Farmer Finds Hidden Cache of Pioneer Prospectors.

Hidden to Keep From Indians—Former Search Failed.

Jetmore, Kan., Feb. 6.—A box of gold nuggets weighing forty pounds and declared to be worth at least $6,800 was found by Ralph Chesney, a homesteader, on his farm just south of the line dividing Ford and Hodgeman counties today. The treasure will be deposited with a local bank while Chesney returns to search for more gold which is believed to have been hidden by Colorado prospectors before they were massacred by the Indians here in 1865. It is believed that metal worth nearly $100,000 was hidden by the party of men. One of the bands is said to have escaped and returned to this neighborhood years later in a vain endeavor to find his cache.

The find was made on a hill known as Turtle Back, on account of its shape. Details of how the find was made are not revealed by Chesney, who isn't at all anxious for competition in his hunt for the remainder of the wealth. The hill is located near the banks of Sawlog creek.

According to the story told here years ago a party of prospectors was returning from the western goldfields and was attacked and massacred by the Indians. Before the attack they cached all their metal. One of the men escaped more dead than alive and feared to return to seek his wealth for several years.

After the county had been settled by whites and the Indians safely herded upon reservations a stranger came to this community and without letting his errand be known spent many days digging along Buckner creek. His operations were always about the small mounds. He found nothing, it is declared, and told his story. Since that time hundreds have sought the gold but all of them searched the ground near Buckner creek. It is now believed that the prospector pined his search along the wrong stream and that his treasure

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

MORE DRILLING IN BUTLER CO. Tulsa Firm Prospects on New Leases—Interest Increasing.

Eldorado, Kan., Feb. 6.—Drilling for oil in the vicinity of Latham, in southeastern Butler county, is under way. A large acreage has been leased by a company from Tulsa, Ok., which is doing its own prospecting. Several holes are to be put down immediately.

The first well is on the H. T. Fromm farm just south of Latham. The people are anxious to have the land prospected and are leasing their land rapidly. The belief that rich oil fields exist in the hills east and south of Latham has been held for a long time—and now it is going to be tried out.

Oil in Ellis and Logan. Experienced Prospector Takes Leases and Will Drill Wells.

Russell, Kan., Feb. 6.—It is the belief of J. C. Noble, an oil and gas man for 36 years, that oil or gas or both may be found along the Smoky river in Logan and Ellis counties. He has recently taken a large number of leases in these counties and in return promises to sink several wells in the near future and make a thorough test of this section's underground resources.
