloff received his visitors cordially, saying "Please be seated."

Mr Becker responded to his greeting, with, "How are you feeling, Edward Rulloff?"

"Better then perhaps you could expect."

Becker—Since your brother is not here, do you wish to say anything to me in regard to the

DISPOSITION OF YOUR REMAINS?

Rulloff—Yes: I don't wish my remains to be desecrated. If buried in the Potter's Field, they will probably be disturbed by some hyena. Can't they be placed in a vault somewhare to await the action of my friends, if I have any?

Becker—I will try and have that done. But always expecting your brother on, and as you have not mentioned the subject to me before, but have rather evaded it, I have made no arrangements. I will endeavor to carry out your wishes. I cannot, hwoever, undertake to be responsible for what the Sheriff will do.

Mr. Becker then called the attention of the guard present to witness what had been said. They all said they understood it.

Mr. Becker continued—Edward, you have always professed to be a philosopher, and to place your reliance on philosophy, and no religion. Can you die like a stoic?

Rulloff—Yes; leave me alone for that. Socrates took the hemlock. Cicero was murdered on the seashore. Seneca committed suicide. I shall endeavor in my humble way to meat death

WITH THE SAME FORTIRUDE.

Becker—There are some clergymen who have tendered their services, and are now wating your bidding if you will have their ministrations. They have expressed a readiness and a desire to administer any spiritual comfort to you that may be in their power.

Rulloff—Well, I thank you; I am a man of strong convictions. I will not change my mind in a day or an hour upon a subject of so much importance. I never alter my mind without a reason, and I see no reason to change it upon that subject.

An importunate Bohemian, purporting to represent the anticapital punishment organ of New York, forced his way into the room at this point, Rulloff said he wished to treat everybady kindly, but he was now engaged in conversation with his counsel and desired to be alone. The Bohemian got out.

Rulloff then walked to the window overlooking the lawn back of the Court House, which covered with people. He asked, "What are all these people doing here?"

Becker—Most of them are from the county, and not from the city. There has never been an execution in Broom county before.

Rulloff—Well, I suppose they have a morbid desire to SEE A MURDER COMMITTED.

He then turned from the window and sat down beside Mr. Becker. * * * Rulloff said:

"I wonder if that Tribune man is back again. He is quite a young man and evidently inexperienced. He had to get in something about Harvard. He is a nice boy, but rather sophomoric. He will improve probably with age." Rulloff then grew facetious, saying:

"Greeley wrote a funny article about me a little while ago. It was only shown to me last night. By the way, did you hear that

LAST STORY ABOUT GREELEY?

He had been out to dinner one day, and wrote a report of it himself. In his report he mentioned that the company was entertained with champagne and Heidseick. The next day the assistant editors thought they had the old man, and gathered around to hear what he would say when the bull was pointed out to him. 'Well, by G——!' said Horace, "I'll bet I am the only man in this office that could make that mistake.'

The story seemed greatly to amuse both Rulloff and his auditors. Afterwards he told the story of the college student who kept a barrel of beer in his room, and got so strong that he could lift a whole barrel. With these and similar anecdotes he consumed the time until the arrival of the Sheriff to announce the readiness of the preperations for the hanging.

Rulloff and Becker then shook hands cordially. Rulloff said to his counsel, "I hope you will not entertain any hard feelings towards me for anything I may ever have said to you inadvertently. The deplorable situation in which I have always been since I met you, has made me irritable and nearly distracted. Please be present to the last." Then hesitating he added, "If you desire me to say anything publicly I will do so."

Becker—What do you mean?

Rulloff—I mean any further apology for MY RUDENESS YESTERDAY.

Becker—No, I am perfectly satisfied. I have always endeavored to entertain a pleasant recollection of our personal relations with each other in our intercourse as client and attorney. Good bye.

Rulloff—Good bye; take care of yourself.

Mr. Becker left him with the Sheriff and his Deputies to prepare him for his execution.

Fashion Notices

Standing collars pointed in front are in fashion.

Street dresses are worn moderately high at the throat.

Plain belts will be more worn this year than sash ribbons.

Small-meshed grenadines are used this year, with light black silk underskirts.

White muslin dresses have a kind of postilion of lace and muslin, instead of a sash.

Lyons poplins are to be much worn. Tea and Frou-Frou shades are most affected.

White ground, with penciled strips either of black or colors, are to be fashionable for summer suits.

Strips on pongees are an inch wide. Plum color, tea, and London smoke are the most fashionable shades.

Elegant Leghorn bonnets for elder ladies are trimmed with palest ecru, and ostrich tips of the two colors.

☞ It cost San Francisco $5,300 to try Mrs. Fair; it cost Mrs. Fair $12,000, including $5,000 to her senior counsel, to be tried, and it cost one of the papers there $1,435 to phonographically report and print the trial. Mrs. Fair is such an expensive female that the community can afford to keep but few of her.

☞ Dr. Medlicott, of Lawrence, has been held for trial for the murder of Isaac M. Ruth.
