THE FISK MURDER.

COMMENTS OF THE N. Y. PRESS.

The Journal comments on the Fisk murder, and says the cowardliness of the act bore the first fruits in the public mind, by awakening for Fisk wide-spread sympathy. There is nothing in the case to distinguish it from murder, for which death on the gallows is the penalty if convicted.

The Times pronounces it a murderous and cowardly deed, and will attract toward Fisk an amount of public sympathy to which no part of his career has entitled him.

The World says that in the act may be seen in its most accurate type the spirit of those marital murders which disgrace our pretensions to civilization, and whatever miserable results this business will have, it will have a beneficial result, of enabling the whole land to see that murder is murder, when perpetrated under the specious plea of upholding the sanctity of marriage, and perpetrated with a view of concealing concubinage.

PEN PORTRAIT OF JEFFERSON.

BY JAMES PARTON.

[From the January Atlantic.]

Jefferson was stripling of seventeen, tall, raw-boned, freckled, and sandy-haired, when, in 1760, he came to Williamsburg from the far west of Virginia, to enter the College of William and Mary. With his large feet and hands, his thick wrists and prominent cheek-bones and chin, he could not have been accounted handsome or graceful. He is described, however, as a fresh bright, healthy looking youth, as straight as a gun-barrel, sinewy and strong, with that alertness of movement which comes of early familiarity with saddle, gun, canoe, minuet, and country dance—that sure, elastic tread and ease of bearing which we still observe in country-bred lads who have been exempt from the ruder toils of agriculture, while enjoying, in full measure, the freedom and the sports of the country. His teeth, too, were perfect which alone redeems a countenance destitute of other charms; his eyes, which were of hazel-grey, were beaming and expressive; and his demeanor gave assurance of a gentle heart and sympattetic, inquisitive mind.

Such lads, eager and unformed, still come to college from honest country homes in regions where agriculture is carried on upon a scale that allows some leisure to the farmer's family, some liberality of expenditure, books, music, a tincture of art, and hospitable habits. How welcome, how dear, to instructors worthy of them, are such unhackneyed minds in bodies unimpaired!

SUFFERING IN THE WEST.

[From the St. Joseph Gazette.]

Gentlemen who have recently been on the prairies west of this city have the most painful apprehensions of the sufferings which must have been experienced by the people of the new settlements of western Kansas and Nebraska. Col. Mason, chief engineer of the St. Joseph bridge, was at White's camp, in Marshall county, whither he was called on business connected with the stone being brought from that place for the piers of the bridge, was caught by the storm of Friday, the 20th inst., and remained for eight days unable to reach the city. He thinks there were full twelve inches of snow in that locality. His own experience in traversing a distance of a mile and a half from the camp to the railroad in the midst of the storm convinced him of the terrors of the prairie at such a time. Being unable to get a train for St. Joseph he had to return to camp. Disregarding the desire of a companion to attempt to go straight from point to point he followed a stream which he knew would lead him to the shelter he sought, and this, he is certain, saved him from being lost on the prairie, a peril which all who are acquainted with a snow storm on the plains will understand. No mortal could see or keep his conse.

Col. Mason had heard of many reports of loss of life, and of scores of cases on the Solomon, as to the truth of which he can only express an opinin based upon the probabilities for what he saw. Great and terrible suffering, beyond all question, has been endured by wayfaring people and new and scantily provided for settlers in that remote and now isolated region.

The authorities of the state of Kansas are moving to alleviate the sufferings of the prairies, but succor as to many will, alas! come too late. It is however proper that energetic efforts should not be abated till full investigation be made in all the new settlements and all the relief possible rendered.

AN EXCITING BUFFALO HUNT.

[From the Leavenworth, Kan. Times.]

