Sneakin' Back to Kansas

They're sneakin' back to Kansas, Reps, Dems Prohibs and Pops. They have heard the wondrous story of the world-surprising crops They have read it in the paper that the old Jaybawker State Is a passin' the procession at a mighty lively gait!! In her days of woe they shook her, gave it to her in the neck, Jest as rats out in the ocean'll desert a sink-in' wreck, But she weathered very breaker and she's right in the advance, But they're sneakin' back to Kansas as repentant immigrants, They're sneakin' back to Kansas, don't you see the rising dust? Don't you see the awkward mottoes, "Gif a Claim Agin or Bust!!" Don't you hear the jointin' wagons in the long and windin' trains Giflin' like enormous serpents o'er the spread-in' seas o' plains? Don't you hear the movers singin' song of soul-enthusing cheer? Don't you hear the whips a crackin' on the heated atmosphere? Don't you smell the fryin' bacon in the prairie camps at night? They're marchin' back to Kansas fur they're heard that she's all right. They're sneakin' back to Kansas: when they left her every tongue Was aglow with wild invective, jest the hottest ever sprung? They were talkin' of the hoppers and the murderous cyclones. An' the drought that dried the cattle till their hides stuck to their bones, Sazed her up 'long side of sheol, some quite ready to aver That the torrid realm of Satan wasn't in the game with her, Left their claims for anybody when they took the out'ard track, Now they're sneakin' back to Kansas, wishin' that they had 'em back! For the sun of tardy glory has arisen on the State, She is winnin' reputation most magnificently great! She's surprisin' all creation with her crops o' wheat and corn, An' her people are a tootin' of a load, triumphant horn! Seems that heaven overlooked her for a while in her less way, An' is making restitution in a most prolific play: Is a touchin' up the ranches in the brightest green and gold, An' there sneakin' back to Kansas like the prodigal of old. —Anon