Senator Sprague visited Kansas a few weeks ago, and, like all other eastern visitors, wanted to see the buffalo on his native heath. Accordingly, Benjamin Akers, Esq., of this city, got up a party, and with the senator went out to the buffalo country. A few miles from Fort Wallace they found the bisons in thousands, and the hunters "went in." Mr. Akers singled out an old patriarch of the herd, chased him a few miles, and after a few successful shots brought him down. After his own game was secure, he commenced looking around for the rest of the party. The senator had also singled out an old bull, and driven him apart from the rest of the herd, and was in a little ravine about two miles distant from Akers, but in plain view. The buffalo had been wounded, and showed fight. The Senator would pursue him for a short distance, but would then be compelled to turn his horse's head in the other direction, and get out of the way of the maddened animal; once, in wheeling suddenly, his horse fell, and the bull was right upon him in an instant. Akers says this was one of the closest calls he ever saw—so close, indeed, as so leave no doubt in his mind that there would very soon be a necessity for a special Senatorial election in Rhode Island "to fill vacancy;" but just in the nick of time the valiant senator regained his seat in the saddle, and was off like the wind, his horse being stimulated by a sharp "punch" from the bull's horns. It seems that Mr. Sprague had pursued the animal closely, fired several shots upon him, wounding him severely, but not fatally, and that his ammunition had then given out; Mr. Akers, comprehending the situation, came to his assistance and reinforced him with a few rounds, when the bull was promptly brought down. The senator brought in with him the head of the animal, and is having it "cured" to take home as a trophy of his skill and prowess as a buffalo hunter.

A COBRA IN LOVE WITH A WOMAN.

A very extraordinary and astonishing incident was lately reported to have occurred a few miles from Bevpore, the particulars of which are as follows:

A native female of a very attractive appearance, of the carpenter caste, while sweeping the yards of her house, heard a hissing noise behind her. As she turned to see what it was, she found, to her terror, a large cobra advancing toward her. Before she had time to call any one to her assistance, or even to go from the place, the serpent darted at her like lightning, and coiled round one of her legs, and in the twinkle of an eye darted higher till it brought its open hood in contact with her face, there moving it to and fro like a screen. In this frightful position she had to remain for nearly one or two days without being able to lie or sleep. None but females could approach her to feed her with milk and plantains, when the cobra turned its head to one side and gave her ample time to nourish herself; but on any man stepping into the compound the cobra would hiss fearfully and tighten its hold around her body in such a manner as to make her feel breathless. Many were the conjurors who came to relieve her from the frightful condition, but none succeeded in removing the huge serpent from her person, till latterly a Nair was brought from the interior, who, after performing certain charms and spells, succeeded in disentangling the poor woman of her venomous lover. The snake quietly crept back into the bush whence it came, and the woman is doing well. The above wonderful occurrence is now a general talk among the natives of that place.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

[Washington Cor. New Orleans Times.]

The Fishes are regarded here as the creme de la creme of society. To preserve the air of exclusive refinement against the crowds of politicians they are forced to entertain, there is a cold formality that nearly freezes people. Hamilton himself is a coarse looking man, but Mrs. F. is a model in her way—she is a well-preserved, stately, old lady, and dresses in exquisite taste, and it requires more nerve on the part of an average congressman to go through a reception, than to catch the eye of the speaker and face a turbulent house. Quite a number of blunders were woven into stories last winter on the part of national law-makers, who ventured to approach the frigid zone of high society. The Hon. Fernando Wood was on the opposite corner, and although his house is as gorgeous as a palace, the poor fellows used to rush in there to recover their wind and presence of mind. The Hon. Ben Butler is on the opposite corner with another palace that was a house of refuge. But the unhappy neophytes never fairly recovered until they found themselves in the warm congenial atmosphere of Mr. Speaker Blaine's hospitable mansion.

This last did not extend to reporters of the press. Mrs. Blaine is a severe lady, who holds the reporter in sovereign contempt, and does not care to conceal it. A story is told of her catching one of this sort, and, forcing him to a seat in the hall, gave him a piece of her mind—that was not a pleasant piece, but I have no doubt was well deserved.
